CHICAGO FIGHTS TRADE BARRIERS TO WEST COAST

Seeks Fast Hauls; Backs Waterway.

MAKE CHICAGO THE FIRST CITY IN THE WORLD

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Chicago's success in crashing a Chinese wall of freight rates at the Ohio river and opening a market in eleven southeastern states a few years back is now giving zest to efforts to increase trade with the Pacific coast. The struggle is to lessen the economic squeeze of the Panama canal upon industry of the central west.

Cheap water haul via the canal brought the Atlantic manufacturing seaboard closer to Pacific buyers. Years ago the central west realized it was in a nutcracker between coasts.

Policies of the Central West.

To ease the pressure, the efforts are:

1. To preserve the Illinois waterway, which gives a water route between the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico. Pending in Washington is the St. Lawrence treaty which threatens the Illinois waterway with insufficient water for navigation and which would give Canada joint control with the United States over Lake Michigan, an American lake.

2. To speed up freight movement to the Pacific coast.

In the last five or six years, two or three days have been cut from the transit time of package freight from Chicago to San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, and Seattle. Consignments now reach these cities, gateways to the orient, in seven days. It is urged six days would suffice.

Significance of Freight Rates.

Swifter delivery by rail, meaning reduced interest on goods in transit, it is held, will materially help to offset the Atlantic seaboard's advantage of low freight rates by water.

One of Chicago's business epics which few, perhaps, have heard sung, is the fifty year siege of the Chinese wall at the Ohio river, which blocked Chicago commerce from eleven states of the southeast. The city is somewhat over a century old, and during almost half its corporate existence it waged a struggle to get into this closed territory on equal terms with New England and the east.

Success in tearing down the wall is accounted the greatest single accomplishment of the Chicago Association of Commerce. J. P. Haynes, executive vice president of the association, led the fight. To change the metaphorical geography he was the Joshua when the walls of Jericho fell.

Post-Bellum Rail Situation.

After the civil war Louisville and other Ohio river cities and St. Louis had railroad outlets and became active competitors of the eastern seaboard for the southern markets. From colonial times these markets had been an outlet for manufactured products of New England and the east. To invade this rich southern territory, Cincinnati built its own railroad to Chattanooga. Still owned by Cincinnati, it is leased to the Southern railway.

Chicago, the great railroad center, was walled off. The Ohio river was the basing point for rail rates. Under these Chicago could not compete on an equitable basis with the North Atlantic, typified by New York and Boston, nor with the Ohio river cities. Early in the '80s Chicago took the discrimination into the courts, which held they could not act. Discriminations all over the country led in 1887 to the formation of the interstate commerce commission.

Ohio River Wall Crushed.

Constant warfare in which Chicago was prominent went on before this commission until 1922, when an agreement was reached between the railroads and the commercial interests to set up a new rate structure. It was to be predicated on the stipulation that the Chicago to Atlanta, Ga., freight charge be the same as the New York to Atlanta cost. Finally on Jan. 15, 1928, tarifs were established knocking out the Ohio river as a basing point.

Through first class freight rates from Chicago to Atlanta were made $1.91 a hundredweight, where they had been $2.38. The drop of 47 cents opened the southeast to Chicago.

"Transportation," says Mr. Haynes, "is the lifeblood of Chicago, but it requires equable freight rates and fast service to escape hardening of the arteries."

PREACHER'S CRY OF 'CONFESSION' UPSETS TRIAL

Interrupts Wilentz's Death Plea.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—An astounding scene caused an uproar at the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann late today as Attorney General David T. Wilentz demanded the death penalty for the defendant.

The prosecutor had characterized Hauptmann as "the vilest snake that ever crept through the grass" when a man in clerical garb, standing amidst the crowd at one side of the courtroom, raised his voice.

"Your honor, please," he called in a clear, high voice. Wilentz, interrupted, swung around. He started to protest.

Judge Thomas W. Trenchard said swiftly:

"Let the police stop that man before he says anything!"

Troopers Rush Speaker.

Troopers rushed for the man.

"A man confessed——" he had shouted when hands were clapped over his mouth. He was lifted bodily and carried from the court. Those near him heard him complete his sentence.

"A man confessed this crime to me in church!" he exclaimed.

There was a roar from the 1,500 persons wedged into a courtroom meant to accommodate 500. Judge Trenchard pounded vainly for order. The jurors looked startled. Attorneys for both state and defense were yelling objections and motions before the bar.

Questioned in an antechamber, the man gave his name as the Rev. Vincent Burns, a minister with no denomination, having resigned from the Presbyterian church a year ago.

He operates a "free lance" church at Fort Lee, N. J., he said, and added that he is a brother of Robert Burns, the chain gang convict who won much notoriety for escaping from the gang and writing the book "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang."

He finally was permitted to go home in the custody of state police. Any charges against him will be tried after the Hauptmann case is disposed of, it was announced.

Neither Side Asks Mistrial.

Back in the courtroom, the lawyers huddled before the bench. Neither side wished to ask for a mistrial because of the incident, it developed.

Police and bailifs circulated through the crowd and some order finally was restored. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the child for whose murder Hauptmann is being tried, whispered excitedly to his legal adviser and friend, Col. Henry Breckinridge.

Hauptmann was the least disturbed of any one in the courtroom. On several occasions during the day he had heard Wilentz charge that ice water ran in his veins, and his demeanor at this time seemed to support the prosecutor's statement.

The German ex-convict looked around curiously at the excited and jabbering persons around him, shrugged his shoulders and moodily regarded his clasped hands in his lap.

Judge Advises Jurors.

Finally Wilentz addressed the court: "Both sides feel," he said, "that the jury probably did not hear the remark made by this man. We ask, of course, that if they did hear anything they disregard it."

Defense Lawyer Edward J. Reilly, his florid countenance very solemn, nodded his agreement with this statement.

Judge Trenchard said gravely to the jurors:

"It is very unfortunate that this scene had to occur or did occur. I do not imagine that the jury heard what this man said. If perchance you did hear it, you are instructed to disregard it utterly and forget the scene."

Jury to Get Case Today.

He added that he had expected to charge the jury and give the case into their hands today, but that the hour was late and he would postpone

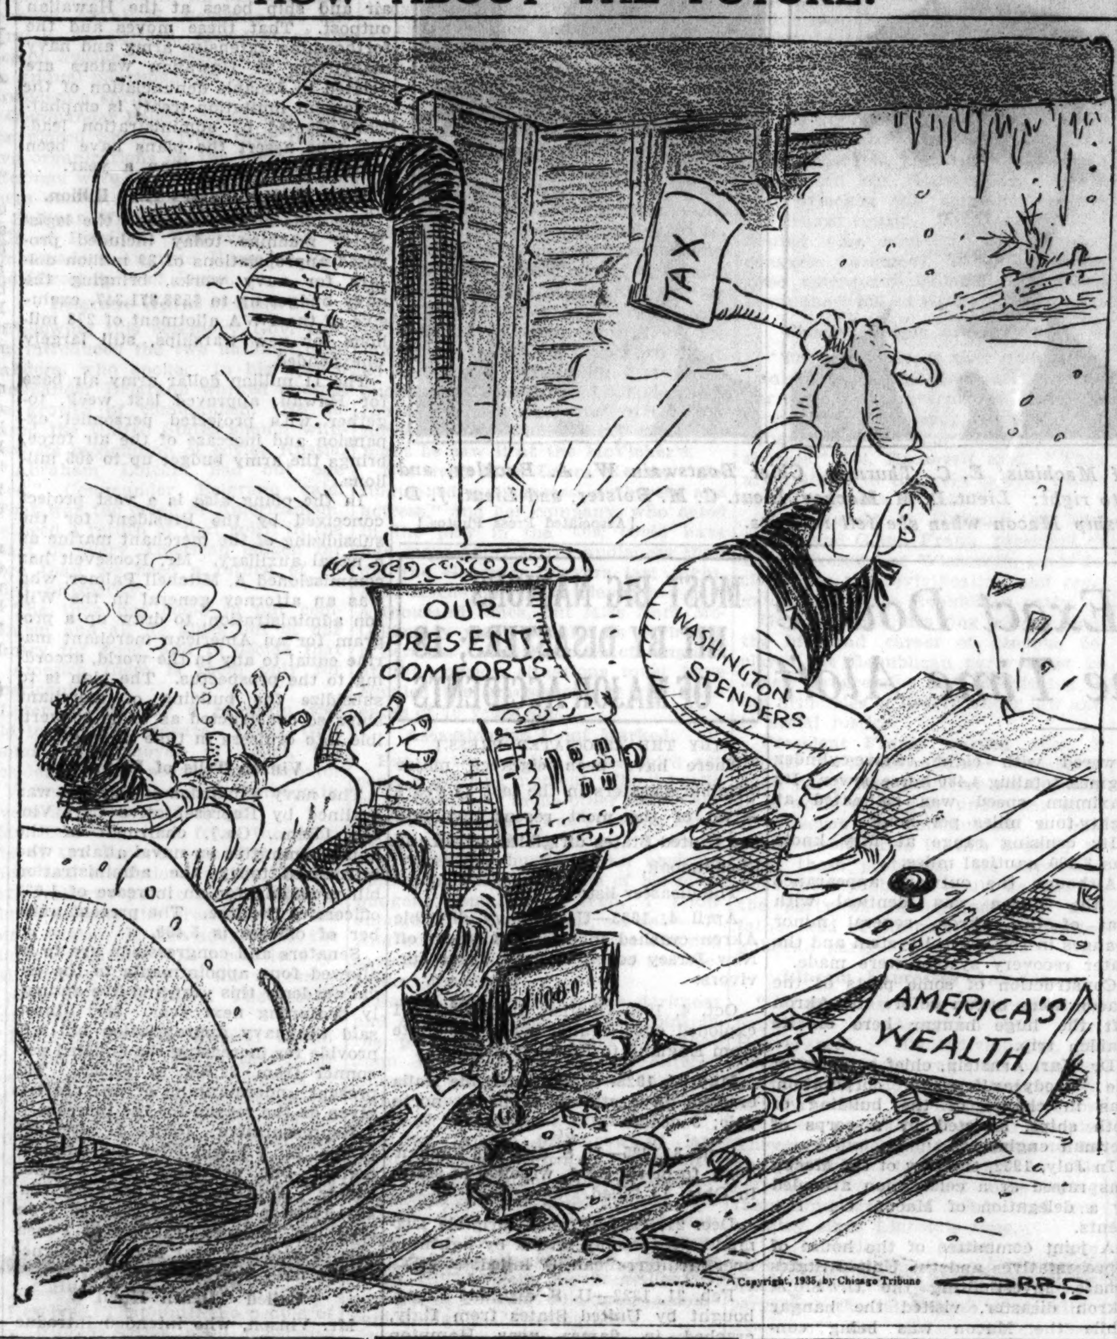
HOW ABOUT THE FUTURE?



Ethiopia Defies Italy's Demand for Indemnity

BY DAVID DARAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Feb. 12. — While two divisions of Premier Mussolini's soldiers today awaited sailing orders for "somewhere east of Suez," Emperor Haile Selassie I. of Ethiopia instructed his envoy here to make public a communication branding as false all of Italy's claims that Ethiopia was the aggressor in the recent border clashes in Africa and breathing defiance to Italy's demands for satisfaction.

Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian chargé d'affaires, declared Ethiopia would not pay the $44,900 indemnity demanded for the deaths of Italian colonials nor meet the "harsh" demands of Italy. He said far more Abyssinians than Italians had died in the clashes.

The satisfaction demanded by Italy is believed to be a salute to the Italian flag in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia; a neutralized zone along the frontiers of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, from which all Ethiopian troops would be withdrawn; final definition of the borders, and stronger control by Emperor Haile Selassie's government over the warlike border tribes.

Shaking Mailed Fist.

Italy's mobilization of reserves continues, but to all appearances here Mussolini's shaking of the mailed fist has slowed down to a diplomatic threat, the object of which, for the moment at least, is to force Haile Selassie into direct negotiations to settle the dispute.

Though the two divisions of troops and other auxiliaries who, together, make up about 40,000 men, are at embarkation ports, it was confirmed tonight that not a single soldier had yet left Italy. War office officials were anxious to emphasize that for the moment any punitive measures against the Ethiopians were of a police nature and that no operations which would entail the occupation of Ethiopia were involved at present.

(Other sources said Italy will launch its punitive expedition on Feb. 16.)

The government gave out a communique saying that Sir Sidney Barton, British minister to Addis Ababa, was entreating with the emperor to negotiate directly with the Italians and not through the league of nations. Sir Eric Drummond, the British ambassador to Rome, was informed by Mussolini that the Italian mobilization is "purely precautionary."

It was indicated in the press tonight that the Italians want to push the frontier of Italian Somaliland about 93 miles into Ethiopia, so as to include the water wells and the rich farm lands. A map printed in Corriere della Sera shows the new tentative boundary line. The Ethiopians are concentrated in this district, which includes the towns of Ualual and Afdub, scenes of incidents in the last two months.

The communication Haile Selassie sent to his envoy said in straightforward language that the Ethiopian garrison at Gerlogubi, near where the latest Italo-Ethiopian clash occurred, had not at any time "made any sally or attempt against the Italian garrison at Afdub."

"The conflict Jan. 29 near Gerlogubi involved twenty-five Ethiopians armed simply with rifles, who were suddenly attacked by an Italian band armed with machine guns after various reconnaisance flights by Italian airplanes over Gerlogubi," the emperor's statement said.

Deny Afdub Incident.

The message also categorically denied that there could have been any attempt by the Ethiopian garrison to surround Afdub, since that post was evacuated at the time the supposed attempt took place.

Haile Selassie directed his envoy to make public this cable before presenting it to the Italian government. Yesus will deliver the text to Mussolini tomorrow. Italian officials hearing of it tonight said that by this message Ethiopia had flung down the gauntlet of resistance to the threat of the Italian troop mobilization.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon Premier Mussolini dramatically assembled and presided over his supreme council of defense. Gen. Italo Balbo, former minister of air, but more recently governor of Libya, was present.

RELIGIOUS LITERATURE BARRED FROM MAILS BY MEXICAN DECREE

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 12.—Religious literature will be barred from the mails by Mexico under a decree published by President Cardenas today.

The decree stresses that the postal service is one of the most powerful means for the spreading of culture and that it should not be allowed to transmit ideas "contrary to the development of the national culture."

One of the three biggest Mexican labor organizations cabled today to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expressing entire agreement with President Cardenas' policies. It charged that numerous agencies are attempting "to poison the minds of American workers against the Mexican government." The clergy and capitalists were accused of leading the movement.

Bandit Killed by Policeman in Cafe Battle

Twenty terror stricken patrons of Thompson's restaurant at 111 East Chicago avenue looked on early today as Lincoln Park Policeman Carl Carlson and a robber fought a pistol battle that ended with the bandit dead, a bullet through his heart.

Shortly after 2 a. m. the robber entered the restaurant and, approaching the desk, commanded the 60 year old cashier, Maurice Barrett, 164 West Grand avenue, to surrender the cash. Barrett, looking into the barrel of a pistol, complied and handed over $35.

Cashier Grapples Bandit.

The robber turned to leave, but as he did so Barrett stepped quickly around the end of the counter and grappled with him. Startled, the man fired twice, one of his bullets passing through the cashier's coat without wounding him. Then, tossing Barrett aside, the gunman fled toward the door.

Policeman Carlson, standing at Chicago and Michigan avenues, had heard the two shots fired. Drawing his own pistol he ran to the entrance of the restaurant. At close range he fired several times. One of his bullets struck the robber in the chest and two others in the body.

Falls Dead from Bullet.

He fell on the floor, just inside the door, after he had fired once at the policeman. One of the patrons related that the bandit, just before he breathed his last, said thickly: "I can't take it."

The police took the man to the Passavant hospital, but he was pronounced dead there. Policeman Carlson took the ill-gotten $35 from the body. In the pockets of the victim, who was well dressed, were papers indicating that he might be Paul Cherry of Gary or Chesterton, Ind. He was about 26 years old.

FOUR HURT WHEN MADISON STREET SIDEWALK FALLS

Four persons were injured late last night when a section of sidewalk in front of the Progress Furniture and Carpet company store at 1247 West Madison street gave way under their weight and precipitated them into the basement.

Mrs. Mary Baeza, 32 years old, 225 South Racine avenue, who suffered a possible fracture of the skull, was taken to St. Luke's hospital. The others hurt are her daughter Abigail, 11 years old; her son Oscar, 10 years old, and Mrs. Lucille Ramos, 19 years old, 331 South Racine avenue.

The Doc Turns on Magnetism: Zip! Go the Ills

BY BARBARA ADAMS.

"Dr." Robert A. [Rad] De Lisle, psychic, astrologist, palmist, unlicensed chiropractor and osteopath, and "physical and mental healer," who was arrested Monday in the department of registration and education's campaign to rid the city of quacks, claims that he can "cure anybody of anything" by his magnetism alone, a TRIBUNE reporter learned.

Old Doc De Lisle was released on $4,000 bonds and will be arraigned at 9:30 a. m. today in the License court of Municipal Judge Eugene Holland, room No. 1128, city hall, on charges of violating the state medical practice act. "Prof" James P. O'Donovan, "personality boy" mesmerist and hypnotist, who is at liberty on bonds of $2,000, is also scheduled for a hearing today on similar charges in Judge Holland's court.

"Dr." Success De Lisle, wife and helpmeet of Old Doc De Lisle, agrees that his powers are mysterious and mighty. They share offices at 20 East Jackson boulevard, where the TRIBUNE reporter consulted the doc in what he called his "physical culture school."

Versatility in This "Healing."

Despite his psychic powers, "Dr." De Lisle, who says he is half Indian, an old pal of Sitting Bull, and a crack rifle shot, does not leave everything to magnetism and thought waves.

After reading the reporter's palm, studying her fingers, analyzing her handwriting, presenting her with a pamphlet on astrology and giving a little free-hand astrological advice, his eyes behind their pince-nez regarded her from head to toe. He then diagnosed her ailments and recommended his "body adjustment" treatments.

"I have tremendous 'odic' force," said Doc De Lisle simply, stroking his sparse, graying goatee and sticking his thumbs in the armholes of his vest. "It's electricity, same as the cosmic ray. It comes out of my hands in great currents.

"I don't care what's the matter with a person, I can just put my hands on him and that old magnetism is enough to cure him. Of course, I use mental suggestion, too. I'm a mental doctor and a physical doctor, a drugless healer, but not a medical doctor.

Gives His Own Recommendation.

"The doctors of Chicago know about my work, of course," he continued. "Lots of them come to me. They know I can do more for them than they can do for themselves."

The reporter had obtained the name of "Dr." De Lisle from the American Psychic council, 72 West Washington street, in whose offices he formerly shared space. She called him on the telephone and asked if he gave "readings." He did, for $1, he said. His sales talk on his powers of healing came in the midst of the "reading."

Her palm and her writing showed clearly that she was not always appreciated, Doc De Lisle told the reporter gently. But HE would appreciate her, he promised. Then, bringing all his psychic powers to bear on her, the "Doctor" regarded the reporter with compassion.

"I know you just like a book," he said. "The trouble with you, my

81 ON DIRIGIBLE MACON SAVED; 2 ARE MISSING

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Maintaining rigid navy discipline in the face of death, 81 of the 83 crew members of the dirigible Macon were rescued tonight after sudden disaster, caused by crumbling of the ship's stern, plunged the big airship into the ocean 110 miles south of here.

Lieutenant Commander Herbert V. Wiley, skipper of the $4,000,000 queen of the skies, and other crew members were picked up by the cruiser Concord, while the cruiser Richmond and the Cincinnati also aided in saving the men.

Only two men were reported missing after nearby navy ships, which had been engaged in maneuvers with the Macon, raced to the scene of the disaster.

Radio Operator Missing.

Commander Wiley, in a message sent from the Concord after his rescue, described the disaster as having been caused by the giving away of two gas bags and the crumbling of the ship's stern.

The ship was flying at an altitude of 1,250 feet, he said, when disaster overtook it.

His graphic account of the disaster was given briefly.

"While off Point Sur, a course north, all engines' standard speed 63 knots; altitude 1,250 feet; air squally; about 5:18 a casualty occurred in stern," he reported.

Two Gas Cells Gone.

"Ordered all ballast and fuel slip tanks dropped aft of midships. Received prompt word No. 1 gas cell under fins was gone and stern was crumbling, and finally that No. 2 [illegible] 1 was gone.

"Tried to land ship near cruisers off Point Sur, but could not see surface until shortly before landing.

"The ship landed stern first with no way on (no speed ahead) at 5:40. All hands took to rubber boats and saw ship finally sink. Discipline excellent and all hands had alarm in time to don life jackets."

Thrilling Rescues Made.

Sixty-four survivors were picked up by the cruiser Richmond, the Concord took 11 aboard, and the Cincinnati saved six in thrilling rescues.

Admiral J. M. Reeves, commander in chief of the United States fleet, wirelessed naval radio headquarters here late tonight:

"The Macon, due to an accident the details of which are at present not available, sank about 5:35 p. m., 13 miles southeast of Point Sur."

The commander in chief then confirmed that 81 of the 83 men aboard the airship had been picked up by nearby naval vessels. He added there were no serious injuries.

A message from Rear Admiral C. E. Courtney of the rescue cruiser Richmond described how one of the two missing men had leaped 125 feet before the airship struck and how the other was last seen inside the craft.

Dailey leaped 125 feet, the message said, while Quinday was last seen inside the ship.

Navy Ships Speed to Scene.

From all directions the grey navy ships sped to their fellow sailors as the Sunnyvale base messaged that Commander Wiley had stated the Macon had gone under the waves.

The flagship of the fleet, the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, shortly sent a message saying:

"Macon survivors located. Assistance no longer needed."

Boats went overside from the rescuing ships and the cruiser Richmond then messaged:

"Richmond has on board 64 survivors, Cincinnati six and Concord 11."

"Apparently Dailey, the radio operator, and Edquiba, mess attendant, only two missing," said a later message.

Apparently the ship remained afloat only a short time after striking the water. A report saying the Macon floated three hours apparently was garbled in receipt.

Offers No Opinion.

Admiral Thomas J. Senn, commandant of the 12th naval district here, said he was without official word as to the exact cause of the disaster, and declined to voice an opinion.

"I have nothing but the highest praise for the splendid rescue work by the fleet in this catastrophe," Admiral Senn declared.

The admiral ordered a patrol to start at dawn to cover the ocean 20 miles north and south of Point Sur.

The fact that the sea off Point Sur was smooth, although rain was falling and the sky was cloudy, was held responsible for aiding the navy in its quick rescue.

The Macon was 785 feet long, compared with 776 feet of the Graf Zeppelin, German dirigible. It was equipped with an orderly arrangement of longitudinal and transverse framing, made of light aluminum alloy materials, stoutly braced to withstand the racking of strong air currents.

It carried five airplanes in its hull and was equipped with a "sky basket" which could be lowered 3,000 feet to observe operations of ships on the ocean.

The rescue of Commander Wiley, only officer to survive the 1933 plunge of the airship Akron, fatal to seventy-three men, was announced in a message approximately three hours after the mishap.

First Saved by Concord.

Lieutenant Commander Jesse L. Kenneworthy, executive officer of the airship, was rescued along with Wiley and nine others, the destroyer Concord reported. They were in the first of the rescuing lifeboats to reach the Concord.

"Bad casualty," said the first warning of the impending disaster, which added the ship was "falling."

Then came the final S O S call, saying:

"Will abandon ship as soon as we land on the water somewhere twenty miles off Point Sur, probably ten miles at sea."

Wireless calls flashed between the navy ships in the immediate vicinity and they turned about rapidly.

The U. S. S. Relief, hospital ship, was ordered under full speed from San Diego to Point Sur to aid the survivors.

Only the nearby presence of the navy ships prevented a major loss of life, navy men said.

The sea off Point Sur, a rocky ledge jutting into the ocean, was smooth and rain was falling.

Night Closes Down Quickly.

Fog overhung the sky when the Macon was stricken and after it hit the water night closed down rapidly, concealing the wreckage and survivors until searchlights pierced the gloom.

Then the red glare of the rocket directed the rescue ships.

It was observed first by the flagship Pennsylvania and soon afterward the battleship Maryland sighted the Macon.

The airship apparently fell from an altitude of 1,500 feet, the Point Sur lighthouse keeper reported, then regained its equilibrium, only to fall again.

The airship was observed cruising through the skies, its bulk outlined above lowering fog, by the lighthouse keeper at Point Sur. He said it was falling, then seemed to be "blown up into the air."

The Macon, empress of all man's sky ships, arrived Oct. 15, 1933, at her home base here, after completing a 70 hour transcontinental flight from Lakehurst, N. J.

The journey, which took the dirigible over the southern tier of states to San Diego, then northward along the coast to Sunnyvale, was "made without the slightest mishap," Commander A. H. Dresel declared.

More than 30,000 persons were at the dirigible base to greet the ship.

Sinks in 50 Fathoms.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 13 [Wednesday].—(AP)—The navy department plans no attempt to recover the wreckage of the lost Macon.

A dispatch received at the department this morning from Commander in Chief Admiral Reeves said:

BROTHER ON ILL-FATED MACON.

Lieut. A. L. Danis, weather observer who was on the airship Macon when it fell into the Pacific last night, is a brother of Raymond S. Danis, 7708 Oglesby avenue. He is 37 years old and is a graduate of the Naval academy, to which he was appointed from South Dakota in 1918. He was assigned to the Macon when it was first commissioned.

Macon Almost Exact Double for Akron; Same Time Aloft

Akron, O., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The U. S. S. Macon, a sister ship of the ill-fated Akron, made its maiden flight April 21, 1933, from the hangar in which it was constructed here.

In June, 1933, the huge ship successfully bucked high winds over Lake Erie on one of its trial flights with ninety persons aboard. For hours it soared above the ports while the wind rose to galelike proportions. Although considerable apprehension was felt for the ship, its officers reported they had been in no difficulty.

By a strange coincidence the dirigible Macon had spent almost the same number of hours in the air as the Akron, which was wrecked in a disaster off the New Jersey coast April 4, 1933.

Both ships had spent approximately seven thousand hours aloft when they were overtaken by disaster.

Construction of the Macon was authorized Oct. 21, 1933, giving employment to about eight hundred persons here.

The ship is 146.5 feet high and is powered with eight twelve-cylinder engines, totaling 4,480 horse power. Its maximum speed was estimated at eighty-four miles per hour.

Its cruising range at fifty knots was 3,200 nautical miles.

Although the outward appearance of the Macon was identical with that of the Akron, several minor changes in the control system and the water recovery system were made.

Construction of some parts of the Macon were begun before the Akron left the huge hangar here on its maiden trip.

Dr. Karl Arnstein, chief engineer of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation, was in charge of the building of both ships, assisted by a corps of German engineers.

In July, 1932, the bow of the Macon was raised at a celebration attended by a delegation of Macon, Ga., residents.

A joint committee of the house of representatives and the United States senate, investigating the U. S. S. Akron disaster, visited the hangar while the Macon was being constructed. The committee later submitted a report on its faith in lighter than air craft.

OCEAN TRAGEDY RADIO VETERAN IS SPARED CALL

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Tonight was one night tragedy at sea did not strike while Radioman J. J. Puhlick of coast guard communications was on duty.

Through him flashed one of the first messages of the fall of the Akron, in 1933.

He was on duty the nights the Morro Castle, the Lexington, and the Mohawk met disaster at sea and handled the flood of messages that each of those tragedies entailed.

MOST BIG NATIONS HIT BY DISASTERS; 18 OF MAJOR ACCIDENTS

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

There have been eighteen major dirigible disasters in the last 23 years—two of the most recent involving the United States dirigibles Akron and Shenandoah.

The disaster list:

April 4, 1933—U. S. navy dirigible Akron crashed in electrical storm off New Jersey coast; 73 dead, three survivors.

Oct. 4, 1930—British dirigible R-101 exploded over France while en route from England to India; 46 dead.

Sept. 3, 1925—U. S. dirigible Shenandoah, formerly ZR-1, wrecked in storm in Ohio; 14 killed.

Dec. 21, 1923—French dirigible Dixmude, presumably struck by lightning over Mediterranean; 52 killed.

Feb. 21, 1922—U. S. dirigible Roma, bought by United States from Italy, crashed in flames near Hampton Roads army base; 34 killed.

Aug. 24, 1921—Dirigible ZR-2, bought in England for United States, frame buckled over Humber river; 42 killed.

Jan. 29, 1921—British dirigible R-34, wrecked in gale in Howden, England; no lives lost.

July 21, 1919—Dirigible burned over Chicago; 10 killed.

July 15, 1919—British airship NS-11 struck by lightning over North sea; 12 killed.

July 2, 1912—Balloon Akron exploded at Atlantic City; 5 killed.

[Besides the Zeppelins L-1 and LA-2, Count Zeppelin lost four other great peace time dirigibles in accidents, the Zeppelins 3 and 6 and the Deutschlands 1 and 2.]

NEW BILLS SEND DEFENSE BUDGET OVER A BILLION

Navy Additions Provided in Legislation.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—With the initiation of administration approved legislation for increasing naval personnel and strengthening naval shore establishments, particularly in Hawaii and the Panama Canal Zone, projected national defense expenditures for the next fiscal year have passed the billion dollar mark.

This program envisages a first line of defense extending from Alaska through the Hawaiian Islands to the Panama canal, with greatly increased army and navy forces and expanded air and ship bases at the Hawaiian outpost. That these moves and the forthcoming extensive army and navy maneuvers in Hawaiian waters are related to Japan's denunciation of the armament limitation treaty is emphatically denied by administration leaders, who assert the plans have been maturing for more than a year.

Navy Budget Passes Half Billion.

The bills started through the legislative machine today included proposed appropriations of 39 million dollars for navy works, bringing the navy budget up to $528,871,347, exclusive of the PWA allotment of 278 millions for new warships, still largely unexpended.

The 11 million dollar army air base for Hawaii, approved last week, together with projected personnel expansion and increase of the air force, brings the army budget up to 405 millions.

In the offing also is a vast project conceived by the President for the subsidizing of the merchant marine as a naval auxiliary. Mr. Roosevelt has commissioned A. Mitchell Palmer, who was an attorney general in the Wilson administration, to draw up a program for an American merchant marine equal to any in the world, according to the prospectus. The plan is to subsidize the building of merchant ships so constructed as to be convertible into cruisers in time of war.

Vinson Tells of Plan.

The navy expansion legislation was outlined by Representative Carl Vinson [Dem., Ga.], chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, who introduced today the administration bill providing for an increase of 1,032 officers of the line. The present number of officers is 5,499.

Senators and congressmen are to be allowed four appointments to the naval academy this year and five annually beginning next year. Mr. Vinson said the navy appropriation bill will provide for increasing the enlisted personnel from 82,500 to 93,500. The present undermanning of war craft is given as the reason for the increase.

Representative John J. Delaney [Dem., N. Y.] will offer the administration bill providing for aviation cadets. This measure proposes that 498 aviation cadets be selected from civil life, undergo training at Pensacola, Fla., for a year and be assigned to the navy for three years.

Called "Death Knell."

Mr. Vinson, who intended introducing a bill allotting 5 million dollars for the construction of two dirigibles, upon hearing of the Macon mishap said that the accident would likely mean the "death knell" of the navy's lighter than air craft experiments.

The 38 million dollar navy public works bill provides for expanding both Pacific and Atlantic shore establishments, but contains no item for reopening the Great Lakes Naval Training station. Senator James Hamilton Lewis [Dem., Ill.] will seek to amend the bill with an appropriation of $367,000 for this purpose.

ABANDON 2 NEW BOY BABIES; ONE BOUND, GAGGED

Two baby boys, one just two hours old, the other a week old, were found abandoned last evening. The first baby was found in the entrance to an apartment building at 4830 Drexel boulevard. Sergts. Joseph Lynch and Erskine Hill took it to St. Vincent's orphanage, where the baby was found none the worse for its experience.

Miss Dorothy Davis, 1010 South 5th avenue, Maywood, agent in the 11th avenue station of the Westchester branch of the Chicago Rapid Transit Lines, found the other baby, wrapped in newspaper tied on with cloth. A piece of cotton was stuffed in its mouth to prevent any outcry.

Miss Davis said she heard an automobile stop at the station platform a minute, then speed away. She went outside and found the child lying on a bench. Policemen took it to the West Lake hospital, where it was placed in an incubator.

CHINESE CAPTURE TOWN; JAPANESE TROOPS RUSHED

TOKIO, Feb 13 [Wednesday].—(AP)—A strong force of Chinese, described as "bandits," attacked and captured the town of Ehrtaohotze, a station on the Chinese Eastern railway in Manchukuo, Rengo [Japanese] News agency dispatches from Harbin said today.

The scene of trouble was almost in the center of the Japanese advised state of Manchukuo, southeast of Harbin. Japanese troops were hurrying to the place from two points.

Troop commanders chartered an eastbound international train near Acheng, outside the trouble zone, the dispatches said. The troops were hurriedly gathered from Maoehrshan and Acheng.

ROOSEVELT GETS MACON DETAILS AT NAVY OFFICE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt tonight personally obtained first hand information on the Macon's casualty off the Pacific coast by phoning to the naval communications headquarters on receiving reports that the dirigible had met with disaster.

Meantime, high ranking officials of the department, notified of the disaster, rushed to department headquarters to get details.

Members of congress, already interested in aeronautics through the long controversy over the practicability of airships for naval use, repeatedly called newspaper offices for information.

EX-DUCHESS OF LEINSTER, ONCE CHORUS GIRL, DIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The checkered career of May Etheridge, once famous "gayety girl" and toast of the town, and divorced wife of the duke of Leinster, ended tragically in a small bungalow at Saltdean, near Brighton, Sussex, yesterday. She had been living in obscurity there with her mother since September under the name of May Murray.

Last Friday her mother found her unconscious in bed. A bottle which contained a sleeping draught was almost empty by her side. Doctors could not save her life. At the inquest tonight, the coroner returned a verdict of death by misadventure, observing that he did not think the deceased had taken an overdose of the sleeping draught with the intention of killing herself.

It was at the height of her stage career in 1913 that Miss Etheridge met the duke of Leinster and then married him. The couple separated about a decade ago. In 1930 the duchess was rescued from a gas filled room and subsequently charged with attempting to commit suicide. She was placed on probation. Two months later the duke obtained a divorce, and in 1932 married Mrs. Raffaele Van Neck, an American beauty.

At tonight's inquest, Mrs. Etheridge told how her daughter worried over her son, with whom she was only able to communicate through solicitors.

MACON SKIPPER SHOUTED FINAL AKRON COMMAND

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander Herbert V. Wiley, skipper of the airship Macon, was the man who shouted the last command to the crew of the doomed Akron.

Split seconds before the airship dived into the sea off Barnegat Light, N. J., in April, 1933, the gray-haired airman spoke the now famous words: "Stand by for a crash."

A wave saved Wiley's life.

He was washed out a window of the control car and swam—with the aid of a board—to the lightship.

It was Wiley who told the dramatic story of the ship's sudden drop into a turbulent sea.

"I gave the order to stand by," Wiley said.

Wiley, then 42 years old, was the second in command. A brief tour of sea duty followed the Barnegat experience, and several months ago he was ordered to captain the Macon.

He had been in lighter than air craft since 1923.

CIVIL WAR VETS PAY IMPRESSIVE TRIBUTE TO CHIEF

Lincoln Day Is Observed by Myriad Groups.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Seventeen civil war veterans gathered in Memorial hall of the Chicago Public library yesterday to revere the memory of Abraham Lincoln, their commander in chief in the great conflict, on his 126th birthday anniversary. The veterans were from among the 56 survivors of the Grand Army of the Republic in Cook county.

Elsewhere in the city the birth date of Lincoln was widely observed, his qualities as a statesman, individualist, prophet, humanist, and peacemaker were praised in many a gathering of women's clubs, patriotic societies, professional groups, and character building organizations.

The Heart of the Observance.

In Memorial hall, however, took place the most colorful ceremony of all. The aged veterans, their white hair a contract to their blue army uniforms, sat in quiet rows beneath Lincoln's flag draped portrait, hummed with the Calumet High school R. O. T. C. band a medley of campaign songs of the '60s, and heard their speakers pay tribute to their immortal leader.

Their presiding officer, George Mason, 95 years old, said:

"We are gathered once more to honor one of the greatest men the world has ever seen. In a few days we will observe the birthday of George Washington, the father of our country, but today we celebrate the birthday of the father of the people, Father Abraham. Our hearts go out to him, those of us who have recollection of that great man."

The Gettysburg Address.

Other speakers included Thomas Ambrose, vice president of the Grand Army Hall and Memorial association, and Dr. John W. Holland, radio pastor. But to the veterans the annual recitation of Lincoln's Gettysburg address by Charles W. Beam, 87 years old, chaplain of the George H. Thomas post, called for the most applause. Then came taps by the Park Ridge post of the American Legion.

The only colored veteran present was James H. Lewis, 89 years old, 4409 Federal street, who as a boy 15 years old was permitted to slip into the Wigwam here where he says he saw Lincoln in the convention that nominated him for the presidency. Later, Lewis relates, "I served him in his army."

Lincoln was described as an idealist, a great patriot, with his greatest motive a unified country, peaceful and happy, by the Rev. C. Claude Travis, pastor of the Gates Memorial church, Wheaton, in a talk in the Blackstone hotel before the Dearborn chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

An Old World Appraisal.

A European view of Lincoln was expressed in the Chicago Woman's club's good will program by Giuseppe Castruccio, Italian consul general.

"Lincoln," he said, "had that kind of patriotism which was reverence for his country, love for his people, and respect for his flag. It was not that kind of patriotism which breds a superior complex or thrives on hatred of other people."

At a luncheon of the Chicago Bar association Judge John C. Lewe of the Criminal court spoke on Lincoln's life at New Salem. Last night in the Humboldt Park Methodist Episcopal Community church, 1715 North Fairfield avenue, "Civic Righteousness" formed the topic of several speakers.

Plan Memorial Garden.

The Garden Club of Illinois announced yesterday it was sponsoring an Abraham Lincoln memorial garden of forty acres to be started within a few weeks in Springfield.

In accordance with a custom of many years Boy Scouts of the north shore and northwest districts laid a wreath at the Lincoln statue in Lincoln park, North avenue near Clark street.

ECONOMIC GAINS IN NURSING FIELD TOLD AT SESSION

Marked improvement in the economic situation of nurses in the Chicago area was reported last night by Miss Lenore Tobins, R. N., president of the First district of the Illinois State Nurses' association. In a report presented before 700 persons at the annual dinner of the district organization at the Congress hotel Miss Tobins declared economic improvement within the profession had been attained despite an overcrowded field. The number of nurses in the nation has multiplied 2,374 per cent since 1900, she said, while the population has increased only 62 per cent.

A total of 17,124 cases was handled during the year from the registry maintained by the organization, an increase of 4,167 over 1933, the report showed. Of this total, Miss Tobins stated, 193 cases are on record where nurses voluntarily spent their own money on carfare and laundry to go to a sick child, knowing beforehand that they would not be paid. Many other instances were reported in which nurses refused to leave a patient they considered too ill to be left with amateur help, even though no money was available to pay them.

Seek Cause of Blaze Fatal to Four in Family

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Authorities today were investigating a fire which caused the deaths by suffocation of four members of one family and sent two other members to a hospital last night. The dead, all residents of suburban Norwood were Hugh Mitchell, 33, salesman; his son James, 2½; his sister Mrs. Freda Doerger, 29, and the latter' daughter Mary, 5.

Last of Lincoln Bodyguards Calls on President Roosevelt

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—A 93 year old Pennsylvanian, only survivor of President Lincoln's last bodyguard, was received at the White House by President Roosevelt today. The aged veteran was William Henry Gilbert of Craley, Pa., one of six Union soldiers who guarded Lincoln's coffin at Philadelphia, where the body lay in state before being taken to Illinois for burial.

Asks Renewal of Faith.

The house of representatives heard a new member—Representative Blackney [Rep., Mich.]—call Lincoln "the savior of his country and its constitution."

Recalling Lincoln's attitude toward the constitution, the speaker asked:

"In those days, when old landmarks are being removed and when we are inclined to look slightingly upon many of the great principles of this government of ours, should we not pause and give heed to the words of Lincoln and renew our faith to our government and to our constitution?"

Dedicate Lincoln Library.

Hodgenville, Ky., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The 126th anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln today was chosen by citizens of this little Kentucky town, his birthplace, for the dedication of a Lincoln memorial public library.

Recall Lincoln's Anxiety.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Two recently discovered dispatches of Abraham Lincoln asking news of troop movements against Washington were recalled today. They were to John W. Garrett, then president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

The first, dated July 5, 1864, said:

"You say telegraphic communications reëstablished with Sandy Hook. Well, what does Sandy Hook say about operations of enemy—of Sigel doing today?"

Sandy Hook was a railroad station a mile east of Harper's Ferry. "Sigel" was Gen. Franz Sigel, in command of troops at Maryland Heights, guarding the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers junction.

Gen. Lew Wallace [author of "Ben-Hur"] had warned Lincoln Gen. Jubal A. Early was marching through Maryland on Baltimore with 20,000 confederate troops.

There was nothing to show an answer.

Makes Another Inquiry.

The second dispatch was sent July 9, 1864, the day the battle of the Monocacy was fought.

"What have you heard about a battle at Monocacy today? We have nothing about it here except what you say," Lincoln wired to Garrett.

At that time the confederates had defeated Wallace at the Monocacy river, 19 miles east of Harper's Ferry. Wallace held out, however, until federal reinforcements came. Gen. U. S. Grant later asserted that stand was one of the main factors in saving Washington.

CHICAGO PASSES 2D DAY WITHOUT AUTO FATALITY

Chicago and Cook county yesterday passed the second successive day without an automobile fatality. The total deaths this year in the county remained at 96, and in the city at 81. The number of injuries in the city this year stood at 1,661.

Thomas Hynes, 21 years old, 9237 South Laflin street, a clerk, whose automobile was involved in a collision Sunday which cost the life of Michael McKenna, 35 years old, 6345 South Hermitage avenue, a passenger in his car, surrendered yesterday at the inquest. By recommendation of the coroner's jury he was held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter. Police said Hynes fled after the accident.

Thirty-five passengers on a westbound Chicago avenue street car were jolted early yesterday when an automobile struck it near Leavitt street. Joseph Florian, 42 years old, of Downers Grove, driver of the car, was taken to St. Mary's hospital with serious injuries. Police blamed the wet pavement for the accident.

CHIEF OF LEGION ASKS RENEWAL OF RUSSIAN BAN

Speaks with Governor at Tomb of Lincoln.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Under a sunny sky in tranquil Oak Ridge cemetery a reverent throng gathered today before the tomb of Abraham Lincoln to pay tribute to the Great Emancipator on the 126th anniversary of his birth.

A few of the army that Lincoln commanded were there. In greater numbers were members of the American Legion which, with its national commander, Frank N. Belgrano Jr., and Mrs. A. C. Carlson, president of the Legion auxiliary, present, inaugurated an annual pilgrimage to the martyred President's shrine.

Commander Belgrano and Mrs. Carlson placed wreaths from their respective organizations on the tomb. Their offerings were laid beside wreaths put there earlier in the day by Capt. M. F. Sullivan, United States army, on behalf of President Roosevelt, and by Ambassadors Augusto Rosso of Italy and Hirosi Saito of Japan.

Belgrano Warns of Reds.

Following this ceremony Gov. Horner introduced the two national commanders, who spoke. In his speech Commander Belgrano warned against the growth of communism. He declared the United States should withdraw its recognition of soviet Russia.

"Abraham Lincoln had but one creed," Commander Belgrano said. "That was the creed of Americanism. We need a return of that spirit in the breast of every American citizen far more than we need a return of so-called prosperity.

"The time has come to put communism and all its allies out of our country for good, and to decide that in America there is room only for Americanism."

Later in the day a program was held in the state senate. Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Donovan of Joliet, the president of the senate, and Senator T. V. Smith, Chicago, both Democrats, gave brief talks on Lincoln.

Mr. Donovan read from the journals of the general assembly a preamble and resolutions which Lincoln drafted shortly before leaving Springfield to assume the presidency of the United States. It was adopted by the Illinois legislature. The resolutions reveal Lincoln's belief in the necessity of preserving the Union. The resolutions read:

"Resolved, by the general assembly of the state of Illinois, that if application shall be made to congress by any of the states deeming themselves aggrieved, to call a convention in accordance with the constitutional provision aforesaid, to propose amendments to the constitution of these United States, that the legislature of the state of Illinois will and does hereby concur in making such application.

"Must Preserve Union."

"Resolved, That until the people of these United States shall otherwise direct, the present federal Union must be preserved as it is, and the present constitution and laws must be administered as they are; and to this end, in conformity to that constitution and laws, the whole resources of the state of Illinois are hereby pledged to the federal authorities."

Gov. Horner, an authority on the life of Lincoln, was one of the speakers at a banquet of the American Legion post of Springfield, which was followed by a grand ball.

CHICAGOANS SEE PLAY, SCENE OF LINCOLN SLAYING

Dimmed Lights Mark Point of Shooting.

BY MARCIA WINN.

For the first time since the 1860s "Our American Cousin," eccentric comedy which Abraham Lincoln was watching the night of his assassination in Ford's theater, Washington, was presented in Chicago last night.

The revival, sponsored by the Lincoln group of Chicago in collaboration with the Chicago Historical society, was given in observance of the 126th anniversary yesterday of Lincoln's birth, and an audience of enthusiastic Chicagoans packed the auditorium of the Historical society's museum in Lincoln park to see the play.

Enjoyed Heartily by Lincoln.

Historians note that Lincoln, viewing the play after it had had a run of more than 1,000 performances, cast aside the cares of state and the problems of a nation divided against itself to slap his knee and laugh long and loudly in hearty appreciation of the sallies of the swashbuckling hero—"our American cousin" from Vermont.

They go even further, however, and intimate that possibly that fatal night of April 14, 1865, he was not seeing the play for the first time, for it was appearing at McVicker's theater in Chicago when Lincoln was nominated for the presidency at the Wigwam convention of 1860. And Lincoln, they add, was an inveterate playgoer.

And just as it was not reproduced in Washington again until 1907, following the tragedy of that April night, so last night marked its first reproduction in Chicago [and, incidentally, the first drama presented in the Historical society auditorium] since the night he saw it at the McVicker's.

Not even Miss Laura Keene, "distinguished manageress, authoress and actress," and her company, who acted in the play in the '60s, could have had more appreciative audiences than did the Goodman players last night. Miss Keene may have played her part a thousand times, but Miss Nora McGillicuddy made equally as ravishing a heroine. And the gales of laughter at the comedy situations must have equaled the amusement of the audiences of 70 years ago.

Assassination Point Marked.

But in the middle of the third act came a sobering moment. The "Apollo of the prairies" (none other than "our American cousin") was standing alone in the center of the stage. Towards the retreating bustle of an aspiring mother he rasped out one of his most pungent remarks: "Well, I know enough to throw you out, old gal——." And suddenly all lights were dimmed save the flickering gas jets of the Victorian chandelier.

For 30 seconds there was darkness and silence. It was at that point in the play nearly 70 years ago that John Wilkes Booth, having entered Lincoln's box, fired the fatal shot and leaped down to the stage with his shout of "Sic semper tyrannis!"

Sitting in the fifth row at last night's performance was a little white-haired woman, Mme. Dorothy Lamon-Teillard of Murat, Cantal, France, who arrived from New York yesterday afternoon just to see this performance. She was the daughter of the late Ward Hill Lamon, the Danville law partner of Lincoln who later accompanied him to Washington.

"People think I was at Ford's theater that night," she told the audience, a cluster of violets held tightly in her hands, during intermission, "but I wasn't. I was only six. I do remember riding with Lincoln in my father's landau there in Washington. Strange to say, it wasn't his face that impressed me—it was his long, long legs stretched out against the red satin upholstery."

"Our American Cousin" will be presented again tonight and tomorrow night.

HOOVER INVOKES LINCOLN SPIRIT IN CRISES TODAY

Urges U. S. People Stick to Constitution.

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—The faith of Abraham Lincoln was built on freedom of the human spirit and "whatever violates, infringes, or abrogates fundamental American liberty, violates the life principle of America as a nation."

This was the message given tonight in a short speech by Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States, at the 59th annual Lincoln day dinner of the National Republican club. This was Mr. Hoover's first public address in the east since his appearance at the club's Lincoln day dinner in 1933, a few weeks before he went out of office.

Mr. Hoover merely implied criticism of the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt, his successor. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, president of the club, introduced Mr. Hoover. Col. Roosevelt attacked the administration of his distant cousin. He charged it had flouted the constitution, weakened congress, assumed judicial powers, used emergency legislation to break down the "bill of rights."

Charges People Are Deceived.

"The members of that administration have masked their attempts on our democratic government with false promises to the needy, with a lavish squandering of our country's resources," Col. Roosevelt said. "They are traitors to the very people whose favor they seek to gain."

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey and Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, each declared for the revivification and reorganization of the Republican party.

Gov. Hoffman, drawing lessons from the life and career of Lincoln, declared the Republican party must be sanely progressive and rededicated to the principles of liberty under law and to social justice.

President Frank warned that, if neither the Democratic nor the Republican party met problems realistically in a world so largely under the spell of Fascism or communism a new party would arise in this country to meet those problems. He expressed hope those problems would be met by the party of his grandfather and father and of his own party, the Republican party.

Lincoln Expresses America.

"Lincoln was in himself the highest expression of American life," Mr. Hoover said. "His individuality, his self-reliance, his courage, his patience, his tolerance, and his intellectual honesty have been the living inspiration to three generations of our people. They are and should continue to be an inspiration to America in this period, as trying if not more trying than any that has confronted our country since Lincoln's time.

"It is indeed a period of grave difficulty for all our people. The aftermath of war, the adaptations necessary from the tidal surge of scientific discovery, the abuses which had grown in our economic system, the world-wide depression, the development of new social systems in foreign countries—all these have confused our thinking. From this travail fear has come to dominate the world. From all these dislocations there are everywhere a yearning and a striving to find individual and national security.

Cites Fixity of Principle.

"Herein lies the high purpose of such meetings as this, which recall the character and principles applied and expounded by Abraham Lincoln.

"Lincoln was a great liberal. He believed passionately that Americans should be masters of the state and not the pawns of the state. He believed a fundamental spiritual truth had been revealed to humanity in the conception of personal liberty as the basis of society. He believed it was only through this release of the human spirit that human happiness and human progress were possible.

"Lincoln believed that, while changes were inevitable to meet the shifting scenes and problems of the day, those changes should be in method and not in principle. He held the abiding spiritual truth that all individual and national security must rest upon the orderly processes of constitutional self-government. In his own words: 'A majority held in restraint by constitutional checks and limitations is the only true sovereign of a free people.' Thus his faith was builded upon the solid foundations of freedom of the human spirit which has been America's translation into government.

"This provides us for our text for today. Whatever violates, infringes, or abrogates fundamental American liberty violates the life principle of America as a nation. So, I feel, Lincoln would judge and express in illuminating phrase were he with us tonight."

Five Billion Works Bill May Reach Senate Floor Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Consideration of the administration's "five billion dollar" works bill by the senate appropriations committee will be concluded tomorrow and the measure may reach the senate floor Thursday, Chairman Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] said today after hearing William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Green appeared with the entire executive council of the A. F. of L. in support of the McCarran amendment whereby the prevailing wage rates would have to be paid on all federal projects. He said the proposal to pay federal relief workers $50 a month would wreck the prevailing wage scales established by organized labor throughout the country.

Dispute McAdoo Estimate.

Green also disputed estimates submitted by Senator William G. McAdoo [Dem., Cal.] and supported by Corrington Gill of the federal emergency relief administration. The administration leaders contended that it would cost 6 billion 300 million dollars to put 3,500,000 men to work at prevailing rates. Green said the average wage paid by PWA was only 59 cents an hour instead of 80 cents, as estimated by the government witnesses, and that the great majority of work contemplated under the present bill would require common labor with a prevailing wage of only 40 cents.

Rather than undermine the prevailing wage structure, Green argued the government should pay the prevailing rates and limit the average monthly earnings to $50 by reducing hours.

A vote on the amendment submitted by Senator McCarran [Dem., Nev.] will be taken tomorrow. It was adopted 12 to 8 last week, but a motion to reconsider carried 14 to 9.

Will Push Dole Amendment.

Senator Alva B. Adams [Dem., Colo.] also plans to press for adoption of his amendment to lop off 2 billion dollars from the appropriation, which was defeated in a tie vote last week. Whatever the committee does, this amendment, like McCarran's, will come up on the floor and both will be vigorously debated.

Many senators will insist upon the payment of the prevailing wage rates, although administration leaders say such a provision would "defeat the purpose of the bill itself." A good many others will support the Adams amendment, holding that the dole should be substituted for the sake of economy and the credit of the nation.

Bill Would Permit CCC Men to Join Army Reserve

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12—(AP)—Members of the Civilian Conservation corps would be permitted to enlist in the army reserve for a period of five years under a bill introduced today by Representative John J. McSwain [Dem., S. C.]. The CCC youths, after completing six months encampment would be allowed to enroll in the CCC again for two months of intensive military training, and then enlist in a new auxiliary reserve.

ROOSEVELT GETS A REBUKE FROM HIS LABOR BOARD

Outlines Policy Widely Different from Own.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—The national labor relations board today sketched out a labor policy which varies sharply at several points from President Roosevelt's recent practices.

In a report to the President himself, the board made a flat statement of its position on NRA labor problems without commenting at all on its divergence from the President's own course of action.

The board declared that rule by the majority of the waorkers is "the keystone of any sound, workable system of industrial relationship by collective bargaining," although Mr. Roosevelt has just continued the automobile code which provides proportional rather than majority rule.

Hits Independent Boards.

Existence of independent "code" labor boards, such as the President's automobile board, was attacked by the labor relations board as "impracticable."

Partisan boards, representing both labor and employers, cannot handle labor disputes, the board declared, although the auto board is that type of tribunal.

All collective bargaining decisions handed down by independent code labor boards should be subject to review by itself, the relations board insisted. The President on Jan. 22 instructed the labor board not to review decisions handed down by any one of five code labor tribunals.

Held Ideal Labor Policy.

What the significance of the apparent variance between the President and his labor board is, officials would not explain. They hinted, however, that the board had outlined the ideal New Deal labor policy whereas the President was working toward this ideal as rapidly as he could negotiate concessions from industry, but accepting compromises in the meantime.

The board repeated its complaint that it has no power of its own to enforce its decisions, and the death of the Blue Eagle has complicated the problem, it said.

The report reminded the President: "In the ultimate analysis the board's 'findings' and 'orders' are nothing more than recommendations."

Compliance Now Low.

Compliance, figures supplied by the board show, is comparatively low. Out of 68 cases were the board demanded it, the companies complied in only 17 instances.

Snatching of the Blue Eagle by NRA is the most rapid means of punishment for offenders, but "in many industries the loss of the Blue Eagle has little practical effect," the board complained. Court action, it said, was too cumbersome.

NEW DEAL FAILS, REP. FISH SAYS; SEES G. O. P. WIN

Only Roosevelt Policy Is "Borrowing."

Springfield, Mo., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Accusing the Democratic administration of being the greatest failure in American history, Representative Hamilton Fish Jr., declared in a speech here tonight that President Roosevelt and his brain trust has no other policy except that of continuous borrowing.

The United States representative from New York spoke at the annual Lincoln day banquet of the Missouri Republican organizations held at the Colonial hotel here.

"I know of no issue that is more appropriate to discuss on Lincoln's birthday," said Mr. Fish, "than the betrayal of representative and constitutional government by congress at the arrogant demands of President Roosevelt.

"It is the most important issue before the American people and will probably be, together with unemployment and the destruction of business confidence, the main issue in the next presidential campaign.

"Still More Borrowing."

"The Democratic administration has no policy except borrowing, more borrowing and still more borrowing, leading straight to chaos, ruinous inflation and bankruptcy. In another year the interest charges alone on the national debt will amount to well over a billion dollars and will consume over one third of our revenues.

"But the day of reckoning is inevitable and approaching rapidly. The President, however, continues to smile, even if the ship of state is headed for the financial and economic rocks.

"That is small satisfaction for the American people and for the oncoming generations that must carry the burden of taxation and pay the bill for the devastating failures and experiments of the all ambitious President and his brain trust."

The legislator lamented the "quack doctor" attempts to solve the depression by spending more money and lifting the American people up by their bootstraps. The tragedy of the present economic situation, he said, is that there are now two millions more unemployed than there were a year ago.

In "Era of Cure-Alls."

"We have entered into an era of nostrums and cure-alls," said the representative, "enlivened by governmental day dreamers, economic magicians, business wand wavers, industrial snake charmers, agricultural rabbit producers and free trade crystal gazers.

"This new development is the natural consequence of an administration that has brought to Washington inexperienced and visionary professors and radicals of all kinds and description who care nothing for the experience and wisdom of the past but seek to perform new experiments regardless of the cost to taxpayers."

The speaker declared that the time has come to scrap the unworkable codes, if not the entire NRA, and retain only the minimum wages and maximum hours and the child labor provision.

He forecast no return to prosperity until a Republican president is elected which, he said, will occur in 1936 when the people wake up to the facts and register their will regardless of relief work or governmental pay rolls.

1,000 RumanianMinersQuit UndergroundHunger Strike

TIMISOARA, Rumania, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The threatened mass hunger strike of more than 1,000 Rumanian miners in the pits at Steirdorfanina came to a speedy end tonight through lack of water and a promise of the management that demands of the men would be granted. The miners had demanded a 25 per cent increase in wages and better working conditions.

HUEY ARRANGES TO KEEP ATTACK ON FARLEY ALIVE

Outsmarts Democrats by Aid of Borah.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—So enraged were the senate Democrats by Huey Long's continued denunciation of Postmaster General James A. Farley today that they played right 'nto his hands and left the way open for him to get the floor any time he wants to attack Farley.

Long's resolution demanding a senate investigation of Farley's official conduct was referred to the committee on postoffices and post roads, which the Louisiana dictator thinks is too friendly to the postoffice department. Nevertheless, the motion of Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson for such a reference gave Long an opportunity for a two hour speech and now he can speak any time he likes on a motion to discharge the committee.

Keeps Matter Prolonged.

It was generally conceded that the resolution would have been killed had it come to a vote today, as Long professed to desire, but he roared and screamed against "the unheard of procedure of having a committee investigate to determine whether to investigate." The senators on the Republican side grinned with obvious delight while Long denounced Farley as "a criminal" and "the ringmaster of the Roosevelt administration."

It was at the suggestion of Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] that Long finally surprised the Democrats by consenting to the committee reference.

Long charged today that Farley was guilty of the same violation for which Gov. Langer of North Dakota was convicted and sent to the penitentiary "by a Farley approved district attorney."

"This poor man was sent to prison for soliciting campaign funds from federal employés, a matter of $157, and he only got half of it," Long said. "Farley solicits from thousands of federal employés and it's a double violation because he uses the mails to do it. Langer probably didn't know anything about that law, but Farley did. I know because he told me.

Asked to Raise Money.

"When I was in good standing he asked me to go out and raise some money for the man that's now in the White House. He said, 'You know you can't collect from federal employés." I told him that was all right, for there was plenty of state employés."

Senator Josiah W. Bailey [Dem., N. C.] demanded to know why, if Long had any such evidence against the postmaster general, he didn't present it to the proper authorities, "instead of making insinuations here in the senate."

"Yes, I guess I could go to the district attorney that Farley appointed last week and get him to indict Farley," Long replied.

When Senators Bailey and Robinson raised the question of the expense of a senate inquiry Long said there wouldn't be any expense.

"You just pass this resolution and Mr. Farley will quit or he'll be made to quit," Huey declared. "If you pass this resolution and we don't run Farley out of the cabinet in ten days I'll go down to Louisiana and raise $12,500 for the Democratic party. If we do run him out I'll raise $25,000."

Defines a Politician.

Huey gave his definition of a good politician, which set off a ripple of laughter in the galleries and brought a warning from Vice President Garner.

"Farley is not a good politician," said Long. "A good politician avoids evil—that is, he avoids the appearance of evil. Farley doesn't even avoid the appearance of evil."

After Long had concluded, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney [Dem., Wyo.] arose to give his "personal testimony" that Mr. Farley was probably one of the most honorable men in the history of the United States. Senator O'Mahoney, a member of the postoffice committee, used to be first assistant postmaster general under Mr. Farley.

NINE JURORS REBEL AGAINST RULE OF CITY BY A 'JUNTA'

Baton Rouge, La., Feb. 12.—(AP)—First legal steps seeking an injunction to restrain Senator Huey P. Long's reorganized East Baton Rouge police jury from functioning as the parish's governing authority were taken today by nine anti-Long jurors.

The restraining order will be sought tomorrow in federal court at New Orleans. The petitioners have refused to recognize the validity of a legislative act permitting Gov. O. K. Allen to appoint one juror for each of the 13 elected jurors.

Notices were served on the 13 appointed members and immediate preparation to resist the action was taken.

Four of the elected members, friendly to Senator Long, joined the 13 appointed jurors to reorganize the jury and give the administration control of the body.

The notices stated that application for the injunction would be filed before Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah.

Attorneys for the nine jurors bringing the action said the application will be filed in the name of two out-of-state taxpayers who will allege an interest and claim federal court jurisdiction.

CONGRESS GETS AMENDMENTS TO AID AAA DICTATOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment administration act that would add to the broad powers of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace were introduced in the senate and house today.

Chief among the provisions would be unlimited power for AAA to examine the private books and records of all parties to marketing agreements and licensees. The secretary of agriculture could "examine any books, papers, records, accounts, correspondence, documents, or memoranda."

Prepared at AAA.

The changes in the act were prepared at the AAA and sent to Capitol hill with the approval of Secretary Wallace and Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA.

Senator Harry Flood Byrd [Dem., Va.], who led a successful attack to block similar legislation last session, said that he understood that some of the objectionable features had been removed. He declined to comment until he had the opportunity to study the amendments in detail.

Suspension Power "Unused."

Administrator Davis informed Representative Marvin Jones [Dem., Tex.], chairman of the house agricultural committee, by letter that the power of the secretary to revoke or suspend licenses of processors is not being used by AAA and "could well be stricken from the act." The amendments proposed would reduce fines imposed on offenders from $1,000 to $500 for each day the license is violated.

The licensing section was designed to enable AAA to enforce milk marketing agreements through power to license processors and handlers who failed to comply with a marketing agreement supported by the majority of the industry in various areas.

Mr. Davis declared in his letter that the licensing provision could not apply "to individual producers as producers."

Plans "Ever Normal Granary."

The legislation, as introduced, also provides for the scheme of an "ever normal granary."

"Wise national policy in the interest of producers and consumers," said Davis, "counsels the maintenance at all times of adequate reserves of food and fiber. Commodity loans to farmers in seasons of heavy production seem the best method of accomplishing this purpose, if they can be extended without causing the accumulation of enormous surplus in the hands of the government."

The amendments would give the secretary of agriculture powers to make benefit payments to farmers participating in voluntary acreage adjustment programs "in kind." This change would give the AAA the power to distribute to farmers commodities in times of low production that had been acquired through commodity credit loans during periods of high production.

In addition, the secretary would be empowered to use revenues derived from processing taxes levied upon agricultural products to acquire farm commodities pledged for loans.

GEN. ROBERT WOOD'S NAME MENTIONED FOR NRA ADMINISTRATOR

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt is being urged to reëstablish a single administrator over the National Recovery administration, it was reported today. The name most prominently mentioned for the post held by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson is Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. Like Gen. Johnson, Gen. Wood is an excavalry officer.

While President Roosevelt is preparing his message for congress on the new legislation extending the NIRA, proposals concerning the labor aspect of the legislation were made to him today by the National Labor Relations board.

The board admitted that it was powerless to enforce its decisions, that court enforcement was "uncertain and cumbersome," and it therefore asked for clarification of section 7-A and for power to review, on approval, decisions of all industrial boards with respect to section 7-A cases.

It was reported today that Gen. Johnson spoke to President Roosevelt several days ago concerning the future of the NRA. The general has never concealed his opinion that a board with split votes would be unable to handle the business of the administration with that dispatch that was possible under one-man rule.

MME. SECRETARY KEEPS HER BATH PRIVATE AFFAIR

She Carries Only Key and Cameramen Barred.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—There is a door with but one key in official Washington. The door does not bulwark gold in the United States mint but a more intangible treasure—feminine modesty.

The door, one of matched grained walnut, screens the pastel tinted bath of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins with its seven needle sprays, full length mirrors, and frosted glass. And its single key is the proud possession of Mme. Secretary.

This was learned yesterday when photographers were given their first glimpse of the labor sanctum. The photographers were ushered into the office with a hushing and shushing befitting entry into a New Deal chapel.

Red Is the Motif.

They saw a spacious office lit by mullioned windows flanked by red drapes. They waded through a rich red carpet to a walnut desk at the far end of the room. About the sides of the office were walnut chairs upholstered with red leather matching the rug and drapes.

The photographers were told they might take pictures of the office. After the last photographer has uttered the cry of his craft, "Just one more, please," all chorused, "Now for the bathroom."

A press representative of the secretary hastily said such a picture could not be taken. A disrespectful photographer started for a door at the end of the office. The press agent made a futile attempt to intervene but the photographer reached the door nob.

"You can't go in there," cried the press agent.

"What's the matter?" the photographer asked. "Is the secretary taking a bath?"

Door Is Locked.

The press agent said such was not the case; that the door was locked and the secretary alone had the key. The photographer tried the door and found the press agent had spoken the truth.

In vain photographers pleaded that the bath was the only feature of the office. They said they had no wish to bathe in it, but wanted pictures.

They recalled that Secretary Perkins had altered the original plans of the building, which called for a second entrance into the bath from the office of her chief counsel, Charles E. Wyzanski Jr., so that she might have privacy.

Following her orders, a two foot brick wall was built where the second entrance was to have been, and contractors had to build another bath for Wyzanski. These facts made the bath an object of interest to every taxpayer who had to pay for the original plans and the alterations, the photographers argued.

The press agent said that the room was locked immediately after it was completed at the orders of Mme. Secretary. She regards the bath as a private matter whether she is in or out of it and took precautions to keep it so, he added.

He left a note blaming ill health and financial reverses for his act. He had been missing from his home for a week.

WARN PARENTS AS CHILDREN RISK LIVES ON LAKE

Far out on the ice in the lake yesterday afternoon five small dots were sighted by the lookout on the central coast guard station. The dots were so small that the lookout needed binoculars to pick them out. A crew was dispatched by Capt. John O. Anderson, but by the time it reached Hollywood avenue the "dots" had reached shore. They were five school children returning from a holiday adventure.

Capt. Anderson took this example of foolhardy sport to warn parents of the danger of letting their children play along the lake shore. He was joined in this warning by Capt. James U. Sammis, whose Lincoln park policemen have reported similar incidents during the last two weeks.

"Prevailing easterly winds have jammed the ice cakes shoreward," said Capt. Anderson. "This has left about seven or eight miles of treacherous ice floes, frozen together. Should the wind shift suddenly to the west, these cakes will break up and start moving out into the lake. And children walking on the ice would be carried out with them and probably lost before we could reach them in boats. We urge parents to keep their children off the ice."

Luke Lea Leaves Prison for His Mother's Funeral

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Granted a temporary parole from North Carolina prison, where he is serving a sentence on a banking law violation conviction, Col. Luke Lea attended his mother's funeral today. Mrs. Ella C. Lea died in Washington Sunday at the age of 89.

JUST AN HONEST BOOTLEGGER, BUT HE GOES TO JAIL

David Frank, 47 years old, 3728 South Wabash avenue, was nowise abashed last night when a detective bureau squad halted his automobile at 42d and State streets.

"There's nothing wrong about me," he said, stepping briskly from the car. "I'm just an honest bootlegger out calling on the trade. There's a five gallon can of alcohol and two bottles of liquor here."

The detectives, who hadn't arrested a bootlegger for many months, listened without curiosity as he offered $7 for his freedom.

"It's all I have," he said. "The racket isn't what it was in prohibition times. Liquor is only a dollar a gallon now."

Frank was locked up in the detective bureau and will be turned over to the department of internal revenue for questioning.

Power Interests Make a Fight for Life.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 12. — [Special.] — Can it be that the roseate dreams of the Tennessee valley authority planners are to fall with the stars on Alabama?

This possibility is contemplated with apprehension or satisfaction, as the case may be, in the decision in the suit now in progress before Federal Judge W. I. Grubb in the District court here. In that suit stockholders of the Alabama Power company seek to block the TVA electrification program as an unwarranted and illegal interference of government in private business.

Plans of the TVA to buy and operate distribution systems, plans to build transmission lines into remote farm areas, plans of the Public Works Administration to lend funds to municipalities in the Tennessee valley that would enter into power contracts with the TVA all have been halted by this court action. This suit has been in progress two weeks and probably will not end until March.

Two Opposing Views.

Two schools of social thought—the TVA school, which would put the government into the power business, and the groups headed by the power, ice, and coal interests, which hold that the business of government is to regulate and govern, not to compete with its own people in business—are at legal war here. The outcome will be of utmost significance to the whole nation. TVA may go ahead and build dams and prevent erosion and flood and incidentally uplift living standards in the Tennessee river valley, but it cannot go ahead with its giant sale of power program until this suit is out of the way. Injunctions have stopped those activities for the present. The court has refused to lift those injunctions until the basic legal question of constitutionality is decided.

This laboratory experiment in the mixture of government and business indicates a reaction from a strictly legal standpoint that is adverse to the TVA school. The decision here, whichever way it goes, will be carried to the United States Supreme court. This District court in preliminary ruling already has held that the government has no power to produce and sell electric power except as incidental to a granted power such as the power to improve navigable rivers or to provide for the national defense.

Question One of Intent.

The case on trial, then, turns on the question of intent in the minds of the TVA rulers. In the testimony now being brought forward, the interests of navigation of the Tennessee river and the great potential value of this power development for the national defense are the points stressed by the defendant. One of the chief points raised by the plaintiffs is that the unconstitutionality of TVA and its actions is to be proved by the fact that it is making use of the federal powers over navigation, flood control and wartime necessities to superimpose a giant, proprietary manufacturer and sale of electric current in competition with the private power companies in this territory.

The defense contention is that navigation improvement is the major purpose of TVA. The plaintiff contention is that its real purpose is to engage in the electric light and power business.

Battle Quietly Being Fought.

Both sides have brought up their heaviest guns for this battle. It is a quiet, low toned proceeding in a dark paneled chamber, with a gray haired, firm chinned judge on the bench. A great map of the valley fills one end of the chamber.

Colors mark its tremendous mineral and forest resources. The troops of industry are deployed across it, the eyes of idealists and realists regard it with varying vision.

Forney Johnston, a noted lawyer of the south, is chief counsel for the complainants. James Lawrence Fly and William C. Fitts Jr. lead the case for TVA. Attorneys from Alabama towns that have been offered PWA loans to finance their use of TVA power are in court. Interested and alert spectators are attorneys for the Chemical National bank of New York, which holds a $70,000,000 mortgage on the Alabama Power company.

Other power companies watch the suit, upon which their fate rests. Ice and coal men are backing the test suit against the TVA, considering their own economic life at stake. Whatever happens here these groups are preparing to start new suits against the TVA in the Tennessee courts.

Experts such as Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, assistant chief engineer of the United States army and a member of the St. Lawrence river commission, appear for TVA. Experts such as Rufus Putnam and Robert Isham Randolph appear for the plaintiffs. There are learned arguments as to whether high dams or low dams are best for navigation.

Dr. A. E. Morgan, chairman of the TVA board, makes a long deposition to the effect that the three primary purposes of the TVA are navigation, national defense, and general welfare. Power, according to his view, is an accessorial purpose and its sale would prevent loss or waste in carrying out the primary purpose. The power interests may suffer, but in the long run would be benefitted by the increased use of power.

If the TVA power program goes through, according to the plaintiff view, it is within the province of the government to destroy the industry by setting up similar unfair "yardsticks" in every state and forcing the sale of the properties at confiscatory prices.

Hold TVA Is Subsidized.

TVA rates have not yet been allowed to enter this case. It is the contention of the plaintiffs that TVA is subsidized by the government, because it was able to write down at the expense of taxpayers its original investment in Muscle Shoals, because the municipalities desiring to avail themselves of the power generated by the government may build their own distributing lines with government loans, of which 30 per cent is a grant, and because of many other advantages enjoyed by the government in credit, costs, free service. In a brief filed by Attorney Johnston the TVA program is termed illegal and attacked as follows:

"The question is not whether improvement of navigation is intended as a primary or remote function of the act or the program. The question is whether, assuming that navigation is an objective, the government can graft on that function any such power program, any such proprietary function as is demonstrated by the averments of this bill of complaint.

"Bear in mind that the program is an integral one, embracing the area within transmission distance of the 149 potential hydro dams on the Tennessee and tributaries, embracing a population of 6,000,000. The power to be produced [25 billion killowatt hours] is five times the market estimated by the corps of engineers by 1950. For its power TVA has announced as part of its plan that it proposes to take the market by competition, if it cannot buy the existing distribution systems on its own terms.

"It has announced that it is under mandate to acquire or construct or operate utility systems. It has announced that its object and purpose is to supplement state regulation of utilities, because state regulation has broken down. One hundred and fifty years of judicial integrity in the projection of the tenth amendment, will, we believe, resent the audacity of that program."

[The tenth amendment to the United States constitution says:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states are reserved to the states, respectively, or to the people"]

CALUMET LINK OF WATERWAY GETS U. S. CASH

First Work to Be Started Within a Month.

Mayor Kelly announced yesterday that the federal government has set aside $2,814,500 for the first stage in the development of the Calumet link of the Illinois waterway. Work on the project is expected to start in about a month.

Formal notification that the money is now available was given in a letter from Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, head of the Public Works administration, to Oscar E. Hewitt, city commissioner of public works. In the letter Ickes said that the local governments have satisfactorily met the requirements imposed for the allotment of PWA funds for the work.

Ickes wrote that he was "delighted that Mayor Kelly has obtained the necessary right of way," as indicated in a report made to him by Lieut. Col. Donald H. Connolly, army engineer for the Chicago district.

Last Obstacle Is Removed.

The announcement removes the last obstacle to the preliminary work in making the present Calumet-Sag channel, the Little Calumet and Calumet rivers and Lake Calumet into a great waterway terminal. The eventual cost of this whole project, it is expected, will be $40,000,000.

Calumet-Sag channel joins the main waterway at a point about four miles northeast of Lemont. From there it runs east across southern Cook county through Blue Island.

East of Blue Island it meets the Little Calumet river, which carries it on into the Calumet river and later into the southern end of Lake Calumet at Jeffery avenue [extended] and a point just north of 130th street. The Calumet river connects Lake Calumet with Lake Michigan.

Three Divisions of Project.

The work called for under the $2,814,500 federal allotment falls into three divisions: [1] Construction of three "by-passes" in the Calumet-Sag channel so that modern river boats may pass each other; [2] deepening and straightening of the Little Calumet river and dredging of the Calumet river, and [3] development of a harbor at the southern end of Lake Calumet.

The Calumet-Sag channel already is 60 feet wide and 12½ feet deep. Each of the three by-passes will be a mile long and 90 feet wide, so that the channel at these points will be 150 feet wide.

Contracts for this work, which will start off the project, already have been let. The cost is estimated at $703,827.

Second Phase—River Work.

The second phase of the job—improvements in the Little Calumet and Calumet rivers—will cost $1,529,000. The Calumet river already is navigable, but some dredging will be required. Most of the money will be spent on the Little Calumet.

This stream has a width ranging from 100 to 150 feet over the five and a half miles of its course from the junction with the Calumet-Sag channel to Lake Calumet. At a number of points, however, it needs deepening and in some places its twistings will be straightened. Contracts for this work will probably be let within 30 days, Mayor Kelly said.

Eventually the plans provide for the widening of the Little Calumet to 350 feet to meet the proposed 250 foot Calumet-Sag channel east of Blue Island, but neither of these projects can be accomplished with the funds now available.

Harbor to Be Developed.

The Calumet-Sag and Calumet river improvements account for $2,232,827 of the present $2,814,500 allotment. The remainder, $581,673, will be applied toward development of the Lake Calumet harbor.

Easements for 52 per cent of the necessary right of way for the preliminary work have been given voluntarily by property owners through the efforts of Mayor Kelly, who was commissioned by Secretary Ickes to conduct the negotiations in the various jurisdictions involved.

A few weeks ago condemnation proceedings were instituted in federal court against "holdout" property owners, and all the land needed was thus made available, the only question remaining being determination of fair payment for the condemned land.

$200,000 Appropriated by City.

In its 1935 budget the city appropriated $200,000 to meet the condemnation cost of land not otherwise obtainable. The county posted a $70,000 surety bond to guarantee condemnation costs in its jurisdiction.

"The United States department of commerce," he said, "has estimated that the Calumet link will attract 4,000,000 additional tons of shipping to the waterway a year, and will bring an annual saving of $3,600,000 to shippers and consumers.

"Construction will begin as soon as careful engineering will permit."

By attracting many industries to the region, Mayor Kelly added, the development will increase the growth and prestige of Chicago.

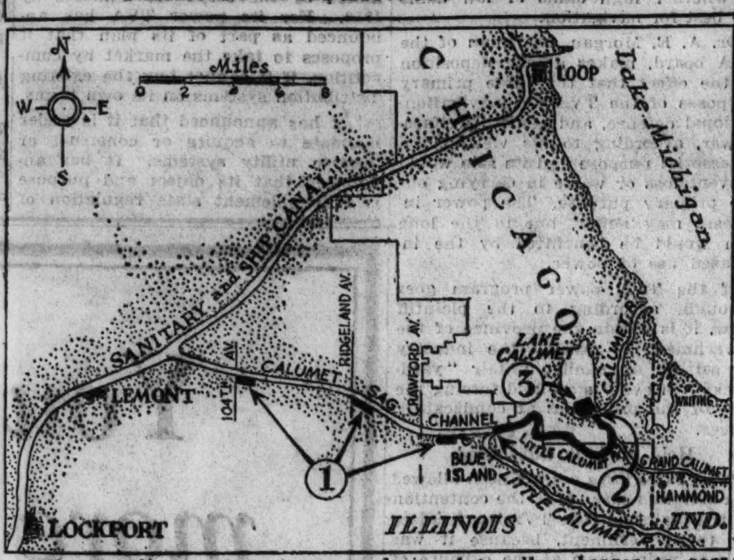
Would Solve Trafic Problem.

The new link will provide an alternative route for the present one which utilizes the sanitary district canal and the Chicago river. Objections to this route are that it leads through a congested part of the city, involves a problem of halting land trafic over many movable bridges in the loop and other city areas, and does not serve the territory to the south, which is regarded as the logical site of terminals and manufacturing plants.

One immediate effect of the development will be the putting to work of thousands of persons, thus reducing relief rolls.

Hope was expressed yesterday that the increase in shipping over the new route would convince the federal government of the wisdom of speeding the whole $40,000,000 project to an early completion.

PLAN OF WATERWAY PROJECT



No. 1 indicates three bypasses designed to allow barges to pass; No. 2, section of Little Calumet river which will be deepened and straightened; No. 3, point in Lake Calumet to be dredged as terminal site. The project is designed to provide a shorter course between canal and Lake Michigan and one which will not interfere with land trafic in the business area of the city.

VIOLENT WINDS KILL, INJURE AT LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Winds starting last night and early this morning reaching 60 miles an hour force in the foothill suburban district about this city caused heavy property damage, the death of one person, and injuries to fifteen others. The gale unroofed a portion of a building at Santa Anita race track near Monrovia, toppled sheds and trees in Arcadia, Sierra Madre, and portions of Pasadena.

Streets were blocked in several cities with fallen trees, telegraph poles, and electric wires. Santiago Vasquez, a teamster, was killed when two trucks collided on Foothill boulevard when their drivers were blinded by the heavy sandstorm whipped up by the winds.

In Pasadena Wesley Frye, his wife and daughter, Janice, were injured when a tree was blown over on their auto.

Plate glass windows were blown in at several shops along Hollywood boulevard, Hollywood. Damage to construction along the beaches at Santa Monica and Venice were reported from heavy waves, some of which crashed over the piers at these resorts.

LAFFOON NAMES GROUP TO PROBE COAL MINE AREA

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Investigation of the troubled coal fields of Harlan and adjoining counties where he declared "strife is imminent," was ordered late today by Gov. Ruby Laffoon. He stated the situation now threatens the lives of many men and the destruction of valuable property.

The chief executive appointed a commission, headed by Adjt. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt, to hold public hearings in the coal fields and take testimony from operators and miners and "disinterested citizens." The commission will report its recommendations to the governor.

The rich southeastern Kentucky coal fields have been the scene of sporadic disorder since the "battle of Evarts" in May, 1931, in which five men died in a clash between miners and mine guards. Recently there has been renewed bitterness as the United Mine Workers of America again have sought to unionize the workers under NRA regulations.

SENATE APPROVES BILL TO PRESERVE RELICS OF CUSTER

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Historical relics which tell in part the memorable story of "Custer's last stand" will be preserved for posterity under terms of a bill passed today by the senate.

The bill, introduced by Senator Wheeler [Dem., Mont.], provides a $20,000 appropriation for erection of a public historical museum in the Custer Battlefield National cemetery in Montana.

The museum would be maintained as a memorial to Lieut. Col. George A. Custer and the officers and soldiers under his command at the battle of the Little Bighorn river, June 25, 1876.

BRITISH REGIME BLOCKS LABOR MOVE TO OUST IT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—Another attempt to upset the national government failed tonight when the Labor party's motion of censure, which was to have been moved as an amendment to the unemployment assistance temporary provisions bill, was ruled out of order. The opposition intends to resume the offensive Thursday.

The house of commons tonight gave second reading to the temporary provisions bill, which restores the recent cuts in benefits until new arrangements are made. The government ministers had an uncomfortable time defending themselves against criticism from all quarters. Even some Conservatives voiced dissatisfaction because of the unemployment policy.

SPRAGUE TELLS FIRST AIMS OF CITY PLANNERS

Superhighway, Downtown Airport, Link Bridge.

With a twenty-six year record of achievement in the improvement and beautification of the city, the Chicago plan commission now is devoting its energy to the realization of four great projects considered necessary to further municipal and metropolitan development. The past accomplishments of the commission were recalled and its hopes for the near future were told yesterday by Col. A. A. Sprague, who was appointed chairman on Monday by Mayor Kelly.

Col. Sprague, whose appointment will be acted on by the city council next week, said that the dream of the commission since its organization in 1909 has been to make Chicago the first city in the world. The four projects which will speed this dream nearer to reality he listed as follows:

1. A downtown airport, situated on the lake front near 16th street.
2. An elevated highway on the west side.
3. A link bridge connecting the south and north side outer drives.
4. A complete survey and inventory of all the property in the city, which would be an aid to the government in planning its public works program here.

Airport Is Greatest Need.

"I believe that the downtown airport is the greatest thing the city ever thought of," Col. Sprague declared. "Any objections to it are only captious. The people who are opposed to it are the same ones who were once opposed to smoke in the city. Now they would be delighted if every factory chimney were pouring forth smoke.

"The objection that the airport would be noisy means nothing. A quiet city is a dead city."

Some of the funds for the construction of the airport must come from the federal government, Col. Sprague said, and the remainder from rentals of the companies using the station.

The west side elevated highway should be financed with government funds and with part of the proceeds from the state gasoline tax, he said.

West Side Needs Superhighway.

"Trafic on the north and south side moves swiftly and uninterruptedly along excellent outer drives," Col. Sprague pointed out, "but the west side has an unendurable situation. We must work out the proposed highway properly and economically."

Concerning the link bridge which would connect the north and south side outer drives, Col. Sprague said that the substructure is already in and the superstructure has been fabricated.

The actual erection is being delayed because of lack of funds," he said, "and we are hoping that the Public Works administration will give us the money. The connection of the two drives is one of the vital necessities in our city planning. We have spent millions getting it ready. Without this transportation link, it is as if we had constructed a beautiful house and forgotten to put in a door."

Inventory First on List.

The survey and inventory will be the first project undertaken by the commission in the future, Col. Sprague indicated.

"Such a project is a crying need, pertinent to any plan to rebuild Chicago," he said. "Similar inventories have been made in 64 major cities throughout the country, including New York, Philadelphia, and Boston. The survey must be honest and nonpolitical, for it will be the basis of most of the federal allotments.

"It was actually begun when we selected three areas for the government's slum clearance and housing projects. These blighted districts are at 35th street and Cottage Grove avenue, Ashland avenue between Harrison streets and Roosevelt road, and in the vicinity of Clybourn avenue and Division street."

As all attempts to increase municipal tax rates must be opposed at present, boulevard and park district improvements in the city should be financed by the government, preferably on the basis of the survey, Col. Sprague said.

"The projects the city will pay for must come later," he declared, "for taxes must be kept down right now. When the boulevards are improved, naturally, adjoining property will increase in value and then the taxes can be raised.

"Our demands on the government have been extremely modest, and Mayor Kelly has stated he will not ask for federal funds for construction which would also necessitate tax increases."

Some Accomplishments Told.

Among the accomplishments of the plan commission during its existence are the development of parks along the lake front and the forest preserve, the latter now forming nearly a complete belt around the three land sides of the city; improvements on Michigan avenue, Roosevelt road, Canal street, Peterson road, Devon, Western, Ashland, and Damen avenues, Cermak road, 95th street, and the construction of Wacker drive. Among the railroad terminal developments sponsored by the commission was the Union station.

The city improvement plan was conceived in 1908 by the late Daniel Burnham, architect, under the auspices of the Commercial club. The plan was presented to the city in 1909 and the commission was created by the city council at that time.

The commission has had only three chairmen in its existence. The late Charles H. Wacker was the first one. He served until 1926 when he resigned because of ill health. He was succeeded by James Simpson, who served nine years, resigning last week. Col. Sprague, long a leader in Chicago affairs, was then appointed by the mayor.

Franco-British Air Pact Is Approved by Belgium

LONDON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The British government today received a note from the Belgian government expressing its approval of the Franco-British proposals for the creation of a western European air alliance. The suggested agreement would bind Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, and Germany in a military aviation alliance against sudden invasion.

SHOULD A JAILER SEARCH WOMEN LAWYERS? TSK!

Economy Creates a Fuss in County Board.

County Commissioner Lucy Palermo objected yesterday to an economy which might force women attorneys to submit to "embarrassing searches" for concealed weapons when visiting clients at the county jail. Her objection was raised at a meeting of the county board's finance committee, which is considering the county's 1935 budget.

The committee had denied a request of Sherif Toman for an appropriation of $3,500 to construct fine mesh screen at the jail to prevent visitors from smuggling weapons to prisoners while talking to them.

The Sherif's Alternative.

The sherif then said his only alternative was to have the jail guards search all visitors, including attorneys.

"We must economize, so the searching will have to be," said Clayton F. Smith, president of the county board.

Mrs. Palermo jumped to her feet. Her daughter, Julia, is a lawyer.

Kelly Is Not Impressed.

"What if it did prove embarrassing?" remarked Commissioner Peter M. Kelly. "Haven't women asked for equal rights with men?"

Mrs. Palermo was finally mollified when one of the other commissioners suggested that perhaps the women lawyers would be searched by jail matrons.

The finance committee yesterday pared $645,517 from the tentative budget, reducing it from $19,563,573 to $18,918,056. Further revisions will be made this morning.

WOMAN JUDGE SMILES THANK YOU, BUT WON'T RUN FOR PRESIDENT

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The nation's only woman judge of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed today with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt it is too early to think of putting a woman President in the White House.

Judge Florence Allen of the Sixth district Appellate court dismissed the idea of being a candidate with the comment, "No woman during my lifetime, however qualified, will be nominated, much less elected President of the United States."

She said she had received a report the league for a woman President and woman vice president in New York had suggested her as presidential timber for 1936.

"I appreciate the compliment," she laughed.

Mrs. Roosevelt, in her press conference in Washington today, expressed the opinion women are not yet ready to compaign for a woman President or vice president.

"I've always felt women should always come very well prepared for anything they do," said Mrs. Roosevelt. "Comparatively few women are prepared for either one of these positions."

FOES OF VOLIVA OUTDO HIS MEN IN ZION PRIMARY

Berwyn and Cicero Pick Party Nominees.

As a result of the balloting in Zion's municipal primary yesterday, leaders of the independent faction opposed Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva predicted that Voliva's reign would end at the election on April 16. He has been dictator of the political as well as the religious life of the town since 1911.

Zion has the commission form of government, with a mayor and four commissioners. Two candidates for mayor and eight for commissioner were chosen in the primary. John Nathan Bales, the Voliva choice for mayor, was nominated with 1,114 votes. The other nominee, William M. Edwards, polled only 756, but the total cast for three candidates against Bales was 1,662, and the Edwards supporters asserted the entire anti-Voliva strength would be cast for him.

Nominees for Commissioners.

Martius P. Barton and Lester R. Baughman, Voliva men, led the commissioners' ticket. Here again, however, the independent strength was distributed among eight candidates to the Volivite four. Others nominated are G. Oscar McDowell, Wilfred J. Brownlow, William H. Farrar, Richard F. Hire, John Gordon Burgess, and Conrad A. Bruno. Brownlow and Burgess are allied with Voliva.

The overseer, who declared the real fight was between himself and the devil, rang a bell in the White Front garage when early returns favored Bales, but desisted when later tallies showed independent gains.

Berwyn and Cicero also held municipal primaries yesterday. For mayor in Berwyn the Republicans chose Maurice M. Shay, incumbent, and the Democrats picked Anton Janura. Shay had a long lead and Janura was unopposed.

Other Berwyn Nominations.

For city clerk the Berwyn Republicans nominated Edward O. Holly and the Democrats Jerry E. Jacobson. The Republican choice for city treasurer is George I. Wilkerson, who will be opposed by Matthew A. Berg, Democrat.

Republican nominees for Berwyn alderman are: First ward, Frank S. Bellis and Lester G. Burkhardt; Second, Charles Kronquist and James R. Turek; Third, Leslie M. Moysey and Benedict Anderson; Fourth, James J. Havel and James Korous; Fifth, Frank J. Shurpiet and John V. Fiala; Sixth, Oscar Muelhausen and Joseph Wagner Jr.; Seventh, Emil Vacin and Robert T. Jacklin.

Aldermanic nominees of the Democrats are: First ward, Harry Levito and Edward E. Grove or Thomas Conroy [tied]; Second, Robert Vydra and Joseph F. Hosna; Third, John R. Cermak and Irving C. Toman; Fourth, James Svehla and Karel Marcisek; Fifth, Edward F. Alexa and Fred J. Marz; Sixth, James J. Cerny and Rudolph Polivka; Seventh, Howard A. Price and John A. Vancura.

Outcome in Cicero.

In Cicero Gustav O. Randa won the Democratic nomination for trustee, to fill a vacancy, and Walter Vogt was chosen by the Republicans. For library trustee the Democrats nominated David J. Paoli and Walter Babitz. For the same office the Republicans picked Louis A. Anderson.

New Bill Would Abolish Publicity of Income Tax

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Describing publicity of income tax information after March 15 as "the greatest scientific aid ever given to criminals," Representative Bell [Dem., Mo.] today introduced a bill to abolish this practice.

ROY ANDREWS CREDITS LUCK FOR GOBI FINDS

Pure chance played the largest part in the success of the expeditions sent to the Gobi desert in central Mongolia by the American Museum of Natural History of New York, during the period from 1923 to 1928, according to Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews, now director of the museum and leader of all the expeditions. He addressed 800 persons last night in Orchestra hall.

The discovery of the now world famous dinosaur eggs was one example of his luck, Dr. Andrews said. The eggs were discovered by one of his topographical assistants who knew virtually nothing about paleontology. For several days this man was unable to get any of the paleontologists to look at his find.

The shovel tusked mastodons, Dr. Andrews related, were found in much the same way. A series of the shovel teeth were brought into camp by camel drivers. Finally the curiosity of the paleontologists was roused and a whole skull was uncovered which disclosed the nature of the beast.

WIFE HALTS TRIP OF A CIVIL WAR VETERAN AND SON

Lon W. Prunty, 49 years old, of Londonderry, O., and his father, Fenton Prunty, 90 years old, a civil war veteran of Dixon, were detained for a while at the detective bureau last night. They were taken into custody as they stepped from a bus at Roosevelt road and Wabash avenue en route to West Virginia.

Their arrest was asked in a telegram from Sherif Ward Miller of Lee county, who said Fenton Prunty's fourth wife, Mary L. Prunty, 73 years old, had sworn out a warant charging Lon, her stepson, with kidnaping his father.

The detective bureau was informed later in the evening that the Lee county state's attorney had quashed the warant, terming the charge ridiculous. The elder Prunty declared his wife had once loved him, but now loved only his $95 a month war pension.

ASKS NEW LAW ON HUSBANDS, WIVES IN COURT

Both Should Testify, Says Legislator.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—The old provision of English common law prohibiting husbands and wives from testifying in court for or against each other would be substantially modified in Illinois through passage of a bill introduced today by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg [Rep., Chicago].

Only strictly marital confidences woud be barred on the witness stand under the Schnackenberg measure. Facts and occurrences would, in most cases, be permitted.

Cites Hauptmann Case.

A great many states already have passed such a bill, he said. New Jersey is one and by its provisions—as a current illustration—Mrs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann was allowed to testify for her husband in the Lindbergh trial. The United States Supreme court has upheld such law revision, but the Illinois Supreme court declared legislative sanction was necessary before the action would be allowed in the courts of this state.

"Passage of my bill," Schnackenberg said, "would preserve the sanctity of marriage while removing the legal hindrances that now prevent husbands and wives from testifying either for or against one another."

Would Thank Mayor Kelly.

A vote of thanks to Mayor Kelly and the organizations assisting him for the aggressive efforts that they are putting forth to achieve results in the mayor's "Keep Chicago Safe" campaign, was submitted to the house by Representative Charles H. Weber [Dem., Chicago].

The resolution also requested Gov. Horner annually to designate March as "safety month."

A bill introduced by Weber provided for the appointment of a commission to investigate and recommend legislation to cause a more prompt return to normalcy. The commission would be asked to determine such broad questions as the causes for dullness in business, industry, and agriculture.

Cites Large United States Imports.

"Among the things I want to know," Weber explained, "are what are the effects on Illinois agriculture resulting from the importation of more than $677,000,000 worth of foreign agricultural products and why is imported molasses to produce 85 per cent of the industrial alcohol used in the United States when corn, an Illinois farm product, is available.

"We manufacture cement in Illinois, but the plants are not producing to capacity. I understand the federal tarif commission is listening to arguments to give 1 per cent of the United States cement production to Belgium. How would this affect Illinois cement plants? I want to know what are the results when we let down the tarifs on foreign made products."

The Chicago election board would be required to compile a list of registered voters at least twelve days before election by a measure introduced by Representative Elroy C. Sandquist [Rep., Chicago]. Sandquist said this bill would make it easier to check on the registrations made at the board's office.

CITY PENSIONER IS TORTURED TO DEATH FOR CASH

Anton Minikowski, 70 years old, a pensioned employé of the street department, was found beaten to death yesterday in his dingy two room flat at 1752 North Artesian avenue, where he had lived as a recluse for fifteen years. His hands were bound with clothesline.

Neighbors who had not seen Minikowski since Friday called the West North avenue police. Breaking into the flat, police found evidence that the robbers bound the victim in a chair and slugged him with the hammer to make him reveal his reputed hidden money. The hammer lay beside the body.

Minikowski owned the two story building in which he lived and one at 945 North Artesian avenue. Three years ago robbers burned his hands and feet in an effort to make him tell where his money was hidden.

Fire Causes $20,000 Loss to Park Ridge Building

Damage estimated at $20,000 was caused early today by a fire which swept through the Gillick office building at 122 Main street, Park Ridge. The fire apparently started in the basement under the Robinson candy shop and spread to this store and to the offices of the building owner, Fred I. Gillick. The Park Ridge fire department battled the fire two hours.

HUNT IS LAUNCHED FOR WHISKY BURIED IN UNDERGROUND SHIP

Ponca, Neb., Feb. 12.—(AP)—A "treasure hunt" for $100,000 worth of whisky on a sunken steamship under dry land near the Missouri river here was announced today by E. E. Wenner of Waukegan, Ill.

Wenner, who came to Ponca to plan the hunt, said the whisky was the cargo of the Leadora when it foundered in the river during a storm May 21, 1865.

The work of salvaging the liquor will be a matter of digging rather than diving, he said, for the river has changed its course many times since then and the Leadora is believed to have been left buried underground.

EXPLAINS COSTLY RELIEF OVERHEAD IN COOK COUNTY

Reynolds Says Scope of Work Is Cause.

Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, explained yesterday by the economist's "law of diminshing returns" the fact that administrative costs take a larger proportion of the relief outlay in Cook county, with its large scale operations, than in other comparable Illinois counties.

The question arose when new data showed that, outside Cook county, the larger the scale of relief operations the smaller the percentage spent on administrative overhead.

Chief Statistician Robert J. Myers grouped the counties according to the number of relief families in each and determined what percentage of the relief total in each group was spent on administrative expense. This tabulation follows:

NUMBER.	Administrative expense.
Less than 500 families	13.1 per cent
500 to 1,000 families	11.1 per cent
1,000 to 1,500 families	9.1 per cent
1,500 to 3,000 families	7.9 per cent
3,000 to 5,000 families	7.8 per cent
5,000 to 10,000 families	7.7 per cent
10,000 to 15,000 families	5.6 per cent
135,000 families, Cook county	10.8 per cent

"In Cook county the machinery of relief distribution is more elaborately developed," said Mr. Reynolds in explaining the reversal of the administrative cost trend. "I'm not sure but that after reaching a certain peak of efficiency in operations, as size increases, the trend is reversed by natural factors. It should be pointed out that Cook county's case load is ten times as great as the next largest county's.

Strive to Reduce Outlay.

"I don't know how to justify the 10.8 per cent figure for Cook county other than to say that we need the amount of administrative control we have here. I am not saying, however, that everything has been done that should have been done, or can be done. We are working to improve the situation, as evidenced by an estimated reduction to 7.7 per cent this month.

"But to reduce the figure suddenly to 5.6 per cent would be likely to cause an increase in the amount of relief. In that case the saving in overhead would be far outweighed by the net financial result.

"In Cook county we must have our 30 branch offices, each one comparable to the single relief office in the next largest county. We have developed special services such as insurance adjustment and property analysis. These add to the overhead, but save the taxpayers' money in the long run."

STATE SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS THREE DECISIONS

The Illinois Supreme court yesterday refused to reverse its opinion, handed down in the December term, which held that private utilities do not have to pay the 2 per cent state sales tax on gas, light, and water. The decision of the reviewing court deprives the state department of finance of an estimated revenue of $6,000,000 annually. Two other decisions were given by the Supreme court yesterday. One affirmed the court's previous ruling that coal companies must pay the sales tax on retail sales. The other was a refusal of the court to interfere with its original decision upholding diversion of gasoline tax funds to school relief.

Girl's Tongue Amputated to Cure Abnormal Growth

Santa Ana, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The tongue of 4½ year old Effie May Jerome of Carlsbad, N. M., was amputated today in an operation necessitated by the organ's abnormal growth. Physicians believe the tongue will grow back again and that she may have its normal use. When she recovered consciousness after the operation she was able to talk with considerable clarity.

DOC TURNS ON HIS MAGNETISM—AND ZIP! GO THE ILLS

'Healer' Admits He 'Cures Anybody of Anything.'

dear, is that you're all mental. Just all mental. You have wonderful psychic powers. You're a natural born healer, without the magnetic force for it. That's why you're tired. You're all mind, my dear.

"Why," he said, in apparent alarm, adjusting his pince-nez and pointing dramatically to the reporter's collar bone, "from the neck on down you're just wasting away. Now, why should you treat yourself like that? Why not build yourself up? I can do it with my exercises and treatment."

The old doc removed his glasses, which hung from a black ribbon around his neck, and let his gaze travel over his visitor.

"Your neck's too thin," he said. "Your chest needs developing. Look at mine," he said, unbuttoning his coat and swelling his chest. "I know how to keep young. Why, your face is young, positively young, yet your body is old. You're too negative. That's what gives you nervous indigestion. You do have nervous indigestion, don't you? Your whole gastro-intestinal tract is wrong. And weak kidneys, too. Sure. I know you like a book."

After being convinced of having sold his visitor on the course of treatments, of which two a week would be necessary for a month, he said, Doc De Lisle instructed her to measure her neck, wrists, arms, ankles, waist, and legs, and write down the measurements. These should be tacked up on one's bathroom wall, "and in two months' time you will see the difference," he said.

Double-barreled Treatment.

"I wouldn't need to give you any exercises at all," he smiled. "I could just work on your mind. But I do both."

When the reporter again called to get her treatment the too blonde "Dr." Success De Lisle, his wife, received her. She led her into another room furnished with a narrow, high, flat table with a sheet on it, an electrical machine, and a chair or two. She bade the reporter lie down.

"O, doctor," she called in through the open door, "the lady has a sweater on. Is it necessary to remove it or can the force go right through it?"

The Old Doc said the force could penetrate the sweater, all right. He entered the room. He took the right side, his wife the left, and massaged legs, arms, and back.

"Just what is the force?" asked the reporter. "And will it cure my neuritis—and those other things that are the matter with me?"

"Odic" Force "Cures Anything."

"Will it cure you?" laughed the old pal of Sitting Bull. "It'll cure anything. It's the 'odic' force. I'm just powerful with it. My wife, she has a lot, too. But she can't transmit it to you as well as I can, because she and you are both of the female sex.

"That's why I gave her your left side to work on. The left side is female, the right side male. You have to get 'em harmonizing before the blood circulates right. Feel the force? Now I think you've had enough for one day. You just relax here a while. You'll sleep tonight, you'll see. You're going to be a good patient."

Mrs. "Doc" De Lisle then left the room, telling her magnetic husband to call her if he needed her. The "doctor" then gave both the male and the female sides of his "patient's" body a rest. They had undergone a thorough workout.

"Turn over on your stomach," he said, and began a chopping movement along the spine with the side of his hand. "I'm going pretty gentle with you," he continued, while his "patient" winced. "But up here," he went on, his voice rising and his "odic" force apparently mounting, "I have to dig in to get at those nerves which control your neuritis."

More Sore Spots Appear.

"That hurts," the patient protested. "It hurts a lot. Those shoulders are sore."

"Sure they're sore," laughed Old Doc De Lisle, and he punched the spinal cord at the back of the neck vigorously. "That sore, too? I thought so. We have to work all that congestion out."

Then, leaving the reporter weary from the peppy nerve manipulation along the spine, he began kneading her back along the sides.

"We'll have you all right in no time," he said consolingly. "With a more vigorous treatment——"

"If you don't mind, I feel so relaxed; suppose we let this be all for today," the reporter said.

Meanwhile he admonished the missus to get "the chart" for the reporter. This is the "De Lisle Self-Diagnostic Health Chart." A male and a female figure top the chart. From each one radiates lines indicating the seat of various disorders, from corns and bunions to nasal catarrh. Below are directions for the relief of the disorders.

The Egyptian System.

In his "preface" on the chart "Dr." De Lisle says of "this remarkable chart and Egyptian system of restorative movements":

"The system has been tried out by many noted physicians of different schools of healing and they agree that it checked the most malignant form of diseases. . . . If I could but enumerate a few of the given-up-to-die men, women, and children suffering with various complaints who have been relieved by this Ancient Art of the Occults, the people would look upon my chart as the greatest discovery for the sick that has been made in modern times."

"Patient lies on back same as in first position. . . . You will now place both hands on his thigh and make firm, gentle pressure, pinching and rolling the flesh until the feet are reached; repeating movements six to ten times, etc. . . ."

"Effect of No. 2: It attracts blood to the feet, thus heating them in a natural way. Beneficial in paralysis, cramps, high blood pressure, flat feet, and sciatic rheumatism, and the augmented action of the blood acts on the parts treated same as in No. 1."

Various "signs of disease" are listed in the chart. If the fingernails are long and curved from side to side there is a "natural weakness of lungs and throat."

After the reporter's treatment "Doc" De Lisle felt her pulse. It was much improved over the weak pulse she had shown on her first visit, he said.

As his "patient" paid her fee of $3 for the day's treatment and departed, she saw a woman with an obvious swelling in her neck and the prominent eyes, symptomatic of goiter, waiting for a treatment.

"Here, doctor, you're to give her the heart manipulation," said Mrs. Success before the door closed on the victim of weak kidneys and low magnetism.

Admiral Byrd's Flagship Collides with a Whale

ABOARD ADMIRAL BYRD'S FLAGSHIP, at Sea, Feb. 12. [Via Mackay Radio].—(AP)—The second Byrd antarctic expedition is expected to reach Dunedin, New Zealand, next Monday afternoon. At noon today this ship was 1,202 miles from port, with the Bear of Oakland one day behind. The flagship collided with a whale yesterday. The whale was stunned.

Empty Your Gall Bladder

And You'll Feel Like a Billion Dollars!

Sleepless nights, dog-tired days, headaches, pains in all parts of the body—indigestion—gas. Do you suffer from one or all?

And have you tried every medicine under the sun, only to find yourself back where you started?

No wonder, for you, like thousands of others have probably been treating yourself for everything but the right thing. Get at the unsuspected cause—your gall bladder. If sluggish, it won't pour into your small intestines the most important digestive juice necessary for neutralizing gastric acid, quickening digestion and disinfecting the intestinal tract. If this juice doesn't flow freely, then your food sours, putrifies, stomach becomes filled with gas and acidity.

From the world's greatest chemists comes a simple, pleasant means to make this digestive juice flow freely, and put you on the sunny side of life. Magnesia Oxoids, little white tablets that release pure oxygen. This amazing oxygen—purer than the air you breathe—plus magnesia, gently stimulates the gall bladder, neutralizes burning acidity and sweeps that poison-packed bowel clean.

Take two Oxoids after each meal—and before retiring—drink plenty of water—put your gall bladder to work—and you'll jump out of your skin for joy. Such new health! Such robust vigor! Get Magnesia Oxoids today from your druggist.—Advertisement.

J. A. Hagstrom, 201 East 38th St., New York City

Keeps in Tip-Top Form with Ex-Lax

BEING an artist isn't entirely the romantic life it's supposed to be. It means hard work and long hours. It means keeping fit, alert—never sluggish. And that, of course, means keeping free from constipation. The Ex-Lax reporter asked Mr. Hagstrom his opinion on that important subject. Here's what he had to say:

"My work is the type of thing that keeps me sitting at my drawing board. The nature of the work is very exacting, so that I must be on my toes all the time—keeping in tip-top form every day.

"Frequently I work day and night over stretches of time, so that my general condition is one of fatigue, and my meals are sent up to me and eaten right at my board. That, of course, is not conducive to being 'regular'.

"When I feel sluggish and hardly up to the task ahead of me, I find it advisable to take a laxative, so I use Ex-Lax, the chocolated laxative, at such times.

"I found it the best bet of all laxatives so far, since knowing of Ex-Lax last year through the radio program on WABC".

Maybe your drawing board is a work-bench, or a stove, or an office desk, a lathe, a locomotive throttle, or a steering wheel. But whatever you do, whatever kind of life you lead, you'll occasionally need the help of a good laxative.

Ex-Lax isn't just a good laxative . . . it's the best laxative. Not because we say so, but because the world says so. More people buy Ex-Lax than any other laxative. 46,000,000 boxes were sold last year alone.

Why? For these definite reasons: Ex-Lax is as thorough and effective in cleansing your system of poisonous waste as any laxative can possibly be. Yet, Ex-Lax action is so gentle. So painless. So pleasant and easy. No stomach pains; no griping.

Ex-Lax is non-habit-forming . . . you don't have to keep on taking more and more to get results.

That "Certain Something"

So many imitators have tried to produce a chocolated laxative that would equal Ex-Lax. But they couldn't. Why? Because Ex-Lax is more than just a chocolated laxative. Because the exclusive Ex-Lax process gives Ex-Lax a "certain something"—a certain ideal action—that words just can't explain—that no other laxative has. But once you try Ex-Lax, you'll know what we mean, and nothing else will ever do for you.

• • •

COLD WAVE HERE... and we mean colds. Sneezing, sniffling, coughing, misery-creating colds. Guard against them this way: Get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, keep out of drafts, keep your feet dry, and KEEP REGULAR... with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative.

PEORIANS ASK U. S. FUNDS FOR PUBLIC'S SAFETY

Favor Elevated Highways for Chicago.

BY HAL FOUST.

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Federal financing of an elevated highway system in Chicago was indorsed by a group of civic leaders of this city this noon, meeting as a section of the Illinois conference on highway safety legislation.

As a further measure for reducing the state's toll of automobile fatalities, the meeting also adopted resolutions calling on the state legislature to enact a drivers' license law and a financial responsibility law.

Editor Boosts for Project.

Frederick Arthur Stowe, Peoria newspaper editor and co-chairman of the session, in speaking in behalf of the elevated highway proposal recalled the slaughter from railroads in Chicago in the 90s before the steam lines were elevated. He worked for THE TRIBUNE at that time.

"The automobile problem must be solved in the same manner," he said, "by elevating the right of way for through trafic, from local trafic and from pedestrian trafic."

Lyle T. McArthur, chairman of the Peoria safety council and another former Chicagoan recited similar recollections of deadly railroad grade crossings in that city.

Same Problem Reappears.

"In the loss of human lives, first from trains and now from autmobiles, history is repeating itself," Mr. McArthur said. "Peoria will exert its full influence in behalf of its neighbor city to see that history repeats itself in correcting the situation."

Ald. John A. Massen [48th], chairman of the Chicago council trafic committee, told the meeting that the deaths from railroad grade crossings in the '90s that aroused public action were only a third as numerous as today's deaths from automobile trafic on grade streets.

"To elevate the railroads $125,000,000 was spent," Ald. Massen said. "To elevate 160 miles of highway, saving 700 lives and eliminating 12,000 personal injuries annually, will cost $100,000,000."

Wants Quick U. S. Help.

"This is not visionary," added Leslie Sorenson, trafic engineer for the city of Chicago, "but well within the realm of imminent achievement. The situation has become so critical that we can well expect the government to take over the project as part of the $4,880,000,000 work relief program now before congress."

James E. Bulger, director of the Chicago Motor club and co-chairman of the meeting, told that Senator James Hamilton Lewis is arranging an appointment in Washington for a Chicagoland delegation to petition for the $100,000,000 allotment for elevated highway construction.

"FLYING YANKEE" TO BRING SPEED TO NEW ENGLAND

Will Run Over 700 Miles as Daily Job.

BY HARRY A. LAIRD.

[Trafic Manager Chicago Tribune.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 12. — Of course, such things are commonplace out in Lincoln and Omaha, Neb., or Kansas City, Mo., but this city thought it a real treat the other day to get a view of a streamlined train in action. It was built by the Budd Manufacturing company at its Philadelphia works for the joint ownership of the Maine Central and Boston and Maine railroads.

After a few exhibition days at different points in New England, it will go into service between Bangor and Portland, Me., on the Maine Central, and between Portland and Boston on the Boston and Maine. Just how economical these new streamliners will be seems to be fully demonstrated by the fact that she will travel over seven hundred miles per day. A comparatively few years ago it would have required the services of five locomotives to haul a train this distance, and while great strides have been made by the railways in recent years with long steam runs, a performance of seven hundred miles would scarcely be called standard.

Make Few Changes.

The designers of the "Flying Yankee," as the new train will be called, made few changes from the "Zephyr" which is now in operation on the Burlington between Lincoln and Kansas City. More commodious quarters have been assigned to the engineer, but there is no mail section, so that the net result has been a slight gain in accommodations for passengers.

A train of this type seems admirably adapted to service between the important lumber center at Bangor and "The Hub" of New England. There are, of course, numerous intermediate towns all of which cannot be ignored, and stopping means little or nothing to this light weight, articulated train with its wonderful power of acceleration. Its trial runs consisted of three trips of forty miles each, and during the second trip the train attained a velocity of 101.5 miles per hour.

A closeup of another important event in the development of increased speeds on our railways is given by a trip on the No. 4,800, streamlined electric locomotive of the Pennsylvania railroad, over the just completed electrification of the road's main lines between Washington and New York. The job cost something like two hundred million dollars. The folks down that way are commencing to talk about service between Washington and New York at anywhere from three to four hours, but the Pennsylvania officials are noncommittal.

Trial Run Satisfactory.

They say they were satisfied with the initial trial run from Washington to Philadelphia during which the locomotive, hauling a nine car train, reached a peak speed of one hundred two miles per hour.

While through trains can at present be run all the way from New York to Washington on the electrified system, this stupendous undertaking is not yet finished. It is likely that the speed of both freight and passenger schedules will be greatly increased because on this stretch of their line the Pennsylvania has two objectives: the first to meet the public demand for speed set in motion by the airplane and the automobile, and, second, to clear the line of a tremendous volume of trafic, which must either be accomplished by moving all trafic that reaches it at a higher velocity or acquiring additional right of way for new tracks.

Missing Father, Son Die Near Wreckage of Plane

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The bodies of Frank Bowman Sr. and his son, Frank Bowman Jr., were found late today near the wreckage of their plane on a mountainside on the eastern slope of the San Andreas range, about 60 miles east of Hot Springs, N. M. The Bowmans had been missing since Sunday. They were en route to El Paso from Blackwell, Okla. The elder Bowman was a farmer of Berino, N. M., and his son was co-manager of the El Paso municipal airport.

DR. WYNEKOOP'S LAST CHANCE FOR FREEDOM DENIED

Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop lost her last chance for liberty yesterday when the Illinois Supreme court refused to grant a rehearing of her conviction for murdering her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, in the fall of 1933. The physician, now 63 years old, is serving a 25 year sentence in the women's penitentiary at Dwight, Ill.

Attorney W. W. Smith, who represented Dr. Wynekoop in her long battle to evade the sentence imposed by a jury in Judge Harry B. Miller's Criminal court, admitted when told of the decision that he had about exhausted all possible legal moves to free the physician from the penitentiary.

The Supreme court affirmed the jury finding at the December term of court. The rehearing petition was immediately filed and alleged that the Supreme court in its opinion overlooked certain points raised in the trial court in which it was alleged that Dr. Wynekoop was deprived of her rights without due process of law. Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, who prosecuted the case, said he would oppose any move before the pardon board for commutation of sentence.

PREACHER TELLS "CONFESSION" IN LINDY SLAYING

his charge until tomorrow morning. The case thus will go to the jury about noon tomorrow.

Wilentz had been practically through with his summation at the time of the interruption, and he elected not to say anything more, apparently feeling that any oratory would be an anticlimax.

Both the state and defense announced that the incident would probably not have any bearing on the jury's deliberations. There was much speculation concerning the exact meaning of the minister's remark.

State's Attorney Anthony M. Hauck Jr. declared that Burns had come to him several days ago and declared that Hauptmann had confessed the crime to him. The defense, of course, insisted that Burns meant some person other than Hauptmann.

Offered Story to Governor.

The minister also was said to have gone to former Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey with a story that Hauptmann had confessed to him. Attorney General Wilentz confirmed Hauck's assertion that Burns also had approached the state with his story. He expressed doubts concerning the man's mental condition.

Three Broadway columnists rushed forward with the assertion that they also had been offered the story by the minister, who had asked for a large sum of money for the tale.

The minister had been standing quietly in the crowd until he spoke up. Those standing near him said he had not conversed with them nor seemed excited until his outbreak.

Attorney General Wilentz asked Judge Trenchard "to deal properly with this individual" after the verdict in the Hauptmann case has been returned.

Climaxes Exciting Day.

The scene was the climax of a day of excitement. The attorney general talked steadily throughout the morning session and until 4 p. m. of the afternoon session, at which time came the Rev. Burns' interruption.

He rendered a powerful and emotional plea that the jury send Hauptmann to the electric chair.

"Men and women," he told the four women and eight men in the jury box, 'don't come in with any wishy washy verdict carrying a recommendation for mercy. There may be cases when such a recommendation is justified, but this is not one of them.

"Bruno Deserves Death."

"This man deserves death."

In the last few minutes of his argument he voiced plainly the fear that some juror might be influenced by a friendship for one of the defense counsel. Rumors that the defense has at least one friendly juror among the twelve have given rise to reports that there would be a disagreement.

"Hauptmann stands at the foot of that kidnap ladder with the blood of the baby on his hands," he shouted, "hoping that one juror will help him for the sake of Fisher [C. Lloyd Fisher, Flemington attorney who has assisted in the defense] or Reilly. He hopes for a life sentence, knowing that he may be walking the streets again in 15 years.

Calls Evidence Positive.

"The evidence is positive, conclusive, and overwhelming against this man. You will have no excuse for giving him anything less than the death penalty. You never will forgive yourselves if you lack courage to return a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

"You have a chance to do here something for society, to make the streets more secure for children, to relieve mothers of their dread of the kidnaper.

"Col. Lindbergh recognized the voice of this defendant and he says he believes that this man kidnaped his baby. That ought to be enough for you. If he's satisfied, you should be satisfied."

Opens Fiery Attack.

Whereas Reilly yesterday snorted and sneered at the state's case, his voice making the courtroom windows rattle, Wilentz, less loud, was just as fiery, and he eclipsed the big Brooklyn attorney in his venomous characterization of the defense witnesses and Hauptmann in particular.

His voice fairly dripped loathing as he asserted that he hated to be in the same room with Hauptmann, to breathe the same air breathed by the defendant.

"Just to look at him makes me feel itchy and oozy," he remarked in disgust.

Hauptmann regarded the little prosecutor with anger in his eyes, but displayed no other emotion. The face of the defendant's wife, Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, was gray as she listened to the scathing arraignment by the attorney general.

Jury Listens Intently.

The jury was most attentive to Wilentz as he reviewed the state's case. He reviewed in detail the testimony of the handwriting experts who said Hauptmann wrote all the ransom notes. He declared it was not necessary to prove that Hauptmann was alone in the kidnaping, but only that he actually was the man who climbed the ladder to the nursery and took the infant.

He defended Betty Gow, the nursemaid; Violet Sharpe, the maid who committed suicide; Ollie Whately, the Lindbergh butler who died later, and "Red" Johnson, Betty's boy friend. He pointed out also that Isador Fisch, the dead partner of Hauptmann, had not been shown to be guilty of any crime.

"But if Fisch helped Hauptmann," he cried, "that doesn't make Hauptmann innocent of the crime."

Pauses to Look at Bruno.

Every now and then Wilentz turned to look at Hauptmann and excoriate him.

"Look at him," he shouted. "There is ice water in his veins. He is cold and strong as steel!

"Public enemy No. 1 of the world!

"I wonder if the switch of the electric current will thaw him out?"

He also defended Dr. John F. Condon, who paid over $50,000 of Col. Lindbergh's money as ransom, and who was attacked by Reilly as "standing behind something unholy in this case."

"Did you ever see a more lovable character?" he asked, referring to Condon. "Sweet as honey, pure as the snow."

Bitter About Reilly.

Wilentz had a few bitter words about Reilly himself.

"Criminals think they can get away with anything, if they have the right mouthpiece," he remarked.

"If there is a clamor of the country for this man's conviction," he told the jury, "it is because the American people believe this man guilty."

Then he turned to Col Lindbergh.

"We want you to know, colonel," he said, "that no king or country can do anything for you. No one can bring back your child.

"But we can, by our verdict, try to make this country more secure. This fellow inspired the greatest series of crimes in the history of our nation. The American gangster never knew about murder in kidnaping before he showed the way. There was some honor among thieves before. If the money was paid, the captive was turned loose.

"But Hauptmann taught them a new system. Murder the prisoner and they can't catch you. He has caused sorrow in millions of homes.

"Whenever a child is missing for a few minutes, there is panic in the home. We cannot restore your child, but we can translate your loss and sorrow into some gain for civilization. We can serve society by crushing these snakes who commit these crimes."

OPENING OF SESSION

The combination of Lincoln's birthday, a holiday, and the fact that the case was nearing the jury brought out by far the greatest crowd that has yet gathered around the courthouse. The jurors had difficulty struggling through the thousands who milled about in Main street. Scores of state police maintained a narrow lane through which the twelve passed.

Justice Trenchard glanced out over the crowded courtroom, remarked that "the room is manifestly overcrowded," and warned the audience against any demonstration.

"I'm not here only for the state of New Jersey," he declared. "I'm here for the people of this country. If, as my adversary says, there is a clamor of the mob for the death of this man, then it seems to me that clamor must be based upon the evidence that has been presented here.

"'Judge not lest ye be judged,' says my adversary, but he forgets the other biblical injunction that he that killeth shall himself be killed."

Starts Attack on Bruno.

"Every avenue of evidence which we have followed in this case leads to the door of this defendant, Bruno Richard Hauptmann."

As he warmed to his task Wilentz's voice rose. He shouted:

"No defense counsel can intimidate me, and I don't think he can intimidate you with the old army gag that some one may confess to this crime 10 years hence."

As long as the jurors live, Wilentz said, their services "to the state and nation" will be remembered.

"We ask of you merely that you do your duty," he asserted. "You can't compromise with murderers. There have been cases in which a recommendation of mercy was justified, but this is not one of them. Either this man is guilty or he is innocent. Don't get weak!"

Scorns Reilly's Theory.

It was not necessary, Wilentz asserted, to prove that Hauptman was alone in the kidnaping.

"If he had 50 accomplices," Wilentz shouted, "that does not affect his guilt. The associations of Mr. Reilly were the product of an experienced legal mind hoping to plant in the mind of at least one juror a doubt."

Turning to point at Hauptmann, Wilentz yelled:

"Look at him! He's cold, isn't he? But he'll be thawed out when he hears that switch!"

Wilentz asserted that the United States would be made ridiculous in the eyes of the world if, on some legal technicality such as the time or place of the crime, Hauptmann should be acquitted.

"The only point here," he declared, "is whether Hauptmann was the fellow who went into that room and took the baby."

What type of man, Wilentz asked the jury, would kidnap the child of Col. Lindbergh?

"Why, if that curly headed youngster had been left in a jungle the most venomous snake would have passed him by.

"No American racketeer kidnaped this child. There were many more wealthy people around New York than Col. Lindbergh.

"It had to be a man," Wilentz shouted, "with ice water in his veins. The kind of a man who believed himself bigger than Lindbergh. The kind of man who would rob the mayor's house in his own German community because there is something peculiar in his makeup which makes him pick out distinguished persons for his crimes.

Reviews Reilly's Arguments.

Then the attorney general began a consideration of Reilly's final arguments of yesterday.

"Did you ever hear anything like it before?" he demanded. "No person was safe from his attacks."

He ordered Col. Schwarzkopf to stand up.

"Does he look like the crook that Reilly painted him?" he asked the jury. "He has been pilloried in this case, but do you think he, with German blood in his veins, wanted to persecute another German?"

He ordered Inspector Henry Bruckman to stand.

"He's also called a crook and a faker of evidence.

"Does he look that type of man? Does he deserve that sort of treatment from this burglar, convict, and murderer? He was accused of faking Condon's address and telephone number on the board in Hauptmann's closet. But you will remember up in the Bronx that Hauptmann himself admitted putting them there."

It was unfortunate, Wilentz declared, that attorneys were permitted to "assassinate character" in court.

"Why, it's getting to be in this country," he shouted, "that criminals think they can get away with anything if they have the right lawyer, the right mouthpiece. The police are accused of crookedness here, but it is unfortunately true that there are more crooks among lawyers than among policemen!"

Reilly Smiles at Charges.

"One and a half years before Hauptmann was arrested, Koehler came to that Bronx lumber yard where, in December, 1931, Hauptmann bought $9 worth of lumber," Wilentz pointed out. "So his character had to be assassinated, too. And so with other witnesses. They have to be pushed down into the gutter in order that this defendant may be saved from the fate he deserves.

"The handwriting experts were reviled. Why, Osborn, the first one, is 80 years old. Do you think he, soon to face his God, would perjure himself?

"We sent for independent opinions from handwriting experts all over the country. From California came the opinion—Hauptmann! From Chicago—Hauptmann! From the south—Hauptmann!"

He pointed out that the defense had stated that a number of experts would be called, but that only one was placed on the stand.

"Where are those other experts?" he asked.

Again Wilentz remarked upon Reilly's assertion that the defense was penniless.

"I think they've got lots of money!" he shouted.

"There was money enough to hire the best criminal lawyer in the east, a man who has represented more criminals than any other man in New York. Certainly, all these lawyers are not here just to glory in the blood of the Lindbergh baby! I think they have spent more money than the state!"

Defends "Red" Johnson.

As to Reilly's insinuations about "Red" Johnson, Wilentz pointed out that the state and government had completely checked his movements and found him innocent.

"If we had brought him back," Wilentz remarked, "Reilly would then have charged us with wasting your money."

Having been a criminal attorney himself, Wilentz remarked, he was acquainted with some of the methods of criminal lawyers.

"That's why I had to bring Hannah Fisch over here," he declared. "We didn't need her here at all, but if she hadn't appeared there would have been all sorts of insinuations about her, too."

Betty Gow, Wilentz pointed out, came from Scotland to testify.

"If there was one particle of guilt in her mind do you think she would have come back?" he asked.

Terms Nurse Eager to Aid.

"Contrast her attitude with that of Hauptmann when he heard that New Jersey wanted to put him on trial. We had to go through long court hearings before the very reluctant Mr. Hauptmann would come down here."

Even Col. Lindbergh and Mrs. Dwight Morrow, grandmother of the child, had not been spared by Reilly, Wilentz commented.

"Of course, he didn't call them liars," he said. "They were only mistaken. A witness who never had seen Violet Sharpe before could not be mistaken, but Mrs. Morrow was mistaken about a member of her own household."

The plaster cast of the footprint had been ready for admission if the defense wished it, Wilentz asserted.

"It was in that back room, and so was the phonograph record of Dr. Condon's voice," he said. "But they didn't want it. I would have loved to have had you hear it."

Reilly objected to any discussion of the record. The judge directed Wilentz to proceed.

"Why were they afraid of that record?" Wilentz shouted. "Because they didn't want to hear that story again."

"Lunatics, Idiots Attracted."

If the kidnaping had involved a less prominent family, Wilentz asserted, the case would have been over in a week and the defendant sentenced to death.

"But the fame and glory of Lindbergh has attracted lunatics, idiots, and criminals wanting to bask in the limelight of this case!" he yelled. "No Edward J. Reilly would have come forward if this case had received less publicity!"

"I don't know if I could sit 15 feet away, day after day, from the man I believed murdered my child and let him live to face a jury," he remarked. "But Col. Lindbergh has contributed to law and order in this case."

He recalled the ransom payment scene.

"Reilly asked where was the box that contained the ransom money," Wilentz remarked. "You will remember that Condon testified that Hauptmann took both box and money. So, if counsel wants to know anything more about that box, I respectfully refer him to his client."

It was at Col. Lindbergh's own request that the police adopted tactics which caused Reilly to make his charge of "bungling," Wilentz said.

"Right or wrong, Col. Lindbergh begged the police not to interfere," he declared.

"He was human, and his sole interest then was to get the child back unharmed."

He discussed Reilly's attack upon Violet Sharpe and Betty Gow.

"Why, Betty Gow often had the sole possession of that child," he pointed out. "And Violet Sharpe worked at Englewood, not Hopewell. If they were members of a gang, they had hundreds of better opportunities to kidnap the child."

Defends Dead Butler.

The fox terrier in the Lindbergh house did not bark, Wilentz said, because he was in the corner of the big structure farthest removed from the nursery.

"There was nothing too malicious, too low for the defense in this case to stoop to in order to plant, if possible, a single germ of doubt in one juror's mind," he declared. "Because that is their only hope.

"Remember that this jury is bound by the proof, not by any insinuations from any attorney," he warned the jurors.

Wilentz had been talking for an hour and a half. He requested and obtained a five minute recess. When he resumed his summation he remarked:

"Now, please don't get the idea that the state has to prove everything beyond a reasonable doubt.

"The defense attorney has called this the crime of the century. I say the real crime of the century will occur if this man should be freed. Mothers will snatch up their children from the streets, and it will be a crime of which you will be guilty."

It was not necessary, Wilentz said, to present a moving picture of Hauptmann entering the nursery.

"Didn't Need Rehersal."

"Reilly argued that he was unfamiliar with the nursery room," he added. "An experienced burglar, like Hauptmann, doesn't need a rehersal."

Again, referring to the nationality of the defendant, Wilentz declared:

"He is a German, but he has disgraced his country. The German people are no more responsible for this man than the Italian people were responsible for Zangara, who murdered Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago in attempting to assassinate President Roosevelt."

The state's theory, Wilentz said, was that Hauptmann killed the child in the nursery itself.

"BABY SLAIN IN CRIB"

"He crushed the life out of that little body right there in the crib!" he shouted.

"That is why there was no outcry. Did he use the chisel to knock it into insensibility? Isn't that a fair inference? What else was the chisel for?"

Reilly had asserted that if any one had stepped on the suit case under the window it would have been crushed. Wilentz threw the suit case down before the jury and stepped upon it.

"Does it break under my weight, 160 pounds?" he demanded.

Reilly smiled his appreciation of this courtroom stunt. Wilentz was using tactics which Reilly could understand and admire.

"There's been a lot of talk about bungling by the police," Wilentz continued, "but what has that to do with the guilt of the defendant?"

He continued to take up Reilly's arguments, one by one, remarking:

"I don't attach any significance to them, but I can't risk the chance that one of you may have been influenced by them.

"Reilly insinuated that Condon always had been alone when he talked with the ransom collector. It was Hauptmann who picked out cemeteries in which to meet. That was typical, because there is so much that is dead in this case. The people they accuse are physically dead and the witnesses they brought in from the jails and asylums are morally dead.

"Condon Sufficient Witness."

"As to Condon, if he had been the only witness, that would be enough for a verdict of first degree murder.

"Supposing Condon was dead. There is the cab driver Perrone. Reilly disposes of him by saying: 'Can you believe trash like that?' I admire Mr. Reilly to stand up as he did with a mask of sincerity and talk like that—that was a masterpiece.

"You will remember Perrone. He gave a description of Hauptmann long before Hauptmann was arrested, and he pointed here in court to Hauptmann, and there was no doubt about it."

Discussing the treasury agent, Frank, Wilentz said:

"Reilly accused the treasury agent of seeking the favor of Senator Morrow, who might have become president. Why, Senator Morrow was dead before this crime was committed. He was spared the shame that came to his fellow citizens when this crime was committed."

As to Reilly's remark about Col. Lindbergh's hearing, Wilentz declared:

"I think Mr. Reilly was ashamed of that remark. Lindy—whose ears were trained to every little throb of the engine that carried him alone over that ocean.

"Couldn't Forget Voice."

"He wanted to get his baby back! There he was, out there in the cemetery, every sense attuned to what was happening. He was going to get Anne's baby back! And he heard that voice calling 'hey, Doctor!'

"Do you think he ever could forget it? Why, there is something weird about that voice. If it spoke above a whisper now, I would know without turning around whose it was. I hear it nights in my dreams myself!"

Wilentz declared he had seen lawyers with weak cases, but he had never heard "so many unfair insinuations as came from the lips of Mr. Reilly."

He picked up a picture of the Lindbergh baby lying in the grave where the body was found.

"Take a look at that body," he ordered the jurors. He turned and pointed to Hauptmann. "Take a look at it, and then look at that man there who left it in a grave."

Discusses Stock Deal Story.

He discussed Hauptmann's story that Fisch gave him money to put into the stock market.

"Not a living soul ever saw Fisch give Hauptmann a quarter," he pointed out.

"And about the ransom money," he added. "Take note that not one ransom bill has been passed in the world since this man was arrested.

"He had $200 between him and starvation on April 2, 1932. You may think it fantastic, but he began planning this crime a month after the baby was born. But on April 2 he was nearly broke.

"He had not met Fisch then. When he was first arrested, he said he had met Fisch in July or August of 1932."

"They amount to $49,986."

WILENTZ RESUMES

Resuming his summation, at the beginning of the afternoon session, Wilentz asserted that one of the attempts to intimidate the jury was the constant reference to the circumstantial nature of the evidence against Hauptmann.

"All the lip evidence in the world can be upset by circumstantial evidence," he declared. "It is my opinion that circumstantial evidence is stronger, in many instances, that the testimony of witnesses.

Points to Identification.

"That is not to say that this case is wholly circumstantial. We have Condon's identification, we have Hochmuch, and Whited, and Lupica."

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh selected a lonely region in the Sourland mountain region because they were "cursed by publicity and fame" and wanted solitude, Wilentz said.

"Look around this room," Wilentz shouted, gazing scornfully at the crowd wedged into the courtroom, "and you'll get an idea of what Col. Lindbergh has to undergo every day of his life."

Then came the kidnaping, he continued, and "every crank in the world began writing letters to the Lindberghs."

"Hauptmann was smart enough to know that," Wilentz said. "So he put his own symbol on the letters so that nobody else could get the money, and Hauptmann alone knew that symbol. It was the mark that proved the letter was genuine. Hauptmann was brilliant that way. He couldn't spell well, but there was something in his mind that makes men turn to crooked pursuits."

Wilentz recalled that the entire world was interested in the solution of the kidnaping case.

"Was it any wonder then that Dr. Condon should offer his services in the case?" he asked. "Condon is an educator of long standing. They have been attempting to vilify him here. They call him eccentric apparently because he is 75 years old—any man who comes in here over 45 years old and testifies for the state is eccentric, according to the defense.

Traces Ransom Deals.

He traced in detail Condon's negotiations with the ransom collector.

"There was the note delivered by Perrone, the cab driver," he remarked. "Did you notice that Hauptmann never denied giving that note to Perrone? Perrone had Hauptmann's description that very day, and yet Reilly calls that evidence a plant. That word is a very popular one with attorneys representing guilty clients."

He retold the story of Condon's first talk with "John," a conversation lasting an hour and 20 minutes; of the promise to send the baby's sleeping suit, and the fulfilment of that promise.

"And this fellow Heier, the cabaret owner," he remarked, "who says he was there the night of April 2 when the ransom was paid. Why, he couldn't even describe the cemetery wall."

The payment of the $50,000 ransom put 50,000 clews in circulation, Wilentz said.

"And this man," he continued, staring at Hauptmann, "sent Col. Lindbergh on a wild goose chase while he laughingly counted the money.

"Why, this man is so cold-blooded, so merciless, that he would cut your heart out with a razor and then go upstairs and eat."

Finally, he declared, Hauptmann was captured through the passage of a $10 gold note.

"He lied and lied after that arrest," he added. Wilentz then turned to the handwriting charts.

Calls Bruno Perjurer.

"Now he says the police dictated the misspellings to him. I am going to prove that was rank perjury. And perjury, to my mind, is second only to murder. Not an American institution would be left if perjury were rampant."

Hauptmann, Wilentz declared, had asserted that the police told him to spell "signature" as "singnature."

"But not once in all the request writing is there the word 'signature,'" Wilentz pointed out. "What a fake, what a fraud, what a joke! Perjury means nothing to this man if he thereby can save himself from the electric chair."

Wilentz returned to the subject of the finding of the ransom money. He pointed out that Hauptmann denied any knowledge of the money until after it all had been discovered and that he then "concocted" the story that Fisch had left him the money.

Attacks Fisch Angle.

"Reilly said he would prove Fisch guilty of this and of that," the prosecutor shouted. "All he did prove was that Fisch died in poverty, that he borrowed money from Hauptmann and that he lived in the cheapest room in a boarding house.

"And even if they want to bring the dead in here, even if you think that Fisch helped Hauptmann, that does not exculpate Hauptmann.

"Look at him!" Wilentz yelled, pointing at Hauptmann.

"Like steel. Strong! Why, he's stronger than the gang of us together. He's got a will power that is like steel."

And a moment later, he remarked:

"The defense complains about the treatment given them. Why, we've treated this man too well. I've never gone into his cell to question him. If I had my way, I'd never enter the same room with him, breath the same air he breathes. When I'm in his presence, I feel itchy."

Turns to Nail Holes.

Wilentz talked at some length about the four nail holes.

"I think Dr. Hudson was in this case merely for the advertising," he said. "He wanted an ad for his fingerprint process. He could remember only one nail hole. Why, you've got to believe, if you believed the defense, that we punched three holes in there. What a joke!"

He took up the two boards introduced by the defense.

"These boards were tampered with," he declared. "If you smell them in the jury room you can smell the chemical that was used on them."

He turned to the handwriting charts again and pointed to similarities between Hauptmann's writing and the writing in the ransom notes.

"There's a beaut," he explained as he pointed out one similarity.

"Why, you could show these samples to your children at home," he remarked again, "and they'd tell you they were written by the same man.

"I've spent so much time on this handwriting," he concluded, "because if you're convinced that Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes, then that's all you need to find him guilty."

MINISTER'S ACCOUNT OF 'CONFESSION' IN LINDBERGH SLAYING

Fort Lee, N. J., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Rev. Vincent Burns, who interrupted the state's summation of its case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann at Flemington today, announced Nov. 23, 1934, that a man had come to his church in 1932 and "confided to me his part in a kidnaping crime."

Burns, brother of the chain gang fugitive, Robert Elliott Burns, said at that time the man was "extremely nervous and agitated and that while he did not mention the Lindbergh baby it was understood between us that he referred to that crime.

"He begged me to turn him over to the police," Burns said in his Nov. 23 statement, and added:

"At this time I cannot make positive identification of this man as Hauptmann, because I have not yet seen Hauptmann. But pictures of Hauptmann resemble the man who came to my church."

Asked why he had not turned the man over to police at the time of the alleged confession, Burns said "that was out of the question; he came to my church for protection."

U. S. DELEGATION TO ROTARY MEET ARRIVES IN CHINA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 12.—Paul Percy Harris of Chicago, founder and president emeritus of the International Association of Rotary Clubs, and Robert L. Hill of Columbia, Mo., president of Rotary International, arrived here today en route to the Far Eastern Rotary convention at Manila. They were accompanied on the S. S. President Coolidge by a large delegation of Americans, Japanese, Australians, and New Zealanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Walker of Chicago were also among the American delegation.

Harris and Hill stated that the complicated political issues in the far east would be excluded from all discussions at Manila, but both admitted they were aware of a strong undercurrent of nationalistic sentiment among the delegations representing China, Japan, the Philippines, and other groups.

MINERS CAPTURE WATER TUNNEL IN CONTRACT FIGHT

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP)—In a surprise move today, ninety "hard rock" men employed by the Metropolitan Water district took possession of the San Jacinto tunnel section of the Colorado river aqueduct project and ousted forces of the Wenzel & Henoch construction firm of Milwaukee.

The firm, which had a 7½ million dollar contract to bore the thirteen mile tunnel, refused recently to vacate the job after General Manager Frank E. Weymouth of the aqueduct project canceled the contract, charging unreasonable delay in the work.

District employés, in squads of thirty men each, moved on the three centers of work at the tunnel and took possession. The contracting firm's forces "made no resistance," it was said. The work centers are at one end and at two vertical shafts along the route of the tunnel.

ASKS CITY POLICE TO AID BOYS IN SANE RECREATION

Judge McGoorty Tells Way to Stifle Crime.

The attention of Chicago's police force was directed to the field of recreation yesterday by Judge John P. McGoorty of the Superior court, who urged policemen to help reduce crime by aiding underprivileged youths to find wholesome use for their leisure time.

Some 500 policemen listened intently as Judge McGoorty, speaking at the detective bureau, outlined to them the steps sponsored by the Chicago recreation commission, in coöperation with the Chicago Police institute, to help approximately 1,000,000 Chicago youths under the age of 18.

"Boys," said Judge McGoorty, "are social animals. They like to herd in gangs. Some gangs are good, but many are bad. We have learned how to break up the bad gangs, but our great problem is what to do with the boys after their gang is destroyed."

Many Recreational Facilities.

The most wholesome outlet for their energy is, he said, the recreational facilities provided in Chicago, in which many millions of dollars already have been invested from public and private funds. Among these he listed parks, museums, beaches, etc., and advised the policemen to direct the boys in the use of them.

"When the gangs are broken up friendly advice should be given those boys individually as to what to do; but," he cautioned, "before policemen can give that advice they must be looked upon as elder brothers or friends.

"It is important that the boy look upon the policeman not as his natural enemy but as his natural friend."

On Own Much of Time.

Quoting from a statement prepared by Philip L. Seman, chairman of the Chicago recreation commission, Judge McGoorty asserted that 40 per cent of the life of the average child is spent outside of home or school.

"And that 40 per cent," said the judge, "determines character. Consequently, play during those hours should be wholesome and supervised, as it is at the recreational centers. The morale of children must be kept up in these times of unemployment as well as that of adults."

The meeting was the first of a series of lectures on how the 5,000 policemen of Chicago can help solve the problem of Chicago's youth. In general, the lectures will present a résumé of the work of local recreational centers.

BRUNO'S MOTHER CLINGS TO HOPE FOR ACQUITTAL

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

KAMENZ, Germany, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's aged mother tonight was convinced "the American jury will do justice to my son."

While Hauptmann's old home town buzzed with excitement over the forthcoming decision of the jury at Flemington, N. J., which will decide whether he is guilty of murdering Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's baby, Frau Pauline Hauptmann said:

"No, they simply cannot condemn a man without the slightest bit of positive evidence."

Told of Bruno's desire to return to Kamenz in case he is acquitted, she said: "Nothing would brighten up the evening of my life more than to have my son and his family back here." She added the wish that he might return in time for her 70th birthday in June.

Residents of Kamenz are as confident as Hauptmann's mother that he will be acquitted.

SETH PARKER'S S O S JUSTIFIED BY RESCUE SHIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 12. — Phillips Lord—Seth Parker of the radio—announced today by radiogram from the South Pacific that he has received a message from Capt. MacLeod of the Australian cruiser Australia which said:

"I realize what you have been through. There has never been any question of your calling upon me unnecessarily. Good-by and good luck."

This was calculated to spike any rumors that Lord's round the world ship, the Seth Parker, had broadcast an S O S for a publicity stunt.

Lord Stays on Ship.

The Australia, with the duke of Gloucester, third son of King George aboard, took nine members of the crew off Lord's distressed ship last night. Lord, with his navigator, Capt. Constantin Flink, Radio Operator Carey R. Sweeney, and Cadets Robert Rueschle and Robert Payes, refused to leave the storm disabled vessel. Today they are awaiting the arrival of the American naval tug, Ontario, from Pago Pago, Samoa, hoping it will be possible to have the Seth Parker towed to Tutuila, in the Samoas.

The Australia, meanwhile, was standing by to give aid in case the Seth Parker showed signs of breaking up before the heavy seas. The warship has been in the neighborhood since early Sunday.

In a report today to the National Broadcasting company, describing the adventures of his ship since the storm struck it last Thursday, Lord said:

"Thursday gale, forerigging carried away. Hurricane signs. Friday afternoon worse. Learned Australia would pass near. Saturday morning better weather. Australia stood by . . . then proceeded.

"Saturday night struck by hurricane winds, mountainous seas. Started leaking. Top rigging carried away. Late Sunday storm sails torn loose. Every minute expected capsize. Flashed distress signal. Australia headed back . . . arrived . . . crew rescued. I refused to leave and Sweeney, Capt. Flink refused to leave me."

CLEW TO REFUSAL.

One reason advanced locally to explain the refusal of Phillips Lord and his navigator and radio operator to leave the apparently doomed Seth Parker is the fact that they have aboard approximately $50,000 worth of broadcasting equipment belonging to the National Broadcasting company.

Lord had some trouble in Jamaica with NBC over the custodianship of this property. He halted his around the world trip there several months ago to make a motion picture. During the filming several natives were accidentally killed and Lord got some adverse publicity which also involved NBC, newspaper pictures showing their microphones.

An NBC executive was dispatched to the West Indies to demand the return of the NBC equipment. A reconciliation was effected, however, and Lord resumed his trip and broadcasts over NBC.

Lord is said to be desirous of continuing in the good graces of the network and is believed to be acting on the assumption that he can do that only by making every effort to save his ship and the equipment.

"MY LIFE," AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Churchill as Naval Chief Inspects Cadets

Winston Churchill is shown inspecting boys of the training ship Mercury when he was England's first lord of the admiralty. In his autobiography, which is appearing in The Tribune, he describes his first meeting with naval officer who later became Britain's youngest admiral, Beatty.

In the thick of a battle with dread dervishes in Egypt described in Winston Churchill's autobiography, every British soldier was part of a machine. Twenty minutes after the battle's end, the account continues, they breakfasted.

BY WINSTON CHURCHILL.

In one respect a cavalry charge is very like ordinary fire. So long as you are all right, firmly in your saddle, your horse in hand, and well armed, lots of enemies will give you a wide berth. But as soon as you have lost a stirrup, have a rein out, have dropped your weapon, are wounded, or your horse is wounded, then is the moment when from all quarters enemies rush upon you. Such was the fate of not a few of my comrades in the troops immediately on my left.

Brought to an actual standstill in the enemy's mass, clutched at from every side, stabbed at and hacked at by spear and sword, they were dragged from their horses and cut to pieces by the infuriated foe. But this I did not at the time see or understand. My impressions continued to be sanguine.

I thought we were masters of the situation, riding the enemy down, scattering them and killing them. I pulled my horse up and looked about me. There was a mass of Dervishes about forty or fifty yards away on my left. They were huddling and clumping themselves together, rallying for mutual protection. They seemed wild with excitement, dancing about on their feet, shaking their spears up and down. The whole scene seemed to flicker. I have an impression, but it is too fleeting to define, of brown clad Lancers mixed up here and there with this surging mob. The scattered individuals in my immediate neighborhood made no attempt to molest me. Where was my troop? Where were the other troops of the squadron?

Can't See the British.

Within a hundred yards of me I could not see a single officer or man. I looked back at the Dervish mass. I saw two or three riflemen crouching and aiming their rifles at me from the fringe of it. Then for the first time that morning I experienced a sudden sensation of fear. I felt myself absolutely alone.

I thought these riflemen would hit me and the rest devour me like wolves. What a fool I was to loiter like this in the midst of the enemy! I crouched over the saddle, spurred my horse into a gallop and drew clear of the mêlée. Two or three hundred yards away I found my troop all ready faced about and partly formed up.

The other three troops of the squadron were reforming close by. Suddenly in the midst of the troop up sprung a Dervish. How he got there I do not know. He must have leaped out of some scrub or hole. All the troopers turned upon him thrusting with their lances; but he darted to and fro, causing for the moment a frantic commotion.

Wounded several times, he staggered towards me raising his spear. I shot him at less than a yard. He fell on the sand, and lay there dead. How easy to kill a man! But I did not worry about it. I found I had fired the whole magazine of my Mauser pistol, so I put in a new clip of ten cartridges before thinking of anything else.

I was still prepossessed with the idea that we had inflicted great slaughter on the enemy and had scarcely suffered at all ourselves. Three or four men were missing from my troop. Six men and nine or ten horses were bleeding from spear thrusts or sword cuts. We all expected to be ordered immediately to charge back again.

Ready to Charge Again.

The men were ready, though they all looked serious. Several asked to be allowed to throw away their lances and draw their swords. I asked my second sergeant if he had enjoyed himself. His answer was: "Well, I don't exactly say I enjoyed it, sir, but I think I'll get more used to it next time." At this the whole troop laughed.

But now from the direction of the enemy there came a succession of grisly apparitions; horses spouting blood, struggling on three legs, men staggering on foot, men bleeding from terrible wounds, fish hook spears stuck right through them, arms and faces cut to pieces, bowels protruding, men gasping, crying, collapsing, expiring. Our first task was to succour these; and meanwhile the blood of our leaders cooled.

Hacked Bodies of Lancers.

They remembered for the first time that we had carbines. Everything was still in great confusion. But trumpets were sounded and orders shouted, and we all moved off at a trot towards the flank of the enemy. Arrived at a position from which we could enfilade and rake the watercourse, two squadrons were dismounted and in a few minutes with their fire at three hundred yards compelled the Dervishes to retreat. We therefore remained in possession of the field. Within twenty minutes of the time when we had first wheeled into line and begun our charge, we were halted and breakfasting in the very watercourse that had so nearly proved our undoing.

There one could see the futility of the much vaunted arme blanche. The Dervishes had carried off their wounded, and the corpses of thirty or forty enemy were all that could be counted on the ground. Among these lay the bodies of over twenty Lancers, so hacked and mutilated as to be mostly unrecognizable. In all out of 310 officers and men the regiment had lost in the space of about two or three minutes five officers and sixty-five men killed and wounded, and 120 horses—nearly a quarter of its strength.

Such were my fortunes in this celebrated episode. It is very rarely that cavalry and infantry, while still both unshaken, are intermingled as the result of an actual collision. Either the infantry keep their heads and shoot the cavalry down, or they break into confusion and are cut down or speared as they run. But the two or three thousand Dervishes who faced the 21st Lancers in the watercourse at Omdurman were not in the least shaken by the stress of battle or afraid of cavalry.

Good Control of Fire.

Their fire was not good enough to stop the charge, but they had no doubt faced horsemen many a time in the wars with Abyssinia. They were familiar with the ordeal of the charge. It was the kind of fighting they thoroughly understood. Moreover the fight was with equal weapons, for the British too fought with sword and lance as in the days of old.

A white gunboat seeing our first advance had hurried up the river in the hopes of being of assistance. From the crow's nest, its commander, Beatty, watched the whole event with breathless interest. Many years passed before I met this officer or knew he had witnessed our gallop. When we met, I was first lord of the admiralty and he the youngest admiral in the royal navy. "What did it look like?" I asked him. "What was your prevailing impression?" "It looked," said Admiral Beatty, "like plum duff; brown currants scattered about in a great deal of suet." With this striking, if somewhat homely, description, my account of this adventure may fittingly close.

STRANGE MALADY FATAL TO NINTH YOUTH IN FAMILY

Belmont, O., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—The strange blight that has taken nine sons of one family's daughters in three generations had robbed the Dietrich family of its last son today.

John, 16, succumbed last night to the mysterious form of paralysis that killed his brother, Glenn, 17, last Friday. Four years ago another Dietrich brother, Samuel, then 17, died.

All of the disease's victims have perished before they reached 18.

The passing of John fulfilled the tradition that sons of the daughters of the Taylor-Tracy line must die before reaching their majority. The paralysis first struck the family 67 years ago. Mrs. Alice Dietrich, mother of Glenn and John, saw five of her cousins and two of her nephews succumb to the malady.

Street Car Fares and City Streets

FARES paid by passengers who ride on street cars have contributed toward the construction of a large portion of the pavement in 500 miles of city streets.

Car fares also pay for the maintenance of this pavement.

But that is only part of the story

- Every year $365,000—$1,000 a day—of the money collected in street car fares is paid to the city for street cleaning and snow removal.
- Then, when snow falls, Surface Lines snow plows and sweepers clear the snow from the tracks and push it back to the curb. This enables street cars to continue serving the public. Unfortunately it also makes street car streets the most desirable for other vehicles and these vehicles in turn interfere with street car service.
- Since the passage of the 1907 franchise ordinances, $20,500,000 has been expended by the Surface Lines in paving streets, $9,000,000 more has been spent in maintaining the pavement and $16,000,000 has been expended for street cleaning and snow removal.
- That is $45,500,000 that has gone into the paving and maintenance of the streets.
- Street car passengers certainly are doing their share in contributing to the upkeep of the arteries of traffic.
- They have a right to expect that traffic regulations will give them a reasonably free use of the streets.

Sluggishness . . . the cause of most common skin ills . . . is the very condition this new Fleischmann's XR Yeast corrects! It gets at the real cause of trouble by speeding up your lazy digestive juices and muscles.

Really Corrects Constipation

XR Yeast "regularizes" your system. As you eat it daily, your food is better digested, is kept softer and is eliminated far more easily. Soon, your skin clears, you have more energy and pep, your digestion is improved, and your constipation gone. XR Yeast combats colds, too, by supplying Vitamin A. It's also rich in Vitamins B, D and G—plus minerals and hormone-like substances that aid health. (It is as good as ever for baking, too!)

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's XR Yeast every day. At grocers, restaurants and soda fountains. Keep on till your health and skin are what they should be. Start now! Eat it at least 30 days!

FEEL GREAT AGAIN . . . Stop neglecting yourself. Get away from the harmful cathartic habit! Just eat 3 cakes of this new Fleischmann's XR Yeast every day . . . plain, or in ⅓ glass of water . . . preferably a half-hour before meals! As you're "normalized," cut down on laxatives until, finally, you need them no longer!

What $16,000 buys in The American Weekly

A full page in color more than twice the size of any other magazine page in the world . . . more than 5,500,000 families at a cost of less than 1/6 of a cent per family . . . The attention of the entire family instead of a single buying factor.

SOME MAGAZINES put on a tall hat and charge an outlandish price for their advertising space on the premise that they are the exclusive journals of the rich.

These magazines are excellent media for advertising lorgnettes, but the cigarette manufacturer—or, as a matter of fact, any other manufacturer—who counts his output by the millions has to think also of the Smiths and Jones's.

The one sure way to reach the greatest number of "pack-a-day" smokers, automobile owners, consumers of food, apparel, or any of the other necessities or luxuries of life, at the lowest possible advertising cost per individual reached, is through The American Weekly.

Here is a magazine so vitally interesting that it is read regularly by more than five and one half million families.

Some of these people go south in the winter and some of them stay at home. But all of them have the money to buy the things they want and need.

If you want more sales, tell these families who read The American Weekly your story—for you can do it here more economically than you can through any other one form of advertising.

Where this Magazine goes

The American Weekly is the largest magazine in the world. It is distributed through 17 great Hearst Sunday Newspapers. In 597 of America's 995 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over, The American Weekly concentrates 67% of its circulation.

In each of 134 cities, it reaches one out of every two families
In 125 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families
In an additional 165 cities, 30 to 40%
In another 173 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, more than 1,885,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy and read The American Weekly.

Where can you spend your advertising dollar more effectively?

THE SOCIALIST TROJAN HORSE.

Mr. McSwain's bill in congress to prevent profiteering in time of war authorizes the President to fix prices, rates, rents, commissions, compensation or rewards. It authorizes him to draft men for military service and to commandeer for military use all material resources, industrial organizations and public services over which he decides government control is necessary. He may also license any or all manufacturers and dealers in public services and may determine the priority with which things may be manufactured, sold, and offered for service. The exercise of his powers may be delegated to such agencies as he selects. This bill comes from the committee on military affairs of the house of representatives, which has been engaged for months in investigation of the war department and national defense.

The powers described shall be possessed by the President whenever congress shall declare war or whenever it shall declare that there is an emergency due to the imminence of war. Many Americans have committed themselves to the idea that there must never be another American war without conscription of money as well as men. The next national emergency, therefore, must find private enterprise controled by the government.

The material resources of the country shall be conscripted to the end that no one shall fare better than his neighbor. The proposals appeal to popular sense of equity and they express a common dislike for fortunes made in war times. The American Legion is apparently resolved to give its support to such a bill as Mr. McSwain has introduced. The Nye committee in the senate has been pursuing the demon of the munitions business, and President Roosevelt has appointed a commission, headed by Mr. Baruch and Gen. Hugh Johnson, to investigate and advise the administration.

The cause makes a ready appeal to better sentiments, but the bill, of which the provisions have been briefly described, is as perfect an instrument for the precipitate socialization of the United States as could be introduced in congress. It is a seizure act which could be given effect almost over night and result in the expropriation of private enterprise and the creation of a socialist state as arbitrary and powerful in its administration as Stalin's. It requires only a declaration by congress that an emergency exists due to the imminence of war.

A grant of exceedingly great powers must always be studied in the light of its extreme possibilities. It is not required in the terms of this bill that the emergency be that of a great war; it can be the alleged imminence of any kind of a conflict. If it were alleged by the government that there was a prospect of a war with any Central American republic, congress by recognizing that condition could thereby invest a President with the right to commandeer all the resources of the country. Any war scare, big or little, could be used by law to bring every enterprise and industry in the country under government control.

If people are inclined to regard such a development as highly improbable or even fantastic, they will do well to reflect that they could have had no premonition two years ago of the policies now in effect in the United States. They could not have foreseen that a socialized state would be created under the administration of the Tennessee Valley Authority. They could not have foreseen that an attempt would be made to license all the industries of the United States and control them, their wages and their prices, by codes. They could not have foreseen that it would be made a criminal offense for a citizen engaged in an enterprise within a state to sell at a price satisfactory to himself and the purchaser.

The people could not have foreseen that a verdict of guilty would be brought against a citizen for paying such wages as his business could afford to employés who accepted them as the best that could be paid. They could not foresee that it would be made a crime for them to possess a gold obligation issued by the United States as money, and they couldn't foresee that the government would deliberately impair the obligation of contract and deliberately seek to deprive a creditor of his property.

What they did not foresee and could not foresee and yet have seen as facts should teach them to view a proposed law, not in the terms of what they carelessly think it must mean, but in the widest range of its possibilities.

The American people within the last two years have seen a congress so docile and receptive that it passed laws without knowing what they contained, and delegated authority without a regard for constitutional limitations, doing everything needed to create an administrative autocracy beyond the dreams of any one who had considered the future of his nation.

What has already happened will give no assurance of limitations in any piece of legislation proposed at the present time. Mr. McSwain's is not the only bill now in congress preparing, whatever may be its alleged intent, for the socialized state in America. These bills are Trojan horses which can be opened to release the enemy. They will gain support from people who listen to declamations against the evils of war profiteering without considering either the effect the proposals might have upon the nation when it desperately needed everything that private enterprise could give it, or the effect which such laws might have after a bit of skilful manipulation of the public mind had produced a congress fit to make such delegation of authority to an administration.

HONEST HAROLD SWINGS THE AX.

Honest Harold Ickes has fired another of his trusted assistants. This time it is Maj. Charles R. Oldberg who got the ax. Maj. Oldberg is an engineer who has been in charge of irrigation investigations for the PWA. The major was suspended about the time the inquiry into the Willacy county [Tex.] irrigation project was begun and he has been discharged while the matter is still in the hands of the grand jury.

What Maj. Oldberg did or did not do is not stated. Certainly his removal is not evidence of anything except the fact that Honest Harold wishes to be rid of him. In this connection it may be recalled that Maj. Oldberg is believed to have reported unfavorably on the Loup river power project in Nebraska. The attorney for that project is Mr. Arthur Mullen, late Democratic national committeeman for Nebraska, who is supposed to have been Mr. Ickes' political sponsor. Mr. Mullen won Honest Harold's support for the Loup river scheme. A howl of protest against this scandalous waste of the taxpayers' money arose and Maj. Oldberg was sent to Nebraska to study the project, or so it was reported at the time.

So far as is known to us, Maj. Oldberg's finding, if he made one, has never been published. Men with whom he consulted in Nebraska are of the opinion that he reported unfavorably. Certainly any competent engineer would have rendered an adverse report, for there is no merit in the scheme unless the settlement of a political debt is a proper use of public money. If Maj. Oldberg found against the Loup and Platte river projects that fact should not be overlooked. Honest Harold is not above bearing a grudge, as his behavior toward Robert Moses suggests; and his ruthless disregard for the feelings and reputations of others was illustrated at the time of the retirement of Mr. Robert Kohn from his position as head of the housing division of PWA.

The Willacy county project is to cost, in all, some $4,800,000. It is somewhat astonishing to find that Honest Harold, who has personally approved the downright waste of vastly greater sums of the taxpayers' money, can feel outraged at a possible misapplication of a part of the Willacy county appropriation. If the worst that can be suspected of Mr. Oldberg is true—and on this point the major deserves the benefit of something more than the ordinary presumption of innocence—Honest Harold is himself guilty of far costlier betrayals of the trust reposed in him.

This circumstance may go far to explain why Mr. Ickes has set up so large a detective force to spy on his subordinates. An organization whose boss approves squandering can hardly avoid moral deterioration. Men generally adopt the moral codes of their leaders. Mr. Ickes' detective force is none too large.

FOR AMERICA.

The Sentinels of the Republic is one of the citizens' organizations created in the campaign for repeal of the 18th amendment which has enlisted in the broader movement for the defense of American institutions from the subversive influences active under the guise of the New Deal. Raymond Pitcairn, a Philadelphia manufacturer, who organized the United Repeal council and was a director of the influential Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, has just been elected national chairman of the Sentinels and with a board of substantial citizens will direct its efforts on sound and effective lines.

National prohibition was a departure from American principles of government that reached the American consciousness promptly and directly. We are now confronted by many invasions of our civil rights and by numerous experiments as contrary to the fundamentals of American government as federal prohibition. As Chairman Pitcairn says in his inaugural statement: "Within two years federal control of liquor has been replaced by assumption of the right to dominate the lives of our people in their work, in their business, in their homes, and in their local government." The warning of federal prohibition has been ignored and under the plausible urgencies of the depression a more comprehensive war on the American system is being preached and practiced. Against this subversion every citizen who cherishes his heritage as a free man must use his influence. He can only make his influence politically formidable through organization, and fortunately organizations are multiplying, of which the Sentinels of the Republic is one of the most reliable and promising.

TURCICH WALKS WITH CHIN UP.

[Decatur Herald.]

When the medals are being passed around there ought to be at least a small one for John Turcich of Chicago.

Turcich, out of work and in need, applied for relief in 1933. He didn't like being dependent upon relief. Few persons do. Turcich, however, managed to do something about it. He found some sort of job at small wage and resumed the support of his own family of four. One day this week he reappeared in the relief office and laid down upon a counter $55.94—repayment in full of the amount he had received two years ago.

The money came hard, saved a nickel at a time, a penny at a time, from slender earnings. It did not have to be repaid, for the relief funds never have been represented to the needy as a loan. Only a rarely independent man would attempt repayment. For such a one, for a John Turcich, the $55.94 slapped down upon the relief office desk bought something that will be valued all the rest of his life. A medal for Turcich? On second thought it is superfluous. He already has his reward in a proud and independent spirit.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

"THE DUCE IS DETERMINED to 'Carry the War Into Africa.'"—Headline. Mussolini has always been just a little jealous of Scipio Africanus, who invented the phrase and made extremely good on it. The Duce may be stimulated to outdo Scipio Africanus since the publication of a book by an English writer called "A Greater than Napoleon," referring to Scipio. Therefore, it is plain to be seen that if the Duce shows Scipio Africanus up then he immediately proves to a questioning world that he is "A Much Greater than Both Scipio and Napoleon." And when that's done he has only to go after the records hung up by the other great captains of history, Genghis Khan, Alexander the Great, Hannibal, Cæsar, Gustavus Adolphus, Turenne, Eugene, Frederick, Marlborough, Wellington, and Lee. It's quite a big job, but shucks! the Duce will show 'em all up. And he won't be content with a tenth round decision. He'll knock each and every one out in the first round. Will he not? Make your bets, ladies and gentlemen. In this corner the Duce, the Fighting Whirlwind. In this corner Genghis Khan, Scipio Africanus, Alexander, Hannibal, Cæsar, Gustavus Adolphus, and all the rest of 'em. All boys members of this club! GONG!

VALENTINE FOR ME, MYSELF.

I'm through inditing verses
To undeserving males . . .
Your sure and sympathetic
Admiration never fails.

You're bright and—fairly pretty
In a pastel sort of way;
You never get too witty,
Too sulky or too gay.

You're very good at listening,
Can dance and flirt and cook,
Prefer to date quite often,
But like nights home with a book.

You've several female virtues,
And, besides, a vice or two . . .
And I confess that maybe
I'm a bit in love with you!

TELEVISION, which seems now about ready to jump right out at us, is predicted by the radio wise men to be a greater success in these United States than in England. Not if I have to see the cold, pallid form of a tube of tooth paste. It'll just spoil the party as far as I am concerned. And the life sized representation of a new kind of medicine that will grow hair on a billiard ball won't give me any sort of thrill whatever. And the picture of a crooner showing him in the very act of crooning—well, I wonder how much those television things are going to cost, because I'm going to smash up a few of 'em at first before I get acclimated to 'em.

HUEY LONG said in the senate the other day of Postmaster General Farley's activities that "they stink to high heaven." Let the records show I do not hold any briefs for Mr. Farley, but Huey reminds me of Leo in a late book I've been reading, Beverly Nichols' "A Village in a Valley." It's an English village, of course.

Leo was Mrs. M.'s nephew.

If there is such a thing as a "typical schoolboy" Leo was that boy.

"Every one knows that Napoleon used to stink" was the first phrase of his which struck me as having any real erudition. But after a little acquaintance with him I was inclined to discount the historical value of this observation, because I found that Leo, with great amiability, but with equal firmness, invariably asserted that all persons of whom he did not entirely approve were "stinking."

"Of course, most of the chaps in my form stink," he said mildly one day.

"Couldn't something be done about it?" I asked earnestly, fearing an epidemic.

"Oh, no!" he replied, treading heavily on a clump of white daffodils. "They're quite decent, really. But pretty stinking, too. You know . . ."

I spoke to Mrs. M. about Leo. "Well," said Mrs. M., "you know a great deal about the district. Couldn't you take him round and show him a few things? There's Fotheringhay, for example. Surely he'd be interested in hearing all about Mary Queen of Scots. I should think as soon as he saw the royal arms in the pulpit he would be excited."

On the other hand, I thought, he might sum up the situation by saying, "Everybody knows that Mary Queen of Scots used to stink." However, I did not say that to Mrs. M.

Yes, Sen. Long does remind me very much of Leo.

FOR IDOL WORSHIPERS.

Before your chosen idol keep
The incense burning bright;
For idols all have feet of clay,
And frosty crowns that melt away
Beneath too strong a light.

And if the knowing makes you weep,—
Then pile the incense high;
For then its misty, smoky wreath,
An idol grand beyond belief
Will recompense each sigh.

But this is bitterest thought of all:
When incense fails, the idols fall!

THIS IS NATIONAL DEFENSE week and, gosh, I don't know how properly to observe it. About all that I can think of is not to drink any Japanese tea. But I like Japan tea. Maybe it'll be all right if I drink Japan tea, but keep my fingers crossed. And those who think that it is not patriotic will tell me to go back to Russia where I came from.

THE CONQUEST OF RABIES.

We are living in a relatively safe period, as far as the ravages of widespread epidemic diseases are concerned. We no longer fear Asiatic cholera or typhoid fever, and the control of diphtheria is within our grasp. Serums and vaccines are available not only for prevention but for cure of many diseases that were highly fatal fifty years ago. All this has come about through the work of medical scientists delving into the unknown for the purpose of relieving suffering and saving lives.

A striking example of man's conquest over disease is the discovery of vaccination against rabies [hydrophobia], achieved by Louis Pasteur. As a boy, Pasteur had observed the horrible form of death that occasionally overtook one of the villagers. The disease usually followed the bite of a mad dog or wolf.

Through a French veterinarian by the name of Bourrel, Pasteur received two dogs afflicted with rabies. He first took some of the saliva from these animals and inoculated it into rabbits; and, at the same time, he used saliva from a child patient in the last stages of the disease. Next, a dog was placed under chloroform and an inoculation with nervous tissue from the diseased animals was made directly into the dog's brain. For two weeks the animal behaved in a perfectly normal manner, then the symptoms of hydrophobia developed, resulting in death.

In spite of weeks and months spent in an effort to "grow" the virus results were negative. Pasteur finally concluded that the spinal cord and brain of an afflicted animal contained a virus that he could not see with the most powerful microscope. He found that the power of the virus could be increased by rapid transference from animal to animal, and decreased by drying the affected tissue for a certain period.

Pasteur's next step was the preparation of a vaccine from the dried spinal cords of infected rabbits. This was used in the treatment of dogs bitten by other diseased animals and, much to his delight, he found that if he could treat an animal shortly after it had been attacked its life could be saved. Naturally, these experiments attracted world-wide attention. To the emperor of Brazil he wrote: "Even when I have multiplied examples of prevention of rabies in dogs, I believe that my hand will tremble when it comes to deal with man."

Shortly thereafter a circumstance occurred that rendered a human trial wellnigh imperative. A 9 year old lad was brought by his mother to Pasteur's laboratory. Two days earlier the boy had been attacked by a mad dog and severely bitten about the hands and face. He was rescued by a passer-by and the dog was subsequently shot. The local physician had cauterized the boy's wounds. The number of bites and the depth of the wounds made it obvious that the case was particularly dangerous.

There seemed no alternative but to try the new vaccine and, on the second day, an injection of the oldest preparation of spinal cord was administered. Inoculation followed inoculation, gradually increasing the strength of the virus. Pasteur's anxiety became greater as the treatment proceeded. Finally, the last inoculation was given and the boy fell asleep quite unconscious of the troubled mind of Pasteur, who virtually had no rest until after the danger period had entirely passed. Other cases followed in rapid succession and today the world knows of the continuing triumph of Pasteur's conquest of hydrophobia.

Most of us think of rabies as a summer disease. On the contrary, it is likely to spread during the winter months. All dog bites are not serious, as the dog may not be ill, but any dog bite must be considered as potentially important until it is shown that the dog is in good health. Vaccine is available for the preventive inoculation of dogs against the disease, and the Pasteur treatment for human beings is today used the world over.

GIVING BLOOD.

Mrs. M. S. writes: I had scarlet fever and was in the hospital 28 days. The doctor injected 40 cc. serum into my left arm. On the 16th day I began to walk. On the 19th day they asked me to donate a cup of blood, and I did so. I felt a little weak for a few hours afterward, but then I was fine. Two weeks after I went home the hospital asked me for another cup of blood, which I gave, and they want me to give another cup in a month. Would this affect me in any way in later years? I would like to continue giving blood for serum as I know how it helped me, but I will not give any more if it will injure me later. I am 22 years old and the mother of three small children. My health has always been good.

Is there anything I can eat to make blood?

REPLY.

This is a very worthy cause. You have recovered from scarlet fever, and your blood contains substances which will help others to get well. Whether or not you should give more blood depends on the condition of your own blood, as determined by the number of red cells and the percentage of hemoglobin. The physicians who are interested in your case should make an examination of your blood each month, so that you will be protected.

Liver, beef, and iron are substances that will help make blood.

MAY BE STONE.

J. H. writes: I have had two peculiar attacks and would like to get a clew as to their cause. On each occasion a pain started low in my back, perhaps in the lower bowel, and began to ease only when I felt I wanted to go to stool. Later my bowels moved quite freely. The pain was so great in each case that I fainted.

REPLY.

The condition you describe may be a severe colitis or a kidney stone. The pain of kidney stone is frequently quite sufficient to bring on a fainting spell. Sometimes many stones form in the pelvis of the kidney and pass from time to time with intense pain. The intervals between may be several months. A careful X-ray examination will determine the presence of kidney stones.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

PARTNERSHIP.

Ottawa, Ill., Feb. 8.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. How is a partnership business operating as a company dissolved according to law so party discontinuing business is not liable for future debts? 2. Where husband and wife are operating a business as a company, can the wife indorse a promissory note as surety for the business, or otherwise, when she has a separate account of her own and [3] can the holder of the note recover from her or the husband? 4. When the husband makes purchases, giving own personal note for stocks used in the company, is the wife's property liable for this claim? 5. Where administrator is required to give bond in the settlement of an estate, would the court accept a bonding company as surety when they are located out of the state? Where two or more parties operate a business as a company and have accumulated debts and notes [6] can one of them give a personal note as a gift or otherwise to a relation? 7. Would that stand to dispose of their property and separate account and [8] avoid the payment of the company debts in the settlement of the estate in the event of death? M. C.

1. The only way for a partner to terminate his liability for past debts is to pay them or secure releases from the creditors. As to future debts, he should bring home notice of his withdrawal to persons who have dealt with the partnership.

2. As between the husband and wife, the right of the wife to indorse would depend on what authority the husband has actually given to her. As to third parties, the question would depend upon her apparent authority. In other words, on whether the husband had held the wife out as having authority to bind him.

3. Yes, if proper steps are taken to charge her as an indorser. We could advise to better advantage if the wording of the instrument and the indorsement were before us.

4. Yes.

5. The mere fact that the home office of the surety company is outside of the state would not be a fatal objection, if that is what you mean to ask.

6. Yes.

7. We do not see how such a note would amount to a disposal of their property. In general, the rights of the donee would be subordinate to those of previous creditors.

8. Not if the facts are proved. We advise you to have a private interview with an attorney. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORTGAGE SETTLEMENT.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a widow and own a bungalow on which there is a $2,000 first mortgage. This mortgage falls due next month and I am prepared to pay it. It was taken out before my husband's death and I do not know much about such things. 1. What papers should be returned to me? 2. I don't trust the man who holds the mortgage, as he tried to cheat me once. This is all the money I have and I do not wish to go to the expense of hiring a lawyer unless it is really necessary. A. M. P.

1. You should receive from the mortgage holder the canceled principal note and coupons, the trust deed, the abstract or other evidence of title and insurance policies. You should then take the trust deed and notes to the trustee and secure from him a release deed which you should record.

2. If this is the case, it would seem to be poor economy to try to dispense with the services of an attorney in such a transaction. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VALIDITY OF WILL.

Chicago, Feb. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if a "last will" made in the state of California is legal in the state of Illinois. G. A. S.

Yes, in the sense that wills valid where made are declared valid here by special statute. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

It is often stated that a cup of hot tea will make a person cooler because of the contrast. Many persons testify that they actually feel cooler after drinking a hot liquid on a hot day. This is a dangerous fallacy, according to first aid experts, who say that a drink of hot tea may bring on a heat stroke if a person is already near that point. It is absurd to believe that taking in more heat could make the body cooler.

AN EARLIER DEPRESSION.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—In 1893 we were in the midst of a bad depression and panic. Our family had been prosperous and brought up very well, much better than the average family.

When the panic was on my father and his company failed and left the family absolutely dependent. We did not look for charity or relief (which did not exist at that time), but we all got out and looked for work at the best wages we could get. We found work at small wages and started over again. The carpenter, plumber, plasterer, etc., were glad to get work at $2 per day; the cost of living became very cheap and so we lived on an all around cheap basis until 1900, when times started on a gradual upturn. I am not certain, but I believe the government during this period went through with a balanced budget. Our people learned to save and formed a new foundation for future prosperity which gradually came to us.

This period included President Cleveland's administration. How Democracy has changed. H. A. M.

THE SEAMY SIDE OF FARM LIFE.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—As much as I would like to write you how much I appreciate Bob Becker's articles about dogs and THE TRIBUNE farm, this is not that kind of a letter. I come to ask Mr. Becker please not to write so entrancingly about the woman's side of the farm life. Please!

Reason: I have a younger sister I want to see married before I can think of getting a home of my own. She is, or was, heaven only knows, engaged to a doctor and all ready to get married when those articles of yours about the fine air, the flowers, meadow and babbling brooks, the sausage making, putting up jams, pickles and what have you, turned her head and she says she wants a farmer and life on a farm.

Well, the only farmers we know have their farms in the back yard and buy the seed in a package in the corner grocery store. So how in heaven's name can she marry a farmer? She is a nurse herself and her work is here in a hospital. To marry a young doctor is punishment enough for any girl, but to marry a farmer!!!

So please write a little of the unpleasant side of the farmer's life. K.

SUCCESS AT LAST.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Over a period of years I have sent in 12 letters to your column, none of which was published. This is my swan song intended only for you and your wastebaskets. [After 12 rebuffs I still remain polite and put you first!]

My point in writing today is this: Why not be big hearted some time and tell your readers what percentage of letters you publish? Or you might tell us some of your pet aversions anent letter writers—for instance, those writers who don't send you any verbal orchids or who don't think you are the World's Greatest.

This elimination process would make your day's work lots easier. Come a day when you could say "Thank heavens, half of those nitwits have stopped writing. I really finished my work on time today!" This would be generous on your part, too, for consider all the wasted time, thought, and postage that could be diverted elsewhere.

STILL BEWILDERED.

SPEAKING OF CHILDREN.

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Not many years ago we tried to keep hushed up from those who did not know the true size of large families. Today we pay huge sums of money to parents of a foreign country, who are not even familiar with our language, to tell us what we have known probably long before they themselves knew about the successful rearing of children, based upon knowledge accumulated after having had five children—the last five cannot be included, since the parents directly have nothing to do with their rearing.

The writer knows a genuine, thoroughly American family consisting of seventeen children, all of whom have reached adult ages, are beautiful to look upon and whose health and general physical condition could enable them to compete with the best anywhere. Now, do you suppose that Canada or France or Germany or Italy or England or any of the others would come forward to offer an American family financial or any other kind of aid under cover of teaching them to bring up children successfully?

There is no doubt that these people need and appreciate the help they are getting, but where, in the future, will the nest egg for the children's education, made possible by the good will of American suckers, be spent? Not in America, you may be sure. Are there not thousands of American people who would give thanks on bended knees for the same opportunity?

MARIE LOUISE RANDELL.

INTERESTING IF TRUE DEPARTMENT.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—I wonder if the Democratic organization in the Seventh ward think they can get away with what they are trying to do to eliminate the opposition to their candidate for alderman of that ward.

Here's the set-up so that the general public may know what's going on: First, the opponent's petition is objected to on the grounds that the names are forgeries, duplicates, and that the signers are not registered or that their names are misspelled. Then affidavits are produced, supposedly from the signers, admitting the forgery, etc. Then these affidavits are shown to the election board and the petition of the opposing candidate is thrown out because of its illegality. However, these affidavits themselves are forgeries, the original signers never having been approached at all. I have never seen anything as raw as this.

This country is still a democracy whether the so-called Democratic organization in the Seventh ward knows it or not. I know that they cannot get away with anything like this.

A HELPFUL ARTICLE.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—Please permit me to send belated thanks for the privilege of reading in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE (issue of Jan. 27), "If the Gold Clause Decision Is Against the Government."

In its historical phases especially it impresses me as far and away the most comprehensive—and best—thing that has been published on the subject anywhere in the country. Moreover, in its purely financial aspect it also deeply impresses me.

My thanks to you and to Mr. Reuben D. Cahn. JOHN NAGLE.

POLITICO-CRIME ALLIANCE CHARGE STIRS SONSTEBY

Fairweather and Loesch Draw Sharp Retort.

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby of the Municipal court made a reply yesterday to charges that a politico-crime alliance exists, voiced by two previous speakers at a luncheon forum of the City club at the Hotel Sherman. The charges and recommendations were made by Frank J. Loesch, president of the Chicago crime commission, and George O. Fairweather, business manager of the University of Chicago.

Every politician knows of such an alliance," said Fairweather. "It is sometimes called the 'big fix,' although usually the inducement involved is not money but political favors or the discharge of political obligations."

Change in System Urged.

Mr. Fairweather contended that the condition arises from the party system as it is now constituted and recommended several changes. He urged that the voters elect their precinct committeemen, and that they in turn elect the ward committeemen. Committeemen would not be permitted to hold any gainful political office, elective or appointive.

The recommendation was approved by Mr. Loesch, who added his own recommendation that a system of permanent registration be established to eliminate much of the fraud in voting. Mr. Loesch was equally certain in his statements that a politico-crime alliance is of necessity fostered by the present "feudal" party system.

"No judge can get on the bench unless he has his political papers," Mr. Loesch declared.

Reward System Defended.

Chief Justice Sonsteby in his reply said he had been a precinct captain for many years.

"To expect precinct captains to carry on all work necessary in an election without rewards seems like asking business men to operate their plants at full capacity without any profit, said Judge Sonsteby.

"As to judges, you all know men on the bench who are revered and respected and who are backed by political patron saints. Why, even the judges of the United States Supreme court, and every federal judge in the city got their positions because they had patron saints. You can't eliminate that!"

Doubts Situation Serious.

Judge Sonsteby bluntly questioned whether the situation was as serious as the previous speakers indicated. He told of reductions in crime. Somewhat bitterly he said the newspapers had given such news little space although giving much to the announcement that Municipal court judges will hereafter wear robes to increase their dignity.

"The reduction in crime was accomplished by hard work," he chief justice said, "in spite of pressure from business men as well as politicians. Many times it's the banker who holds the judges' notes who exerts the pressure. Many times it's the insurance company which has received money from a defendant's friends and relatives to make good a theft loss. Or the pressure is from relatives or ministers.

"There is very little interference with felony cases by politicians—very few."

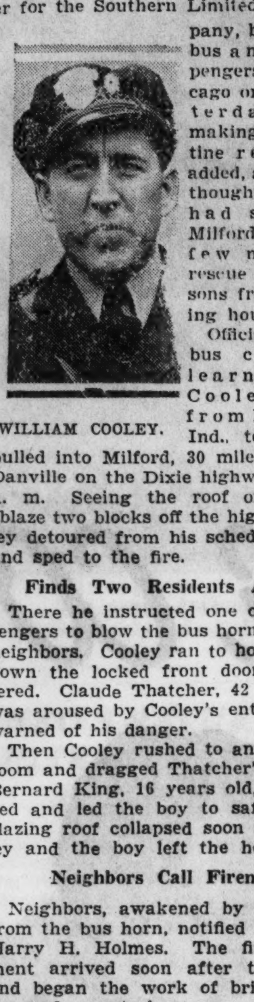
BUS DRIVER SEES 4 A. M. FIRE AND SAVES 2 PERSONS

Here on Time After Delay in Milford.

William Cooley, 32 years old, a driver for the Southern Limited Bus company, brought his bus and ten passengers into Chicago on time yesterday. After making his routine report, he added, as an afterthought, that he had stopped in Milford, Ill., for a few minutes to rescue two persons from a blazing house.



WILLIAM COOLEY.

Officials of the bus company learned that Cooley, driving from Evansville, Ind., to Chicago, pulled into Milford, 30 miles north of Danville on the Dixie highway, at 3:45 a. m. Seeing the roof of a house ablaze two blocks off the highway Cooley detoured from his scheduled route and sped to the fire.

Finds Two Residents Asleep.

There he instructed one of the passengers to blow the bus horn to arouse neighbors. Cooley ran to house, broke down the locked front door, and entered. Claude Thatcher, 42 years old, was aroused by Cooley's entrance and warned of his danger.

Then Cooley rushed to an adjoining room and dragged Thatcher's nephew, Bernard King, 16 years old, from his bed and led the boy to safety. The blazing roof collapsed soon after Cooley and the boy left the house.

Neighbors Call Firemen.

Neighbors, awakened by the blasts from the bus horn, notified Fire Chief Harry H. Holmes. The fire department arrived soon after the rescue and began the work of bringing the fire under control.

When Thatcher and his nephew sought Cooley to express their thanks they found that he had gathered his passengers and departed in a hurry to make up the 20 minutes lost in the rescue work.

JANUARY FARM PRICE OF MILK 3.78C A QUART

Dairy farmers are to receive an average price of $1.76 a hundredweight [3.78 cents a quart] for a total of 119,925,692 pounds of milk delivered to Chicago distributors during January, Frank C. Baker, federal milk market administrator for the Chicago sales area, announced yesterday.

Two different farm prices for milk sold in bottles prevailed during the month. For the first fifteen days in January farmers were paid at the rate of $2 a hundred pounds [4.3 cents a quart] and for the last half of the month the price was $2.20 a hundred pounds [4.7 cents a quart]. This will result in distributors paying an average of $2.10 [4.5 cents a quart] for 70,786,840 pounds of class 1 milk on the basis of 3.5 per cent butterfat.

A price of $1.30 a hundred pounds [2.7 cents a quart] will be paid producers for 20,650,783 pounds of milk sold as cream. The surplus milk price for January is to be $1.18 a hundred pounds [2.5 cents a quart]. Farmers delivered 1.4 per cent less milk in January than in December, according to the milk administrator's report.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 12.—[Special]—Gloria Swanson underpaid Uncle Sam $10,875 on her 1931 earnings, according to income tax liens filed by the collector of internal revenue today. Leon Errol, comedian, was charged with $66 arrears and Mary McCormic, the singer, $126, both on 1931 earnings.

FARMERS STUDY IRRIGATION PLAN FOR TRUCK CROPS

Annual Vegetable Growers' School Opened.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Irrigation of truck crops to insure Chicagoans of a constant supply of fresh vegetables in summer, even in dry years, was given serious consideration by northern Illinois farmers attending the opening classes of the annual Cook County Vegetable Growers' school yesterday in St. Matthews school hall on Milwaukee avenue half a mile north of Dempster street.

Experts who spoke at the afternoon session told the truck gardeners that Illinois farmers must revise their ideas about the practicability of irrigation in this state.

28 Drouths in 45 Years.

Records at Urbana show that growers have had drouths to deal with in twenty-eight out of the last forty-five years, Lee A. Somers of the University of Illinois told the gardeners.

He advised growers in this section to work out their irrigation projects on an individual farm basis. Big scale irrigation methods used in the west and southwest are not applicable to Illinois, he said.

Mr. Somers suggested strawberries, raspberries, onions, celery, carrots, beets, staked tomatoes, eggplant, cabbage, cauliflower, spinach, radishes, lettuce, and green onions as suitable irrigation crops in this area. He thinks nursery stocks, apple, pear, and peach orchards would also have a place in an irrigation program in this state.

Mr. Somers declared that farmers in this state are overlooking their opportunities for obtaining water that could be used for irrigation purposes. He suggested that they make a careful study of water that might be taken from creeks and rivers and devise ways of impounding water that drains off farms where deep, ugly gullies are cut and soil is wasted through unnecessary erosion. He also discussed the advisability of digging wells and collecting in cisterns water that runs off farm buildings.

Eleven irrigation systems that have been installed in various parts of Illinois were cited by Mr. Somers. Lee Baker, a farmer at Marengo, Ill., is irrigating both early and late potatoes successfully. He gets water from a shallow well.

Old Auto Engine Used.

Guy Hubbs, a market gardener, also of Marengo, has been successful in using an old automobile engine to pump water from a river and applying it by the oozing hose method in irrigating cabbage and unstaked tomatoes.

Mr. Somers also told of the good showing John Karales of Joliet has made in growing green bunch onions, watered by the furrow system. Tom Keithley, a market gardener at Dixon, Ill., has been successful with the overhead irrigation system which he uses in growing several kinds of vegetables, especially staked potatoes. He gets the water from a well.

Other Gardeners Get Results.

Claude Hurless, a market gardener of Sterling, Ill., pumps water for furrow and overhead irrigation where nozzles are used. He grows tomatoes and peppers. City water is successfully used at Danville, Ill., in the irrigation of fruits, vegetables and flowers.

Irrigation is also used successfully by Fred Baker, Kankakee, Ill.; John Hoekstra, St. Anne, Ill.; Fred Heaton, New Burnside, Ill., and the Kankakee State hospital, Kankakee, Ill.

Dr. A. S. Colby, in a test at the University of Illinois, increased the yield of strawberries 300 per cent by applying overhead irrigation, Mr. Somer reported.

DIES AFTER HIS ARREST.

POLICEMEN HUNT 3 KIDNAPERS OF MICHIGAN YOUTH

The police last evening were searching for three men who on Monday night kidnaped Gerald Rycenga, 20 years old, son of Peter J. Rycenga, city assessor of Grand Haven, Mich., and drove him to Chicago. He was abandoned here in his automobile with his hands and feet tied when his abductors were pursued by a police squad.

The elder Rycenga arrived in Chicago yesterday, and after statements were given to the police and federal agents the father and son started back to Michigan. They denied that any demands had been made for ransom. Capt. Andrew Barry of the East Chicago police said that the three kidnapers apparently had wanted a ride to Chicago.

HITLER ATTENDS FETE FOR POPE AS NAZIS HIT CHURCH

Catholics Fight to Keep Schools in Bavaria.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—With the conflict between Catholic and Nazi authorities over schools still raging in Bavaria, Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight attended a banquet given by the papal nuncio in honor of the anniversary of the coronation of Pope Pius XI.

Hitler arrived escorted by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and reichminister of air; Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, and twenty other German statesmen. The banquet was also attended by the diplomatic corps.

Until the last moment it was feared that Hitler would snub the event. This would have widened the breach between the Nazi chancellor and the church.

Report Hitler Has Laryngitis.

It was rumored that Hitler is suffering from laryngitis, and that doctors have forbidden him to make speeches for several weeks to come. Associates declare that he is suffering from a cold, but that it was not severe enough to prevent his attending the nuncio's party.

Meanwhile the church fight in Munich reached a new height. Tomorrow parents of all pupils must register their children and choose between Nazi schools and denominational schools. The Nazi "school league" appealed to parents in 25 massmeetings in Munich tonight to enter their children in the Nazi communal [public] schools.

Special massmeetings called by the church were prohibited. Catholic pamphlets were confiscated. Mayor Fiehler of Munich, in a special address to the city council, agitated for Nazi schools and against Catholic schools.

Cardinal's Message Read.

The Catholics called the faithful to the churches, where messages of Cardinal Michael Faulhaber and the general vicar of the Catholic church in Bavaria were read to them. Cardinal Faulhaber's message stressed the concordat, "which was acknowledged by the fueher, and guaranteed the integrity of religious schools." He appealed to the Nazis to "give loyalty for loyalty."

"Tomorrow the whole Catholic world will look toward Munich," he said. "South Germany must then prove its fidelity to the church."

The vicar told the parents not to be frightened by Nazi canvassers who call at their homes to make them inscribe their children in Nazi schools. He assured the parents that threats and pressure brought to bear on them need not be truly dangerous, because their rights are guaranteed in the concordat and will remain valid as long as there is honesty and and faith."

Propaganda Denounced.

He also denounced the Nazis for foisting handbills onto children in religious schools and using them for propaganda.

Munich has 99 primary schools, including 1 Jewish school; 8 Protestant schools, 27 Nazi communal [public] schools, and 63 Catholic schools.

The Protestants have made no effort to oppose Nazi propaganda and it is expected that the Nazis will win many recruits from Protestant ranks.

Nazis Demand Memel's Return.
[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—A remarkable mass demonstration for the return of Memel territory from Lithuania to Germany was staged at Berlin university today by the Berlin Student league, division of the east.

This demonstration formed a spectacular manifestation of the National Socialist drive for unification of all Germans into one "holy Germanic empire of German nationality." This campaign received tremendous impetus from the German victory in the Saar. It is at present turning its spearhead against Lithuania, where, at Kovno, 126 Memel Nazis are being tried on charges of seditious activities in favor of Germany.

AMERICAN'S FATE AS SPY IN HANDS OF GERMAN COURT

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The results of preliminary findings in the case of Richard Roiderer, the American whose notebook jottings on the Storm Troops caused him to be arrested by the Nazis for treason, were placed today before the senate of judges' panel of the star chamber of the People's court.

The material was understood to have been compiled by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Parrisius, who figured prominently in the famous reichstag fire trial in which the Dutchman, Van der Lubbe, was convicted and executed.

It is up to the court senate to determine whether Roiderer, formerly of Chicago and Cleveland, should be indicted. Roiderer was arrested last June 22 while trying to leave Germany and has been in jail since. A naturalized American citizen, he may face the supreme penalty—death—in case of conviction.

1 KILLED, 4 SHOT IN AUSTRIAN CIVIL WAR DAY BATTLE

200 Socialists Clash with Police.

VIENNA, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Blood was shed again tonight on the battle ground of the February, 1934, Socialist rebellion.

A pistol battle between police and some 200 Socialists demonstrating in connection with the first anniversary of their uprising resulted in the death of one Socialist and the wounding of two policemen and two or more Socialists.

The police, tense all day as Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's government prepared for trouble on the anniversary, clashed with the demonstrators in the Ottakring district, scene of the most bitter fighting one year ago.

Near Noted Apartment Building.

It was believed several Socialists wounded were carried away by the demonstrators, who carried red flags and sang Socialist songs as they marched into Nepomuk Berger square near the great Socialist apartment building which government artillery raked to ruins in 1934.

Vienna newspapers urged reconciliation between the government and workers.

The newspapers' plea for healing the breach between workers and the government opened in the bloody Socialist revolt last year that cost upward of 2,000 lives, urged concentration against the asserted "real enemies" of both, the Nazis

Designs for New Monument.

As though to emphasize the new note of conciliation, competitive designs for the proposed new monument "to labor" were exhibited near the demolished monuments to the republic which were torn down after the Socialist revolt had been crushed.

An explosion at an electric substation near Ebergschwang damaged the station and injured an attendant today, but it was not determined whether the blast was the result of an act of sabotage.

SOVIETS REVAMP FARM SYSTEM TO GET BIGGER YIELD

Aim to Bring 5 Million More in Collectives.

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Feb. 12.—Changes in the collective farm system are to be introduced by soviet Russia, it transpired today, with the object of stabilizing the system and increasing agricultural yields. Outstanding aims are:

1. To encourage collective farm members to improve their joint property by guaranteeing them permanent use of the land.
2. To define clearly what is collective farm property and what is the property of individual members.
3. To give further inducements to bring the remaining 5,000,000 individual peasants into the collective farm framework.
4. To extend the use of industrial methods in agriculture.

New Regulations Presented.

New regulations to this end modifying the present collective farm regulations adopted in 1930 have been drawn up by the communist party and presented by Jacob Yakovleff, chief of the agricultural department of the communist party and former commissar of agriculture, to the congress of collective farm udarniks now in session in the Kremlin.

As to the tenure of land, Yakovleff emphasized it was state property not to be sold, mortgaged, or rented, but assigned permanently to the membership of the collective farm so its members will know they will reap the benefits of improvements they make on it. Members leaving collectives will not receive back land from a collective farm, but undistributed land of the state.

The size of garden plots which collective members are permitted to farm for their individual use will be limited. Yakovleff said that on some farms the acreage occupied by individual garden plots is greater than that collectively tilled.

Socialized Property.

Socialized property in collectives is defined in the regulations about to be introduced as follows: All working cattle, agricultural machinery, seed reserves, fodder for collectively owned animals, and buildings used in collective activity. Property for the personal use of collective farm members includes housing, personally owned cattle, poultry, and housing for such animals. Collective managements also must make horses available to members for tilling individual patches.

The regulations will allow each member to own one cow, three calves, and two sows with litters, fifteen sheep, goats in unlimited number, poultry, and rabbits.

The new regulations also will encourage even individual farmers who sold horses and wasted seed to join the collectives by granting them six year credits. Heretofore, the regulations have prevented such peasants from joining.

Treat a cold with a preparation made for colds and not a "cure-all".

It is a cold tablet, made expressly for the treatment of colds and not for all kinds of ailments.

It is internal in effect and it does four important things.

First, it opens the bowels, an important step in overcoming a cold.

Second, it checks the infection in the system, a vital step.

Third, it relieves the headache and fever.

These are the four effects a cold calls for and only in Bromo Quinine do you get them all in the form of a single tablet.

Play safe—make sure! The moment a cold threatens, go right to your druggist for a package of Grove's Bromo Quinine. Begin taking the tablets immediately, two every four hours, until relieved.

Usually that will be in the space of 24 hours. For, that's how fast Bromo Quinine acts when taken promptly.

Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is safe to take. Ask for it with your mind made up that you're not going to accept a substitute.

ARE flu, colds and other winter ailments cutting office production and costing you business?

An air-conditioned office keeps sickness down and office efficiency up. Winter and summer, it increases comfort, production and morale.

Tribune Tower is one of America's few air-conditioned office buildings. The system was installed last year at a cost of approximately $400,000. Its benefits have already been demonstrated to tenants.

Tenants have ample parking space all day. They may use, without charge, the special parking lot maintained by the Chicago Tribune.

The world's most famous address, Tribune Tower is as typically masculine as a man's club. Tenants are assured association with professional and business men of the highest type. All offices are quiet and have full exposure. Elevators are of the latest express type. Service and maintenance are not excelled anywhere.

Tribune Tower is not a commercial office building in the usual sense. Sixty percent of the space on its thirty-six floors is occupied by the Chicago Tribune. The remainder is shared by individuals and firms who selected the Tower because of the prestige of the address, and other specific advantages not available elsewhere.

CHILLED AND READY FOR BED: In winter, drafts, or excessively dry air, weaken body resistance. Fatigue points are reached sooner. Colds among employes multiply, cut into office efficiency, dig into profits.

PEOPLE WHO WORK in air-conditioned offices are less susceptible to colds and other winter ailments. Tribune Tower tenants enjoy this new safeguard at rents no higher than paid for offices without it.

PARKING FACILITIES: Quickly accessible from all sides of the city, Tribune Tower is also conveniently near ample 24-hour parking space. Tenants may use, without charge, the special parking lot maintained by the Chicago Tribune.

Those who seek an office in keeping with the character of their business—at rents no higher than they now pay—are invited to address:

FORMER LOVE OF STAVISKY, MONEY GONE, KILLS SELF

Once Noted Paris Beauty Hit by Swindler's Death.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 12.—Another chapter in the life and loves of the late Serge [Handsome Alex] Stavinsky, swindler, whose machinations rocked France to the verge of civil war a year ago, was brought to an end in the suicide of his former mistress, Marie Emilie Laquevre, alias Vivianne Lamarre. Her death on Feb. 7 was revealed by police today.

This woman, once one of the most famous beauties in Paris, was known around town as the "queen of diamonds." She shot herself in the stomach because she could not pay her rent and was being ejected.

Met Him in 1916.

Vivianne met Stavisky back in 1916 when he was just beginning his career. She was 32 years old then and already had a rich protector.

Stavisky got in trouble on a charge of embezzlement, but Vivianne, who had powerful friends in the government, helped him. He went to live at her fine apartment, using money given her by her lover, and even taking over her jewels. Eventually, when he left with the jewelry, she had to bring suit to get them back.

But the blonde "queen" always loved her "marvelous rascal" and forgave his taking habits. When her protector died, Stavisky sent her an occasional check to keep her going. She, in return, sent back compromising letters he had written her from prison.

Death a Blow to Her.

Stavisky and Vivianne continued to see each other occasionally during the years that he was operating as a pawnbroker, theater owner, and impresario, public works contractor, gambler about town, and jailbird. Then the scandal broke, and there followed his tragic flight to Chamonix, where he committed suicide.

The death of "Handsome Alex" broke Vivianne. She tried to keep up her luxurious apartment in the Passy quarter, but could not. A friend tried to give her a hand in business, but Vivianne got entangled with a smart young gigolo and lost whatever money remained.

A few days ago the landlord seized the furniture and notified her that she was to be ejected from the apartment. Vivianne called in a friend to express her last wishes and then retired to a room, where she shot herself. She will be buried tomorrow morning, but nobody will be there to mourn the woman who once was famous in the gay spots of Paris.

FORMER CHICAGO NUDE DANCER UP IN FRENCH COURT

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 12.—Joan Warner, American nude dancer who appeared at the World's Fair in Chicago, appeared today before a Paris magistrate on a charge of infraction of the French code which deals with the extent to which undressing in public can be admitted.

Today's session was purely formal. The dancer was simply asked questions regarding her identity, birthplace, and similar facts. When the case comes up for trial there is likely to be a great display of oratorical talent and ingenuity in discussion of what is art and what is just indecency. For this is not going to be a mere police court case. It is already being exalted into an artistic issue.

For Joan's defense it will be argued that she appears in a dimly lit cabaret and at a considerable distance from the spectators. If that is not sufficient justification then it will be sought to prove that her proportions are exactly those of Venus and that surely she, if anybody, has a right to exhibit them.

Lake County Review Board Threatens to Sue for Pay

Harold Kelsey, James King, and Frank McDermott, members of the 1934 Lake county board of tax review, which was dissolved a week ago, threatened yesterday to sue the county for their pay, totaling $1,029. The Lake county board, of which Kelsey is chairman, declined yesterday to pay the bill, because the law provides that boards of review cannot be paid after Sept. 7 of the year in which the board serves. The review board members declared they were unable to complete their work until a few days ago.

Missing Evanston Youth Turns Up on West Coast

Raoul MacGregor, 19 years old, 806 Forest avenue, Evanston, who has been missing since the night of Jan. 30 when he told his parents he was going to attend the automobile show at the Coliseum, was found last night in San Francisco. The boy telephoned his mother, Mrs. H. L. MacGregor, saying he was safe and well, but he could not tell how he got to the Pacific coast. She arranged for his transportation home.

"Moist-Throat" Method STOPPED COUGH
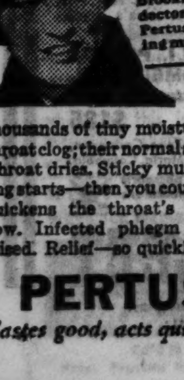
in 1 DAY!



"My cough was so bad," writes Marjorie Sheerin, Brooklyn, "I called a doctor. He said to take Pertussin. Next morning my cough was gone!"

WHEN you catch cold, thousands of tiny moisture glands in your throat clog; their normal secretions thicken. Throat dries. Sticky mucus collects. Tickling starts—then you cough. PERTUSSIN quickens the throat's natural moisture flow. Infected phlegm is loosened and raised. Relief—so quickly! Get a bottle.

ENZO'S RETURN JUST IN TIME FOR ARMY SERVICE

Rome, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The present troubles between Italy and Ethiopia today threatened to add to the troubles of the widow of John Jacob Astor and her athletic Italian husband, Enzo Fiermonte.

The parents of Enzo, who left a wife and child in Italy to get a divorce and then marry the wealthy Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick in the United States, said this morning there was danger the former fighter might be called to the Italian army with his class and be sent to Africa with an Italian expeditionary force. They said they feared it was because of this that his passport and papers are being withheld by the Italian authorities.

The military class of 1911 already has been summoned to the colors and the elder Fiermonte said he feared that Enzo's class, that of 1908, might be the next. Because Enzo was the eldest son and was needed to support his family, he was excused from doing his compulsory military service with the other members of his class at the usual time. Since he left Italy, however, the law has been changed so he now is liable to a minimum of three months' training.

British Organization Opens War on Teaching Evolution

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—At a crowded meeting tonight, the atmosphere of which recalled the famous Scopes trial in Tennessee, Sir Ambrose Fleming, veteran engineer, launched a public protest against "teaching organic evolution as a scientific truth." A resolution was carried by a large majority protesting the continued teaching of the theory of evolution in schools, colleges, and pulpits in Great Britain and the dominions on the ground it was not established as a scientific truth.

POPE PIUS CELEBRATES 13TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS CORONATION

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12. — (AP) — Pope Pius and twenty cardinals attended a mass today in the Sistine chapel in celebration of the 13th anniversary of the pontiff's coronation. Archbishop McGuigan of Toronto, Canada, was among the churchmen.

Thousands of laymen and priests cheered the pope as he was carried on a portable throne through the Vatican halls toward the chapel. The band of the Palatine guards gave a special musical program in a courtyard. The pope received hundreds of congratulatory telegrams from all parts of the world, many from crowned heads.

The anniversary was to have been the occasion for the inauguration of the Vatican's new radio station, but cold weather interfered with these plans. The occasion also commemorates the completion of the pontiff's program of Vatican improvements which have given him the title "the most modern of popes." In somewhat more than a decade, the holy father has given Vatican city a railroad and a railroad station, three radio stations, a new mosaic factory, an Ethiopian seminary, a modern electric light and heating plant, a new art gallery, a post office, a magnificent governor's palace and the most up to date fire fighting equipment.

Cuba Requests France to Extradite Machado

HAVANA, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The state department today instructed Rene Morales, Cuban minister in Paris, to ask the French government for the extradition of former President Gerardo Machado on charges of murder.

PLAN CAMPAIGN FOR CHARITY ON MOTHER'S DAY

Superintendents of homes for the aged and representatives of other charitable agencies, meeting yesterday in the Stevens hotel, decided to stage on Mother's day, May 12, a campaign to draw attention to the needs of destitute mothers and their children. Charles V. Vickrey of New York, president of the Golden Rule Foundation, which is sponsoring the campaign, commented that sending gifts to one's mother on Mother's day is a worthy custom, but that it is also fine to remember the many mothers in need of food and shelter.

KENNAMER JURY COMPLETE; STATE OPENS ITS CASE

Hints of Jury Tampering Are Disregarded.

Pawnee, Okla., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—A jury was completed in the District court of Judge Thurman Hurst this afternoon to try Phil Kennamer, 19 year old son of a federal judge, for the murder of his friend, John F. Gorrell Jr., 23 year old dental student.

Talk of jury tampering and the possibility of a mistrial halted the selection of jurors for a time today while the judge and attorneys for both sides held a secret conference. Though no public statements were made, one attorney admitted the conferees discussed the veiled intimations injected in the trial.

However, the judge decided that the references of attorneys to that subject were of not enough importance or supported by enough facts to warant notice.

Defense Is Satisfied.

"The defense is satisfied now, we will not ask for a mistrial," said A. Flint Moss, chief of counsel for young Kennamer. The state found but one prospective juror who would say under examination that he had been approached by strangers and asked about his possible verdict.

That venireman was W. H. Carriger, a Jennings garage owner, who said an unidentified man had tried to talk to him. Carriger said he told the man he "could not be bothered." The garageman was challenged by the state and excused.

After the jury had been completed and sworn by Judge Hurst, the opening statement for the prosecution was made by Tom Wallace, assistant Tulsa county attorney.

The young defendant presented his usual calm appearance on the second day of the trial. Sitting near him in the courtroom were his father, Federal Judge Franklin E. Kennamer, and his two sisters, Mrs. Juanita Hayes and Miss Opal Kennamer.

In questioning prospective jurors Defense Counsel J. A. McCullum devoted much time concerning possible prejudice against an insanity plea or one of self-defense.

When young Kennamer surrendered to authorities on the advice of his father he asserted he had to kill Gorrell to thwart an extortion plot directed against the family of Homer F. Wilcox, wealthy Tulsa oil man. Wilcox's pretty 18 year old daughter, Virginia, was friendly with both the defendant and his victim.

Some ado was caused by a sign on a dry goods store across the street from the courthouse until the judge ordered it removed. In two foot red letters the words: "You are guilty" attracted all eyes. However, the store proprietor explained that when finished the sign was to have read: "You are guilty if you don't attend our quitting business sale."

DOUMERGUE KIN GETS 26 MONTHS FOR MONEY FRAUD

PARIS, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Charles A. L. Audry, a nephew of Gaston Doumergue, former president and premier of France, was given a suspended sentence of 26 months' imprisonment today for shady financial maneuvers that his illustrious uncle tried so hard to clean out of France.

Appearing with Audry in court was Louis Serre, a former minister of commerce, who was assessed a fine approximating $250.

The other defendants, including Henri and Gabriel Guet, were given terms ranging from thirteen months to four years. The Guet brothers inherited Guet & Co., a private bank founded by an ancestor in 1797.

STOMACH SUFFERER WALKS AGAIN

Mrs. George Keller, 600 West 114th St., New York, suffered such intense stomach pain that she says she could hardly walk. Then a friend urged her to try Udga, a stomach specialist's formula. In one week the amazing results of Udga changed her from a discouraged skeptic to an enthusiastic Udga booster. No wonder Mrs. Keller and over 54,000 others have written enthusiastic praise of Udga. Where ordinary tablets, powders or soda serve only to neutralize acidity, Udga's more thorough medication not only checks excess acid but soothes inflammation and stops pain. Life is too short to suffer acid stomach, indigestion, heartburn, gas pains, belching and other signs of excess acidity. Udga is available at your drug store. One trial will convince or your money is refunded.

VIA FUNDAMENTALS

WE believe American industry is ready for another forward surge.

It is probable that more technical progress has been made during the depression than in any other equal period of time. We are ready, as never before, to move forward together.

We believe the real impetus will first be felt when each industry avails itself of all the help which all other industries now have to offer. We are equally sure that this help can come only through a stripping away of side-issues, and a clear understanding of fundamentals.

Speaking for Aluminum Company of America; what we are really selling is solutions to problems.

Every industry has basic problems of weight, of durability, and of resistance to corrosion. And it so happens that nature put into the metal, Aluminum, certain characteristics which are the natural solution to many of these problems.

So, since 1888, when Aluminum sold for $8 a pound, we have devoted our energies and our resources to three basic objectives: to make Aluminum lower in price; to make Aluminum stronger; and, chief of all, to show industry how to use it to the best advantage.

Because our emphasis has always been on methods of utilization, and because the results of our research in this direction have been made widely available, there has grown up in this country a great industry of individual fabricators of Aluminum. They represent sources of supply from which can be obtained most of the forms and shapes of metal needed.

Some industries are already using Aluminum almost to the full. Many others are just beginning to appreciate its possibilities. A few have yet to discover the economic benefits of this modern metal that is so light and yet so strong.

The time has come, we believe, for all industry to make a fresh start, via fundamentals. Every industry can find some of these fundamentals in Aluminum. ALUMINUM COMPANY OF AMERICA, PITTSBURGH.

Whole World Is Playground for This Group

Mrs. Merrill Coit Heads Party of Five.

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

With the world for a playground the next seven months, Mrs. Merrill Coit is about to enjoy an example of what Chesterton calls "the wild romance of geography."

On Tuesday Mrs. Coit, her three daughters, Eleanor, Elizabeth, and Celia, and Miss Ann Murray, whose home is in Washington, D. C., are leaving Chicago for Vancouver, B. C. There on Feb. 23 they will embark on the gleaming white Empress of Japan, flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet.

And from there on this wide, wide world will become a fascinating reality. Temple bells will ring in their ears. The soft chanting of bronze skinned dancers will lull them into pleasant reverie. They will listen to the splash of waters still more used to the Polynesian war canoe and the sturdy ships of merchant adventurers than the modern liner.

Moving south from Vancouver, their first port of call will be Honolulu, paradise of the mid-Pacific.

Well aware that various lands will have various appeal, Mrs. Coit and her young travelers are not circumscribing their adventure by a day by day itinerary. They are planning, however, to stay with the Empress of Japan through Yokohama, gateway to the orient and a monument to Japanese progress, Kobe, and Shanghai, to Hongkong.

Motor boats compete with native sampans and junks wallow in the wash of great ocean liners to give both occidental and oriental interest in the harbor at Hongkong An island and a British colony, the city itself rises out of the water, terrace by terrace, to its peak 1,800 feet above sea level. Ships dock across the harbor at Kowloon, but it's only a five minute ferry ride across to Hongkong and its famed botanical gardens, university, Queens road, and Causeway bay.

At Fanling, in new territory on the mainland which Great Britain holds on a 99 year lease, there is the best golf in the east. The Jocky club there is a second attraction for sportsmen.

Few travelers ever really understand China. Even days and weeks within its boundaries leave the ancient land almost as inscrutable as the faces on its Buddhas. But still the pagodas and palaces, the lotus ponds, the teeming cities and their people are a never ending drawing card.

At Hongkong the Coits and Miss Murray will board the Tilowa of the British Steam Navigation company for a leisurely cruise through the Malay straits around to Calcutta. For one of the most amazing sights of their whole journey, they will want to watch the fakirs in Calcutta. Cobras dance. Boys disappear into thin air. Keen edged swords are walked upon. Parlor tricks that not everyone wants to try.

The only overland trip of their whole journey will come between Calcutta and Bombay. In Bombay they will board the S. S. Strathaird for Port Said. Reaching Rome in the early fall, the party will reluctantly break up, with Mrs. Coit, Elizabeth, and Miss Murray returning to this country. Eleanor will remain in Rome to chaperon her younger sister, Celia, who will enter the Stella Viae convent.

Equally excited about faring forth to the orient are Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, who are entraining next Wednesday on a journey that has been planned for them by Thomas Cook. Mr. Carpenter is well versed in Chinese and Japanese customs and lore, for he has visited the far east before, but for Mrs. Carpenter the trip will be a new and thrilling experience.

They will sail from San Francisco a week from Saturday on the Matson liner Lurline. Arriving in Honolulu on the 28th, they will be greeted at the dock by the Walter Dillinghams, with their arms hung with lovely and fragrant leis. After a brief stopover with the Dillinghams, Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter will proceed by an N. Y. K. steamer to Yokohama and thence to Peiping, where they plan to live for many weeks in the handsome house of Col. and Mrs. Isaac Newell.

Peiping is three cities in one, the outer or Chinese, the inner or Tartar, and, right in the heart, the Purple Imperial palace of the Forbidden City. The Altar of Heaven leaves travelers breathless, but the most amazing sights of all are the summer palace and the great wall, already aged when Columbus discovered America. The wall is a 2,000 mile defense that guarded China from the northern hordes in ancient times.

In this workaday world set at a race horse tempo, it is always refreshing to find those who will spend 15 days instead of three to travel from Chicago to San Francisco. Willoughby G. Walling, the Arthur Dixons, the Edward Welles, and Mrs. Charles D. Adams are now enjoying the 5,500 mile sea trip from New York through the Caribbean and the Panama canal aboard the Santa Rosa of the Grace line. They will come in sight of the Golden Gate next Sunday.

All of those who have thought of the Panama Canal only in terms of millions of dollars and engineering triumphs are delighted to find it a fascinating, exotic region pulsating with life. Also thinking of the canal in terms of going from east to west, travelers are just as amazed to find that most of the time they're headed southeast in their passage. When they finally arrive at the Pacific they're no farther west than Pittsburgh.

About to embark on this same winter holiday with San Francisco as their destination are Mrs. William M. Collins and her daughter, Mrs. Robert J. Graf Jr. They will sail from New York Saturday on the Santa Elena.

For a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lawrence Stein [Marjorie Block] have chosen a cruise to the West Indies and the Caribbean. They have already gone east to embark Friday on the French Line steamer, the S. S. Lafayette. Other Chicagoans on this same boat who will be seeing Jamaica, Martinique, the birthplace of Josephine who became Napoleon's empress, Barbados and Trinidad are Judge J. M. Braude and Josef Staniewicz, Polish vice consul.

When the handsome Motorliner Kungsholm of the Swedish-American line leaves for the West Indies next Wednesday it will have aboard Mr. and Mrs. James C. Ames and Mrs. Ames' sister, Miss Helen V. Kendall, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hampden Winston, and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Waud. From New York will go Mrs. Germaine Ames Hall who is Mr. Ames' sister and John C. Brackenridge, Mrs. Winston's father.

Mrs. Willard W. Jaques is taking her son, Willard K. Jaques, and her daughter, Miss Alice Jaques, to the West Indies for three weeks. They are sailing Saturday on the S. S. Reliance of the Hamburg-American line.

Blocks Help a Child to Attain Muscular Skill

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

The young child who has only a few blocks, or blocks not properly sized and assorted in relation to each other, is not going to be an absorbed and enthusiastic block builder, because his material is not right. But if he has what he needs, his blocks are almost sure to become one of the most satisfying playthings he owns.

At different ages little children play differently with blocks. They rarely start by trying to represent anything they have seen. They must, like any artist or artisan get the "feel" of their medium, not only with their hands but with the muscles of their bodies. You can see as you watch them that handling blocks is a muscle activity. And children enjoy just the using of their muscles—this set of muscles in one kind of play, that set in another.

One thing, for instance, that they love to do when they're first beginning to play with blocks in quantity is to pile them up, sometimes in big masses.

Another use of them that you'll observe is the making of designs. At first the arrangement of blocks will be quite simple, but it will soon show balance and interesting form and increasing complexity.

Usually at first children do not feel any need of giving a name to what they have built, because they do not start with any idea of representing the world about them. But sometimes they or another child will see a resemblance and name it—"star" or "chair" or "train." But as their muscular skill increases and their experience widens they do begin to build what they have seen. And then, provided they have the right kind of blocks in sufficient number, their play with blocks becomes rich and varied.

Harriet Johnson mentions these things in her "Children in the Nursery School." She speaks of:

"The varied uses to which blocks may be put for very small children, and

"The way in which mere manipulation grows into accurate placing and a rhythm or balance that is really beautiful," and speaks of

"How early [in the child's life] individual differences are found in method and manner," and believes that we have

"Convincing proof that blocks are appropriate and profitable play material for children of a wide age range."

The subject of blocks for children will be continued tomorrow.

If you wish to have a carpenter cut your child's blocks, our Block leaflet will furnish dimensions. A stamped, self-addressed envelope will bring it to you.

High French Court Rules It Is Theft to Copy Style Designs

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The style creations of the big Paris mode houses are works of art and to copy them is equivalent to theft, according to a ruling of the French Supreme court today.

The judgment sentenced Mme. Suzanne Laniel, Paris dressmaker, to pay 400,000 francs damages to the famous fashion houses of Vionnet and Chanel, whose dress models she admitted reproducing for her customers.

The court's verdict said that dress models by reason of choice of colors, materials and their designing "partake the character of real works of art and therefore come under special legislation which forbids imitation and plagiarism by artists and writers."

This case was started in 1930 and the verdict has been confirmed in three courts.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

"Egad! Egad!"

I can just hear Dickens exclaiming thus, as I close my eyes and feature him watching "David Copperfield" coming to life on the screen!

BECAUSE the cinema version of the voluminous and beloved classic is something to egad about!

How on earth they did it I don't know—but they have kept the complicated, many-charactered story intact, and this not only without wearing you out BUT keeping your interest and sympathy alive. Hugh Walpole, brought over to adapt the tale, has kept complete faith with the author.

And so we meet David before his birth and follow the career of Dickens' "favorite child" along his life lane of many and tortuous turnings. Meeting, of course, by the way, David's beloved Peggotty, Mr. Barkis, who was willin'; Dan Peggotty, Mr. and Mrs. Micawber, Uriah Heep, Steerforth, Dora, Little Em'ly, and the myriad of others in the myriad-incidented production.

Freddie Bartholomew, who plays David as a child, is another infant prodigy. You will adore his eager, delicate little face and his delightful clipped English accent. He has several emotional scenes in which he wrings your heart and startles you by his grasp of what the situation demands. Frank Lawton, as David grown up, is splendid—and has an arresting resemblance to Freddie.

The outstanding performance is, probably, W. C. Fields' portrayal of Micawber. It is a rich and rare characterization. Edna May Oliver is grand as Aunt Betsy. Roland Young is clever as the slimy Uriah—though he plays the part with a twinkle that doesn't permit you to hate the cr'atur as much as you'd like to.

You will love Jessie Ralph as Nurse Peggotty. . . . And so it goes. Fay Chaldecott as Little Em'ly the child is another delightful elf. Madge Evans does well by the mature Em'ly.

Undoubtedly "David Copperfield," the picture, will find its warmest admirers among those who have read the book and who have been jealously anxious that the film should do it no slight. The picture's great length and necessarily slow pace may cause a certain type of audience to become restless.

"THE IRON DUKE."
Produced by Gaumont British.
Directed by Victor Saville.
Story by H. M. Harwood.
Presented at the Garrick theater.

THE CAST.

Duke of Wellington	George Arliss
Duchess of Wellington	Ellaline Terriss
Duchess of Angouleme	Gladys Cooper
Hill	A. E. Matthews
Louis XVIII	Allan Aynesworth
Lady Frances	Lesley Wareing
Bates	Emlyn Williams
Marshal Ney	Edmund Willard
Duchess of Richmond	Norma Varden
Uxbridge	Felix Aylmer
Castlereagh	Gerald Lawrence
Talleyrand	Gibb McLaughlin
Metternich	Farren Souter
Webster	Walter Sondes

The unbelievable has happened! I have seen George Arliss in a picture that I didn't like!

"The Iron Duke"—is Wellington and the action concerns his career during the periods between Napoleon's escape from Elba and the battle of Waterloo.

The film is long, talky, uninspiring, movie-studioish. The director was heavy handed. The supporting cast is mediocre.

As for Mr. Arliss—God love him!—NEVER, to my way of thinking, was a great actor more miscast than he is as the Duke of Wellington. A statesman, a gentleman—but a soldier—NO!

If this be heresy—heresy it is.

See you soon.

THE scene, as described by Walter B. Smith, is a faculty room at a law college. The dean, the registrar, numerous professors, lunch dishes and cigaret stubs are in evidence.

Wisecrack—Grad—Benefit—Disillusionment.

"He got an 'E' in wills, a 'D' in common law pleadings, and an 'E' in property four," answered the registrar. "He got a 'D' in torts, but [brightly] he got an 'A' in ethics."

"Ah," said the professor," a poor but honest lawyer."

SANDY and Binge can't go to the supper-dance, of course, so they are sending me instead. Just as Mrs. John Jay Abbott's Robin is using her as his emissary, and Mrs. John Root's new Scottie puppy is sending her. The party is the Valentine's day night "Have a Heart" supper-dance at the Urban room of the Congress hotel, for the benefit of the North Side Animal shelter. All the lucky dogs with homes and folks know that if they should get lost they have a chance of finding their homes again—or some other home at least, if a roof can be kept over the North Side Animal shelter at 5450 North Damen avenue. So Flit is sending Mrs. Paget Cady to the party, and Tammie is sending Burnett Shryock, and the other dog lovers in town are turning out for the affair.

Odette Myrtil will sing at the party because of her pet chow, which she has with her here in Chicago. Raymond Middleton, and Tamara, also of "Roberta," will appear, and Jack Heller is another dog lover who will sing a song at the party to help make the Shelter supper-dance a success.

THE Chicago Business Men's orchestra is rehersing "Valse Impromptu" for a future concert, in its rehersal room in the Lytton building. This is by way of explanation to the fact that one of the orchestra members, a violinist, went into a music store a few days ago, and asked for "Valse Impromptu."

"We have "Impromptu Waltz," suggested the salesman, indicating a popular piece of music. "That is probably the same thing."

The violinist drew himself up with dignity.

"My dear fellow, there is as much difference between "Valse Impromptu" and "Impromptu Waltz" as there is between Venetian blinds and a blind Venetian," he pointed out.

MABEL W. BINNER, superintendent of the Children's Memorial hospital, snatched two hours of a busy week to take her child to see "Snow White," the Junior League play at the Grand on Saturday mornings. She was pleased at being where no telephone could reach her for two hours, of being surrounded by a well-groomed cultured audience. She was shocked therefore when a child, sitting with his mother, watching the appearance of the prince on the stage, inquired his identity and the mother answered, in loud tones, "Oh, he falls for Snow White."

Business Men Give Concert Next Sunday

Symphony Will Play at Orchestra Hall.

BY JUDITH CASS.

BEFORE the death of George Lytton we used to hear and to write occasionally of the Chicago Business Men's orchestra, founded by him and one of his chief interests, but since he died a little over a year ago, we have heard little of it. This does not mean, however, that the orchestra is not flourishing, for it is and on next Sunday afternoon it will give a symphony concert in Orchestra hall.

Every Friday evening from the middle of September to the end of May, the 115 men who comprise the orchestra meet for rehersal on the 10th floor of the Lytton building. The public is invited to these rehersals so each of them really is an informal concert, but ten times each year the orchestra gives free concerts, usually in suburban districts at the invitation of local organizations that pay just for the transportation of the musical instruments.

Since the death of Mr. Lytton it has become necessary for the orchestra to finance itself, so to add to the funds obtained by membership dues next Sunday's concert was arranged. Some of the city's well known musical patrons have taken boxes and numerous luncheon parties have been planned to precede the concert.

Two Classes of Members.

There are two classes of membership—active members, limited to the players in the orchestra, and associate members, those interested in the organization. The active members come from many vocational directions; they are bankers, engineers, lawyers, dentists, salesmen, chemists, in fact, they represent practically all businesses and professions and although some are prominent in the life of the city and others follow more obscure vocations, they all are drawn together by their common interest in music.

The orchestra was started in 1917 by a group of twenty University club

Abbey Troupe Presents New Shiels Comedy

"GROGAN AND THE FERRET."
A comedy in three acts by George Shiels, given by the Abbey Theater company of Dublin in the Harris theater, Feb. 12, 1935.

THE CAST.

John Byrne	P. J. Carolan
Miss Hatty	Eileen Crowe
Felix Grogan	F. J. McCormick
Fred Byrne	Denis O'Dea
Mrs. Byrne	Maureen Delany
Blakes	Michael J. Dolan
Mr. Dobbin	Arthur Shields
Paddy Grogan	Barry Fitzgerald
Rose	May Craig

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

The first American performance of "Grogan and the Ferret," a comedy by George Shiels, was given by the Abbey Theater company last night. The play is a recent addition to the repertory; its Dublin première took place a few months before the start of the present tour. A week's acting in the home theater, a single performance in Toronto recently, and last night's staging in the Harris represent the complete history of the work up to date.

These facts are recited to explain a certain lack of the usual mellowness and certainty of touch in the interpretation. This performance did not represent the Abbey players at their best, for they have not had time to grow into the spirit of the piece and to reach their usual goal of complete identification with the characters.

The play itself, although rich in comic material, is not likely to find a permanent place in the Abbey's catalog. It is far inferior to the same author's "New Gossoon"; its story does not move, even with the leisurely drift that is characteristic of the Irish school of drama. Masses of dialog, quaintly phrased, fail to overcome the essential inertia of the composition. The theme seems like a dead weight which the verbal humor of the Abbey troupe cannot lift.

Grogan is a grim old shopkeeper who has been sold out by the sherif and is on the verge of pauperism. "The ferret" is his implacable enemy—a sly, malignant, spying spinster who lives next door and is constantly eavesdropping over the garden wall. The background of these and the minor characters is satire upon the meaner phases of Irish character—plotting, back biting, and cheating.

Mr. McCormick makes an interesting study of the bitter Grogan, and Miss Crowe's realization of the author's intent in her study of "the ferret" is admirable. Mr. Fitzgerald, whose achievements in eccentric character are bringing him a round of applause for his entrance in every play, appears as Grogan's avaricious and shifty brother, a small farmer much afraid of his wife.

The Abbey Players have canceled an engagement in another city in order to extend their stay in Chicago for a fourth week [Feb. 18-23]. They will not act in the Harris theater next Monday night, however, because of a contract to appear in the Union League club. Next week's repertory will contain "The Far-Off Hills," "The Playboy of the Western World," "The Plough and the Stars," "The New Gossoon," "Juno and the Paycock," "Grogan and the Ferret," and "Drama at Inish."

"The First Legion," a drama dealing with a community of Jesuit priests, is announced for an engagement in the Harris theater, opening March 4, as the fourth play in the American Theater society's subscription season. Emmet Lavery is the author. This work was staged in New York last fall with an all-male cast, including Bert Lytell, Charles Coburn, William Ingersoll, Whitford Kane, Pedro de Cordoba, Frankie Thomas, Philip Wood, Harland Tucker, Thomas Findlay, John Litell, and Harold Moulton. It had a run of several months on Broadway and has also prospered in Boston and Philadelphia.

Plain and Printed Dresses

Modest Prices Feature These Spring Clothes

Plain Skirts with Checked Jackets Smart.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Clothes collectors who operate on exceedingly modest budgets are pleased with a new shop in town. This shop is filled with grand new spring-ish looking suits, coats, and printed dresses as well as snappy blouses and some new dance dresses that will take your breath away.

All of the models are tagged with such reasonable and surprisingly low prices that even the most hardened shopper stops to invest.

Snappy two piece suits in all the high fashion checks and swanky tweed patterns are plentiful. There are plain skirts and checked jacket combines, short jackets that fit snugly around the ribs, with lots of well tailored pockets, that are among the smartest, slimmest affairs in town. They can be yours for a very moderate expenditure of your well planned clothes allowance.

There is also a good supply of dusty pink and powder blue dresses in soft silks and thin woolens. Simple daytime dresses of these two very popular and effective colors are being worn for bright color contrast under dark winter coats.

There's a white lace dance dress with wide revers. Laces in pastel shades, yellow, chartreuse, aquamarine blue, and pale pink fashion some delectable confections ready for all the parties of this month of holidays. These clothes are well worth an early shopping trip, especially if you need new things to revive your winter wardrobe and haven't lots of extra pennies to spend.

Fashion photograph . . . effective color contrast in two new dinner or dance models. The plain colored affair is of gingerbread brown net with tiny twinkling buttons marching down the front; the skirt is wide and full and the bodice is topped with a four layered collar of the net, piped in brown silk.

Through the Looking Glass

You'll remember that we wrote last week about a praiseworthy cream that effectively concealed such blemishes as birthmarks. Because we felt that the woman who made the cream might be self-conscious about it we didn't say that she herself has a livid discoloration all over one side of her face. It was her own problem that inspired her to create the cream.

We stopped back a few days ago to see her. When we inquired whether many women with birthmarks had been in we were astounded when she said, "No. They send their sisters, their children, or even their husbands, but they themselves are too self-conscious to come to me personally." We had then, a long and interesting talk on the psychological effect of such disfigurements.

This article is written directly to those of you who have birthmarks. We were positively thrilled by the woman we talked to. Her scar is really dreadful; her gallantry about it is tremendous. She feels that all women with such disfiguration make a horrible mistake in being self-conscious about them, in sitting back in their corners and giving themselves over completely to misery. So do we.

If you have a birthmark on your face or your neck it will be a wonderful experience to talk to this woman about it and to see what she does with hers. When we saw her first we had no idea that she had one; when she removed her makeup for us we were surprised at the extent over forehead, cheek, and eye of the blood red stain.

Tinkering at home with this cream for the first time isn't very satisfactory for the woman with a birthmark. She herself, used to the red stain, can't get used to the effacement of it—she actually feels that the makeup is conspicuous. If instead she will work the technique out with this woman, who is herself an inspiration, she'll solve her problem completely and find more happiness than she'd dreamed of.

● There is a certain kind of skin softness very much desired by discriminating women. It is a supple, flexible softness—a natural softness—and is often described as being much like a baby's skin.

When skin specialists were asked how to produce this softness, they said—"You cannot produce it with an artificial coating. In fact, you cannot feed the skin from the outside. This natural softness must come from the oil cells of the underskin."

A brilliant organic chemist, working on this problem in the Bauer & Black research laboratories, discovered a sensational new hand lotion (VELURE) . . . different from all others because it works from the inside, in Nature's way—stimulating the oil cells to send more of their precious softening oils to the outer skin.

By using Velure regularly women can now have this much-to-be desired "natural refreshing softness." They don't have to be satisfied with ordinary sticky hand lotions that give the skin an "artificial coating"—a varnish that might clog the pores.

Velure disappears quickly into the skin—does away with chapping or roughness. Use only two drops at a time on the back of each hand—after exposure to weather, water, work.

Buy this amazing new lotion at your drug or department store. Or send coupon for purse-size trial bottle, enough for 6 days.

Keep Away from Water

By Alice Campbell.

SYNOPSIS.

Sarah MacNeil, an American, calls on Miss Venables, who advertised in a London paper for a traveling companion, with requirements of an especial nature. Miss Venables is living under a mysterious fear and doesn't want to be left alone. She spends most of the year at Ste. Brigitte, a small resort in the south of France, where she expects to return soon. Miss Venables has consulted a detective regarding alarming communications she has been receiving, threatening her life.

INSTALMENT III.

THREATS OF DEATH.

"Do you mean threatening letters?" asked Sarah incredulously.

"Exactly," said Miss Venables. "My life is threatened. Now you see why I dread being alone. If these letters are to be taken seriously, at any moment I may be attacked. I realize how ridiculous that sounds, but without going into details just yet I may say that enough has happened to make me terrified of my own shadow."

"What can I do, when I've no idea what to guard against? It may be poison, accidentaly drowning, anything. I simply don't know, except that it will probably be made to look like chance. It's impossible to punish anonymous threats which can't be traced to their source. My one safeguard is to have some responsible person in close attendance, mainly, I admit, to give me confidence: and that someone will have to agree to certain rather tiresome conditions, such as occupying an adjoining room with the door open between, going with me to places of amusement and so on, never, in fact, leaving me alone. I might even on occasions ask her to taste the food I eat, or the wine I drink. Should you consider such a demand too fantastically absurd?"

She felt instantly at home with him.

"Understand," the other hastened to add, "there would be little or no danger attached to such a service. The mere fact that you stood ready to perform it would protect you from harm, for who would dare risk killing you instead of me? Probably I should never ask it—and in any case I shall expect to compensate you by paying a larger salary than is usual. Also you will not always be tied to my apron strings. A nephew of mine, to whom I am greatly attached, will be joining us at Ste. Brigitte—that is the small place to which I am returning—and during the two months he is there you will be comparatively free. Now! Does the prospect seem too dreadful?"

Sarah's gray-green eyes met the anxious brown ones with a smile. A look of sympathy passed between them.

"Not a bit dreadful," came the prompt reply. "If I hesitated, it was from astonishment, not alarm. I should adore to come to you. Do you really want me to?"

Miss Venables' voice held a quiver of relief as she answered simply, "Yes, Miss MacNeil, I knew instantly you were the sort of person who would suit me. You are frank, and I like frankness. There! Shall we regard it as settled?"

She held out her thin hand. Sarah clasped it warmly.

"Done, Miss Venables! I'm yours, body and soul—and if these devils, whoever they are, succeed in getting you, they'll have to get me first."

Sarah would have liked to find out a little more concerning the curious history of persecution, but as she sought to frame a discreet question or two a light tattoo beat upon the corridor door and an agreeable, easy-going masculine voice called, "What Ho? Am I allowed to barge in?"

"It's Harry, the nephew I spoke of," cried Miss Venables, her whole mien quickly irradiated with pleasure. "Don't on any account," she whispered, "mention the detective."

The door opened, and there strolled into the room a tall, broad-shouldered youth of about eight-and-twenty. Sarah recognized him as the original of the silver-framed photograph she had lately admired.

"Just thought I'd drop in on my way to the City," he explained with boyish diffidence, "but if I'm interrupting anything, I'll clear off."

"That was sweet of you, dear," replied Miss Venables, flushed with pleasure, suddenly grown young. "And you've chosen a good time, for now I can introduce you to Miss MacNeil, who is going to act as my companion. Only,"—here she lowered her voice—"In Ste. Brigitte we are not going to let people know she's my companion. You'll remember that, won't you? She's just a friend who's come with us."

"That won't be hard, will it?"

He had taken Sarah's hand in a warm grasp, and was smiling at her in so friendly a fashion that she felt instantly at home with him. He asked if she knew the part of the world they were bound for.

"A little," she told him. "Not actually Ste. Brigitte."

He made a wry face. "Fishing village, you know. Bit of a dump, not Monte Carlo, exactly, but I shouldn't wonder if we three could put some go into it. I'm jolly bucked you're coming. I say!" He brightened with an idea. "I do the thing by road. Why don't we all pack into the old 'bus and trundle along together? Just this once," he begged of his aunt. "I swear not to go above forty."

Sarah was a trifle disappointed that Miss Venables should refuse.

"No, Harry!" She laughed but held firm. "Long motor-journeys tire me, and it would tire you, too, if you weren't allowed to speed. We'll have plenty of jaunts when you arrive.

It was not difficult to see why the somewhat prim and repressed old maid had become girlish in her enthusiasm. Under the influence of this joyous and healthy young Englishman hardly anyone could have harbored morbid thoughts. His smile alone, enveloping all it touched with an impartial warmth like sunlight, had a singular power to dissipate gloom, even though, behind it, Sarah sensed something puzzled and solicitious which told her its owner realized his aunt's situation and was anxious to relieve it by keeping to a light note.

"How's Gracie?" he inquired. "Done up with yesterday's shopping?"

"Im afraid she it. Between ourselves your stepmother is in a far more serious state of health than she imagines. One reason I persuaded her to come to London with me was to take her to a good specialist, but now she's turned very stubborn. As a matter of fact, my own doctor is calling by this morning, and I've begged her to let him give her his opinion."

"Your doctor?" The nephew paused in the act of removing a cigaret from a thin gold case, and crinkled his brow inquiringly. "Whom have you got now?"

"I thought you knew. I'm referring to my Ste. Brigitte doctor, who has been spending a fortnight with his mother, and is going back today by the noon train. I've the utmost confidence in him. Indeed, I am determined to be under his treatment again."

"O, I see! The young chap."

"And what if Dr. Gilcrest is young?" said Miss Venables. "I like young doctors. They have modern ideas. And you can never say Dr. Gilcrest is lacking in experience. The Hyeres district is teeming with English people. S'sh! That's Dr. Gilcrest, now. I recognize his knock. Let him in, will you, dear?" To Sarah she whispered, "Don't go, Miss MacNeil. This is another person I should like you to meet—the only one, incidentally, who knows what I have told you, except for my nephew and yourself."

She showed scarcely less pleasure than that evoked by Harry's visit when, the door opening, a quiet, self-contained Englishman of about thirty entered and took her outstretched hand in an undemonstrative grasp. He was a shade less tall than Harry, on whom he now bestowed a casual, disinterested greeting. His figure was muscular and closely-knit, and though he had an air of breeding he possessed neither the good looks of the younger man nor the latter's genial, effortless charm of manner. His clothes, too, suffered by comparison with Harry's. The ancient tweeds he wore were no more than presentable, and yet, in common with his features and voice, they were unmistakably those of a gentleman.

WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER: If Once You Don't Succeed, Cry, Cry Again

Miss Harding Ends Vacation to Fight Suit

Hastens Home to Defend Custody of Daughter.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Ann Harding traveled only as far as Honolulu on the two months' rest trip to China and the South seas which her doctors had directed her to take. She got so lonesome for her daughter, Jane Bannister, 6 years old, and so heartsick about the litigation with Harry Bannister over the child's custody that she is hastening back here.

The reason so many studios are making pictures with English subjects—Dickens stories, "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Clive of India," "Bengal Lancer"—and with English casts—is that the money taken in from the market represented by Britain and its dominions now roughly approximates the amount which a picture can expect to take in as eventual net profit.

A scant British return on an American film may mean a scant profit on its world showing; the money taken in by theaters in this country approximates what the picture costs to produce in average cases. The market for American films in non-English speaking countries has been much restricted in recent years compared with the days of the silents.

Warner studio has a custom of tendering a $50 check to every employé whose family is visited by the stork. The $50 check to the family of Mr. and Mrs. George Barnes [Barnes is Joan Blondell's camera man and Joan is his wife] reached the Barneses several months after the advent of Norman Scott Barnes, but the day the check was given to Barnes was the same day the stork visited the family of one of the studio electricians for the sixth time. Barnes at once indorsed his and Joan's check to the electrician.

A lot of people in films are still howling because Grace Moore's performance in "One Night of Love," Norma Shearer's in "Barretts of Wimpole Street," and Claudette Colbert's in "It Happened One Night" were nominated for the year's best achievement by an actress, leaving Bette Davis no chance for the annual gold statuette of the Motion Picture academy for her work in "Of Human Bondage."

It doesn't take a lifetime of crystal gazing to get the hunch that little dark haired Helen Mack will one of these years be singled out for nomination for best actress achievement. No young contract player works any harder than Helen trying to perfect herself in the fine points of dramatic acting; it is a question if any other young actress takes her profession as seriously as Helen or glories as much as Helen in the sheer thrill of losing her own personality in a part.

Mary Jo Matthews was in a scene of "Mr. Inquisitive" at M.-G.-M when the hot arclights exploded a bottle of carbonated water. Pieces of flying glass cut Mary Jo's arm and her clothes.

A son has been born to Mrs. Lou Brock, wife of the director-producer of film musicals. Prior to her marriage in 1933 Mrs. Brock was Helen Collins, a society girl from Washington, D. C., and Helena, Mont., who wanted to become a movie actress. She played in a couple of pictures.

The current heart throb among girls on the movie sidelines—yes, and some of the big time actresses also—is Cesar Romero, now playing opposite Maureen O'Sullivan in the romance spot in George Arliss' "Richelieu" after just completing the part of Marlene Dietrich's lover in "The Devil Is a Woman."

Among the nominations for the Motion Picture academy's balloting to reward the outstanding film performances of the year are the following nominations in technical classes:

Best art direction, "Affairs of Cellini," "The Gay Divorcée," and "The Merry Widow."

Business Men Give Concert Next Sunday

Symphony Will Play at Orchestra Hall.

members who felt the desire "to fiddle, toot, and pluck" together. For two years these men pursued their hobby with more earnestness than artistic success, and then they were joined by George Lytton, whose genius for organization and management was well known in Chicago's financial and business circles.

Soon two other amateur orchestras were fused into the group and after a fairly satisfactory season the sixty nonprofessional musicians, all business men, decided to aspire to a full fledged symphony orchestra.

In 1921 with about eighty members the Chicago Business Men's orchestra was formed and was chartered by the state as a nonprofit corporation. George Lytton's father, Henry C. Lytton, is the honorary president and George Dasch is the conductor.

Margaret Farr, pianist, will be the soloist with the orchestra Sunday and among those who will have box parties are Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. Americus F. Callahan, Mrs. Dwight Ingram, Mrs. Malcolm S. Barton, Mrs. Dasch, Mrs. Avern B. Scolnik [Amy Neill], whose husband is president of the orchestra, Mrs. Royden ?. Keith, and Mrs. Hubert S. Conover, whose husband is vice president of the organization.

Chicago Junior league members will receive invitations today to what always is one of their most interesting affairs of each year, an exhibition of art arranged by the arts and interests committee. Twenty-one members of the league have contributed paintings, water colors, drawings, theater designs, photographs, and sculpture to the exhibition which will be held at the Casino from 11 to 7 o'clock next Tuesday.

Members may bring guests and it is urged that husbands be invited especially for the tea and program of dramatic readings by Dario Shindell that will be given in the late afternoon. Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., Mrs. Grant Laing, Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, Mrs. John L. Cochran, Miss Margot Atkin, and Mrs. Alfred Wolfe will pour.

Miss Alice Roullier, Miss Katherine Dudley, and John Storrs will have the difficult task of judging which pictures in the exhibition are entitled to blue, red, white, or yellow ribbons.

Next Saturday the league's Children's theater will give the last performance of the season of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the Grand Opera house, and then the cast will assemble in a private dining room of the College Inn for a farewell luncheon.

The junior Mrs. Winterbotham left yesterday for a week in New York, so Miss Virginia Hobart will take her place as the head dwarf in Saturday's performance and Mrs. Wilbur C. Smith will step into Miss Hobart's part of one of the other six dwarfs.

Miss Beth Coleman, the beautiful queen in the production, is leaving Saturday evening with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Coleman, for several months in Palm Beach.

Name Attendants for Field Wedding.

Because most of his groomsmen are Chicagoans, Lester B. Knight Jr., who will marry Miss Betty Field in Rye, N. Y., on March 5, will have his bachelor dinner here on Feb. 23 at the University club. The wedding will take place at 8:30 o'clock in the evening in Christ church and a reception will follow at the Apawamis Country club. Among those who will attend the dinner and then drive east with Mr. Knight on the 28th to usher at the wedding are Stewart Boal, Theodore Tieken, William Alden Little, and H. Hoyt Thompson.

Miss Lucy Jane Hedburg of Glencoe is the only bridesmaid from this part of the country, and she will be going east sooner than the ushers. The other attendants include Miss Sybil Dillman, the bride's cousin, who will be maid of honor; Miss Kate Thompson of Toledo; Miss Eleanor Stephenson of Brookline; Miss Ray Potter of Providence, and Miss Jane Bogardus of Swampscott, Mass., who with Miss Hedburg all were at Mount Vernon seminary with Miss Field; and Miss Louise Knight, a sister of the bridegroom.

Frederic Eaton Jr. of Philadelphia will serve his former Cornell roommate as best man, and the two other ushers will be Edmund A. Cobb of Ithaca and Norman Scott of Port Chester, N. Y.

Mr. Knight and his bride will go to Bermuda on their wedding trip and will be at home at 946 Michigan avenue, Evanston, after April 1.

Newton C. Kings Parents of Son.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton C. King [Doris Bokum] are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son early yesterday afternoon at the Passavant hospital. The infant is the Kings' first child and the first grandchild of Mr. and Mrs. Norris H. Bokum and of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin P. King.

William J. Lawlor III. and his mother, the former Mary Fortune, moved from the John B. Murphy hospital to the junior Lawlors' apartment at 1366 North Dearborn street on Monday. Young Master Lawlor's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Nolan [Jane Fortune] have moved into an apartment at 108 East Walton place from 900 North Michigan avenue, where they occupied Miss Joanna Fortune's apartment while she was in China.

Another very young man who is just at home from the hospital where he was born is Pierre Bouscaren IV., who with his mother, the former Chloe Watson, left the Evanston hospital recently. He and his parents are occupying the Hallett Thorne house in Winnetka.

Tell Engagement of Jeannette Crater.

Dr. and Mrs. Reuben Roy Davy of Evanston announce the engagement of their sister, Miss Jeannette Elizabeth Crater, to Stedman Willard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar A. Stevens of Kenilworth. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

The Kimball Salisburys have gone to Belleair, Fla., to remain until the first of April. His mother, Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury, is spending the winter in Daytona, Fla.

Mrs. William [illegible] will return Sunday from Pasadena. She has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King.

Mrs. Charles M. Hewitt and her niece, Mrs. Leslie S. Gordon, are leaving tomorrow for New York to sail Saturday for California via the Panama canal.

Letters from California telling of heavy rains there have caused Mrs. William A. Yager to postpone her trip west from week to week. When the Yagers return from California around April 1 they will drive through North and South Carolina to see all the lovely gardens in that part of the country.

Foreign Relations Luncheon Today.

The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations will hold a luncheon meeting today at 12:30 o'clock in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer house. Prince Hubertus Loewenstein will speak on "The Saar."

Charles Hackett will give the program at a musical and tea the Friends of Opera will hold today at 4 o'clock in the Drake hotel ballroom. In the absence of the chairman, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, who will not return with Mr. Meeker until the end of the week from a visit in Palm Beach, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, program chairman, will preside.

The Cordon club will hold a Valentine dinner this evening in the Fine Arts building. Marjorie Howard Morgan will give three groups of songs in costume following the dinner. She will be assisted by Mary Pearce Niemann, pianist, and Lucille Turner, violinist.

Miss Martha Murphy and Mrs. Louis Newton will be hostesses at a Valentine luncheon and bridge of the board of the Sunbeam league at noon today at the home of Mrs. Newton, 1222 Farwell avenue.

Gayety Intrigues Junior Girls

JUNIOR GIRL'S DRESS.

The pattern, No. 2794, comes in sizes 11, 13, 15, and 17 years.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Perfume history is interesting in the way it expresses woman of the different periods. I had occasion to have this reimpressed on me the other day. I was shown perfume containers, heavy ornate ones with contents, I am told, just as heavy and ornate at the time of use.

"That," said my informant, "was popular when women went in for heavy brocades and stuffy materials. When their idea of a daily dozen was a dozen courses to get away with at one sitting!"

"It wouldn't do at all today," he continued, "with modern women. They're too svelte and trim and refreshingly active, to say nothing of the simplicity with which they garb themselves! The woodsy odors, suggesting their outdoor activities, and the lighter, bouquet scents for their leisure hours are expressive of our women and times."

It's interesting to me to learn about the way certain light-scented toilet waters, for instance, have skyrocketed to popularity lately. Lavender, a characteristically English flower scent, is one of the leading favorites. And lilac odors.

They are touching up skin lotions with these light flower scents. You can get them in toilet waters, in preparations for the bath, and so on.

They tell me, too, that pine odors are very popular. The light sachets are being used to lend delicate fragrance to lingerie, gloves, and hankies. Much, much larger sales are being reported on this sort of thing. No doubt because prices are not so prohibitive on fine scents as they used to be.

It's an old feminine racket, this irresistible fragrance to intrigue the man. More power to it, say we, since a lovely scent does something for a gal that nothing else will do. And it's grand to know that you don't have to be on King Zog's matrimonial list of eligible millionairesses to be able to stir romantic emotions with the help of a come-hither odor.

BY MARY MEADE.

People don't compose odes to lima beans or wax lyrical over their charms. Still they eat them with gusto in most families, provided they are served up in some winning way. So without attempting any poetic descriptions we've decided that the lima bean is due for a little more notice while the winter's still with us.

Not the baby green limas, but the big, pale, puffy dried ones now occupy our attention. Their boasts aren't overly seductive in print, but still not without appeal. They appear well in simply made dishes, they've a certain distinction of flavor, they're filling and hearty, and, as such, an excellent basis for one-dish meals. What's more, they are a boon to the limited budget. Perhaps they don't sweep you off your feet in appreciative delight, but who's to deny them a pretty prominent place in late-winter menus, just on the strength of these claims?

Because of their obliging blandness of flavor lima beans seem to combine agreeably with more piquant foods, such as nippy cheese. One of the favorite lima dishes appears to be a casserole mixture which combines baked limas with a zestful cheese sauce and gay shreds of red pimento. If the American cheese version palls, give the needed dash to the surrounding cream sauce with grated Parmesan cheese instead.

Another casserole dish and one which is as new as it is good is:

Marshmallow Lima Beans.

3 cups cooked dried lima beans
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons brown sugar
¼ cup hot water
3 strips bacon
6 marshmallows

Mix the beans, salt, butter, and brown sugar in a buttered casserole and pour over them the hot water. Bake in a moderate oven for about 20 minutes. Then lay the bacon strips over the top, dot with the marshmallows, and return to the oven until the top is toasted to a puffy brownness.

Into a hearty mainstay-of-the-meal loaf and into a truly excellent salad the dependable lima now trudges, carrying its nice load of protein and alkaline reactions, those much sought after substances in our quest of balanced diets:

Lima Bean Loaf.

2 cups cooked dried lima beans
1 egg, well beaten
2 tablespoons catsup
1 cup cracker crums
1 small onion, minced fine
Salt and pepper

The choice rests with you as to whether or not the cooked beans will be left whole, coarsely mashed, or puréed for the loaf. After that decision is made, mix the beans with the crums, beaten egg, minced onion, and catsup, pack into a loaf pan, and bake for 25 minutes in a moderate oven. Bacon strips may be laid over the top of the loaf if you like:

Lima Salad.

1 cup cooked dried lima beans
2 tablespoons minced onion
⅓ cup diced pickled beets
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
French dressing
Worcestershire sauce

Mix the ingredients lightly with the French dressing, which has been given added zip with a dash of Worcestershire sauce. Chill and serve in lettuce cups as a main luncheon dish, accompanied perhaps by hot toasted sandwiches and a baked dessert.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

WHEN YOUR PARTNER HAS DOUBLED THE OPENING BID.

Should the next opponent pass such a double, your procedure is in most instances virtually automatic. You have been forced to bid; the responsibility is entirely your partner's. He cannot blame you for having a weak hand; he can only blame you if you misinform him by the bid that you select.

One. Bid a major suit if you can. If your partner has doubled a major suit opening bid, it is likely that he wants to know more than anything else whether you have four cards in the other major. If he doubled a minor suit, he wants to know in which major you have a four-card holding [or better], or in which of them you have the stronger [not less than four card] holding. When four or more in both majors, bid the longer first; if equal in length I usually bid hearts first. My partner can now take out in spades at the same level, and I can now show him spade support by a raise. He was prepared to get to two when he doubled; and early knowledge that I have eight cards in the majors may perhaps enable us to get to game. If you bid the spade first, it will be hard for your partner to give you another chance; shall he bid two spades, leaving you in the dark as to what he needs in your hand for you to rebid? Must you contribute high cards or must you fill out a second suit? Is that suit hearts, or the unbid minor suit?

Two. In either of these cases, it is sometimes a problem when one has a good five card minor suit and a poor four card major suit. If the major is as good as K J x x I will almost always bid it rather than the minor suit; however, if the major is inferior to this and the minor suit is as good as K Q 10 xx, there are good reasons for bidding the minor suit first when THE SUIT RANKINGS WILL SAVE A ROUND OF BIDDING.

You remember how we had to take the suit rankings into account in arranging our king-showing procedure after a three-bid; also that a four card minor suit is often bid originally in preference to a four card major in order to facilitate a one-over-one and acquire more information at the same low level of bidding. Apply the same principle here. The suit rankings are fixed and immutable; we must fit our procedure to them when they affect the bidding level.

Two Illustrations.

North, dealer, bids a club; East, your partner, doubles; South passes. You hold

Sp.—x x x Di.—K Q 10 x x
Hts.—Q x x x Cl.—x

If you bid a heart, and hearts suit your partner very well, he cannot realize the great strength you bring to him in the form of a strong side suit and a singleton. Unless his hand is unusually strong [whether defensive or aggressive in type] he may have to pass. However, if you bid a diamond first, and he can now bid a heart [either because hearts was his strategic suit from the start, or because with a four card heart suit and a distributional double he still knows the hand to be safe at one heart or two diamonds and wants to give you a chance to rebid] and when you now raise to two hearts, he knows that you have nine red cards and that your diamond suit is a good one—that it will furnish him with discards of losers and that it will be easy to set up for that purpose. If he has no more than

Sp.—A Q x Di.—x x x x
Hts.—A K x x Cl.—J x

or, of the other type,

Sp.—K Q x Di.—x x
Hts.—A J 10 9 x x Cl.—J x

you have game material—at least a finesse for it; the bidding would continue, if the opponents always pass; one diamond by you in reply to the double, one heart, two hearts by you, constructively, three hearts by the doubler, doubtful about the number of diamond losers, four hearts by you with your singleton diamond. If you had a doubleton diamond, you would pass three hearts; if your partner had a singleton diamond, he should be the one to go straight to four hearts over your raise to two. If he cannot bid a heart over your diamond, but bids spades, then the hand has no future and you pass.

Vain Dreaming of Golden Girl Can Dull Vision

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Every once in a while we get a request from a correspondent for the address of some celebrity whose name and picture are featured in the paper.

The most recent one requests name and address of an outstanding social light whose income runs into big figures. It's usually a moneyed individual who draws the interest. And young men figure mostly in this rich girl address seeking scheme.

We have reason to believe that these queries come from simple minded souls rather than from men of vicious character. Men intent on a kidnaping racket or a blackmailing scheme would hardly consult us. They have their own avenues of information. But the simple minded one should enlighten himself that his queries might just lead him into police clutches.

You young men who indulge your day dreams of the golden princess falling in love with you aren't grown up, that's all.

We'd suggest you come down to earth and let the girl next door or next door to her unroll her fairy charms for your benefit.

Tallulah Bankhead Takes Sadie Thompson Role in Play "Rain"

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—When Tallulah Bankhead, an unknown, honey-haired girl from Alabama, deserted Broadway to become the reigning star of the London stage, she was almost invariably compared with the late Jeanne Eagels.

Tonight Miss Bankhead appeared before a New York first night audience in the rôle which made Miss Eagels famous and which she, in turn, made historic. That was Sadie Thompson in "Rain."

Miss Bankhead was all that her admirers expected in her performance of the tense, thrilling drama of the south seas.

Stock Returns to Orchestra; Hess Is Soloist

Energetic Concert Stirs Their Audience.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Frederick Stock was back in command of the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday afternoon after his midwinter vacation, displaying a suntouched complexion such as some do not acquire even in summer, and comporting himself on the conductor's stand with a vitality to match.

In fact, it was an energetic concert throughout, for Myra Hess was remaining over from last week for her final engagement as piano soloist on this occasion. Mr. Stock and Miss Hess are capable of making uncommonly good music individually. When they appear together on the same program they are even less resistible.

It was a performance of a kind to remember, and it was received with the enthusiastic acclaim that showed it was reaching its target in the minds of the audience. Mr. Stock with Von Reznicek's Overture to "Donna Diana," Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, and his own concert arrangement of Wagner's "Siegfried" Finale, and, after the intermission, Miss Hess in the solo part of the Schumann Concerto did some unusual things, even for them.

There was a distinct spiritual resemblance between conductor and soloist. Both have unfailing poise and dignity in their music, both have striking gifts for putting warmth and color into their interpretations, while never for an instant losing sight of the architectural line of the composition.

This is the sort of music making that is both cerebral and emotional, something that one immediately admires and likes at the same time. The two do not always go together, but when they do the effect is instant. If one were to put it into words, one would be inclined to call it vitalized good sense in music. Mr. Stock and Miss Hess illustrated it in high power yesterday afternoon.

Chicago Bridge Team Stays in Running at National Tourney

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Four Aces and Ely Culbertson's team of four squeezed through with narrow victories today to enter the quarter-final round of the grand national contract bridge championship after a day of play in which all but two of the visiting regional teams were eliminated.

Teams from Washington, D. C., and Chicago were the only survivors of the eleven regional championship combinations.

The Four Aces, Oswald Jacoby, Sherman Stearns, Howard Schenken, Michael T. Gottlieb, and Richard L. Frey, defending champions, defeated the Louisville, Ky., team.

MONTREAL MAROONS WHIP BLACKHAWKS, 3-0

TWO SECTIONS TO SEE GOLDEN GLOVES BOUTS TONIGHT

WEST SIDE BOYS JOIN SOUTH IN PRELIMINARIES

Strong Field Battles at White City.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Big boys had held the center of the spotlight through another four hours of spectacular fighting. Heavyweight, light heavyweight, and middleweight aspirants for Golden Gloves honors had thrilled 2,000 spectators.

When the final bout ended, a record breaking original starting field of more than 500 had been reduced to 165 stout hearted, hard punching lads. Those surviving the early rounds of fighting include 77 novice division battlers and 88 in the open division.

More Bouts Tonight.

The fighting in the south section continues at White City tonight, when 50 battles will be decided in one ring, and at the same time the west section tournament will have its grand opening at the Community Recreation center, 4711 Madison street.

Fighting at both centers begins at 7 o'clock and the admission price is the same at both tournaments—60 cents plus the tax for any seat in the house.

While novice division boxers have furnished a great part of the entertainment in the south section meet during the first two nights of fighting many of the stars in the open division will start hammering away at one another tonight. The south section open division boxers shape up as the most formidable to strive for Golden Golves for several seasons. There doesn't seem to be a weak spot in the south section fighting ranks, from flyweights to heavyweights.

After tonight's fighting the south section boys will cool off for a few days and go back into action in the semi-final bouts one week from tomorrow night. Championships on the south side will be determined on Friday night, Feb. 22.

McKee Hits Hard.

A lad with a terrific punch was uncovered in the novice heavyweight division. His name is Henry McKee and he is a 200 pound colored lad who lives at 4949 Indiana avenue.

Henry's foe was Jim Evans from 1033 Franklin street, and Jim gave Henry quite a mauling in the first round and in the early stages of the second. Finally McKee jabbed with his left, wheeled Evans into a spin, then caught him on the chin with a devastating right.

It was a punch that would have brought down any fighter.

Mario Formentini from the Catholic Youth organization was the brightest star of the night. He scored two impressive victories in the novice featherweight ranks.

Early in the evening he whipped Raymond Di Guilio. He came back later and soundly trounced Ernest Burnett, a colored kid from the Nichols Athletic club.

C. Y. O. Fighters Win.

Formentini's two triumphs enabled the Catholic Youth Organization to pull out into a commanding lead for team honors in the south section meet. The C. Y. O. lads had scored 30 victories during the first two nights of fighting.

Jimmy Diamico was another sensational C. Y. O. performer. He scored two first round technical knockouts. He is also a featherweight.

Another knockout which brought everybody to their feet cheering came when Irving Richardson of the Pirates A. C. caught Ray Hennessy of the C. Y. O. on the point of the chin with a right that had traveled all the way from the shoe tops. Hennessy was counted out.

Alex Oskvarek Wins.

The flashiest scrapper from the Polish Youth organization to toss punches last night was the welterweight Alex Oskvarek. The crowd began to take notice of him after he had knocked out Walter Skiba of the South Chicago Y. M. C. A. in one round.

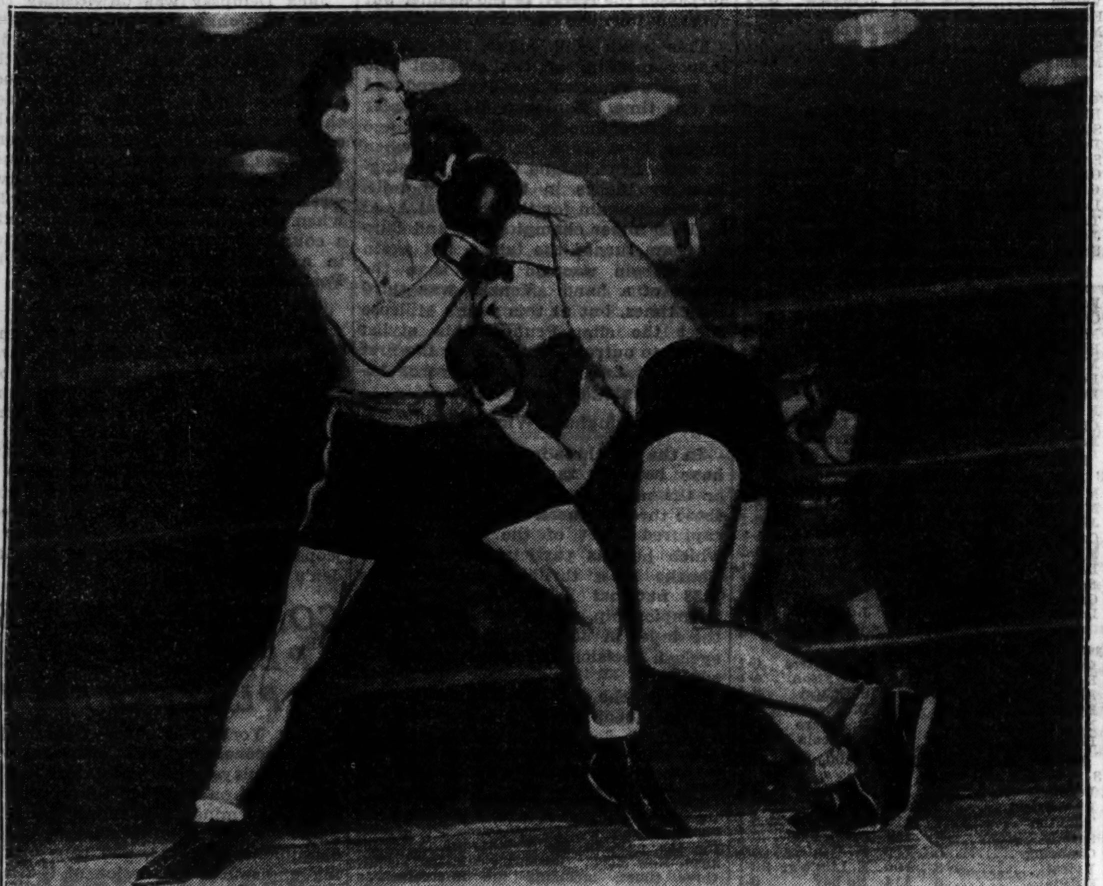
A FEW PUNCHES FROM THE FINISH



Leonard Mueller (left) turns aside one of the last rushes of the tiring Ward Stevans in a Golden Gloves bout last night at White City. Mueller, a middleweight, scored a technical knockout in the third round. This was the second night of fighting in the south section eliminations, which will be continued this evening. The west section fights will begin tonight.

Barney Ross Will Second His Two Brothers on West Side

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Six years ago a wiry, lithe, black haired Jewish lad from Chicago's near west side entered the second Golden Gloves tournament. Two months later he had won the intercity featherweight championship in New York's Madison Square Garden. Today that boy, Barney Ross, holds the world's lightweight professional championship.

Ross undoubtedly is the best fighter ever to graduate from amateur boxing's greatest tournament. He won the lightweight title from Tony Canzoneri in 1933, successfully defended it against Tony three months later, and last May he took Jimmy McLarnin's welterweight crown only to return it in another great fight in September. That Ross has become a great professional boxer was not the purpose of Golden Gloves. But it is true that Barney first gained experience by way of Golden Gloves and his actions in the professional ring are a credit to his lessons during his amateur days.

Now It's Barney's Brothers.

Tonight Barney's younger brothers, George and Sam Rasof [the family name is Rasofsky], are making their amateur boxing debut in the west section Golden Gloves tournament, which opens at the Community Recreation center, 4711 Madison street. And Barney will be there to second them. Indeed, their mother, Mrs. Sarah Rasofsky, who has seen all of Barney's bouts, would not consent to their appearance until Barney assured her he would be on hand. And with him will be Sam Pian and Issy Kline, Barney's manager and trainer.

The boys cajoled the mother into giving permission. They argued that they had the same right as Barney had six years ago, to test their skill in competition.

George, who closely resembles Barney in appearance and in his boxing, will fight in the 118 pound class. Sam is entered in the featherweight class.

West Sends 400.

But Barney's brothers will be only two of several hundred lads who tonight will start the Golden Gloves trail. The west section entry totals nearly 400, of which 75 per cent is in the novice division. Two rings will be used at the Community Recreation center.

All boxers assigned to tonight's west side bouts must report between 4 and 6 p. m. for medical examinations and to be weighed. Pairings will be made by lot not later than 6:30. Failure to report on time means elimination from the tournament. It is impossible to get into Golden Gloves after your "class" is closed at 6 o'clock.

HANLEY PREFERS COLLEGE POST; REJECTS PRO JOB

Boston, Mass., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The desire to remain in the college field led Dick Hanley, former Northwestern football coach, to reject an offer to direct the Boston Redskins' professional club next fall, he said tonight when he came here to visit his brother Pat, head coach at Boston university.

"I have nothing against professional football," Hanley said. "I think it will go along all right. But I have enjoyed my long connection with the college game and I think I have made some contributions to it. I'm going to remain identified with college men as long as I can."

Hanley said he turned down a contract offered by George Marshall, Redskins' president, in Washington last Sunday.

BOSTON DEFEATS TORONTO, 6 TO 5, BEFORE 16,000

Eddie Shore Leads Bruins to Overtime Victory.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Boston's battling Bruins came from behind four times to register a 6 to 5 overtime victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs tonight. More than 16,000 spectators were thrilled as their favorites battered their way into a first place divisional tie.

Boston's Eddie Shore played one of the greatest games of his career. He had a part in four goals, pulling the Bruins up to 2 to 3 with his third period tally. His first assist enabled Max Kaminsky to tie the score at 4 to 4 late in that session, and during the overtime he started the plays that Kaminsky employed to set the score at 5 all and Dit Clapper to register the deciding goal, made with less than two minutes remaining.

The last two Boston goals were made in 13 seconds, while Happy Day, the Leafs' captain, was in the penalty box.

RANGERS WIN, 5-1

St. Louis, Feb. 12.—(AP)—New York's Rangers tonight climaxed their meteoric rise in the National Hocky league when they moved into a tie for first place in the American division by defeating the St. Louis Eagles, 5 to 1. The Rangers completed their climb from last place to the top in just sixteen playing days. The New Yorkers' record shows one less defeat than either the Hawks or the Bruins.

The Rangers staged a third period rush that swept the Eagles off their feet. Cecil Dillon, right winger, led the attack with two goals after counting another in the opening period. Lineups:

SELF-INTERROGATION.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 12.—The Wake recently told of the terrific percentage against the race track better because of the mutuel "take," how on the face of the figures it was impossible to beat the races, although one might beat one race now and then. At that time we promised to submit to a self-interrogation on whether we personally tried to improve the breed of thoroughbreds. Here is a transcript:

Q.—Do you play the races?

Q.—Do you win in the course of a season?

Q.—Then why do you wager?

A.—For pleasure. In stake events and in races in which we have an opinion it's more interesting when a little bet is riding.

Q.—How much do you bet?

A.—Usually $2. Sometimes $5 or $10, which is a plunge, on a stake race. Of course, if one has a lucky day, and has "their" money, he sometimes is tempted to double up and try to "own the race track," as we term it.

A.—No. We think it better not to do so. While the amount would be small, it seems advisable not to leave the least ground for suspicion that one's report of such event be influenced by a wager.

A.—We don't know. Never thought it did or we would not bet.

A.—You remember a race much better. When we reported races daily we bet on nearly every race. It made us watch them more closely.

Q.—Did you always lose on a season?

Q.—Why was that?

A.—We always bet the same amount, usually $2. Never pressed the wager to get even. Watched horses closely, looking for one that was improving and might win at a price. Seldom played favorites in large fields. Studied charts carefully. Under this system, largest winning year was about $500. Largest losing year about $350. More losing than winning seasons, but never large amounts.

Q.—Does French Lane win on the season?

CONNELL TAKES GOALIES' LEAD FROM CHABOT

Rangers, Boston Tie Chicago for First.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Montreal Maroons, displaying their best form of the season, defeated the world champion Chicago Blackhawks, 3 to 0, in a National Hocky league game at the Forum tonight. The victory strengthened the Maroons' hold on second place in the international division, bringing them to within four games of the first place Toronto Maple Leafs. The Hawks, on the other hand, were plunged into a tie for first place in the American section with the Boston Bruins and New York Rangers, both of whom won tonight.

The Maroons' performance tonight stamped them as the best defensive team in the league, and enabled their goalie, Alex Connell, to take the lead among the league's nine goalies. Connell now has allowed only sixty-one goals to be scored on him, while Lorne Chabot of the Hawks, who led until tonight, has permitted sixty-three.

Red Wings Next Foe.

The Maroons scored once in each period, and it was only Chabot's individual work which prevented them from scoring at least four more times after Montreal forwards had broken through the Chicago defense. Hooley Smith, veteran Maroon center, scored in the first and second periods and Cyclone Wentworth, one time Blackhawk captain, produced the third Montreal goal in the final period.

The Blackhawks left for Detroit after the game to meet the Red Wings there on Thursday night, after which they will return to Chicago to meet Boston at the Stadium on Sunday night.

At the start of the game Morenz took Gottselig's pass to burn a hard shot that bounced off Connell's pads. Lionel Conacher, in attempting to clear, almost knocked the puck into his own net. Smith eased through the Chicago rear guard alone and had only Chabot to beat, but the lanky net minder kicked out his corner drive.

Robinson Stops Thompson.

Paul Thompson took Doc Romnes' pass and tried to jam the rubber past Connell into the corner, but he was checked by Earl Robinson. Levinsky burned a shot at Connell that the Maroon goal keeper barely got his hand to. Chabot made a nice save when Russ Blinco swept in to drive a hard backhand at the corner. Louis Trudel was close, but he drove over the top of the net. Johnny Gottselig's bullet drive from just inside the blue line was dead on and Connell just got his stick to it in time.

The Maroons went into the lead close to the fifteen minute mark on a gang play, with Hooley Smith jamming the rubber home after several quick passes. Baldy Northcott and Jimmy Ward both figured in the play.

Smith Just Misses.

Hooley Smith faked a pass to Ward and burned a hard shot at Chabot and the puck caromed off Coulter's skate to miss the corner by inches. Gracie lost his stick and was waved to the bastile when he went after the puck with his skates.

Hooley Smith got his second goal of the night at the six minute mark on a beautiful solo play, slipping between Burke and Coulter to draw Chabot out and shove home the puck while the Chicago goalie was off balance. The officials gave Northcott an assist.

Smith was through alone, but Chabot made a beautiful diving save to rob the veteran Maroon of an almost certain goal. Levinsky tried a lone rush, but his effort ended in the corner.

Marker fed Bob Gracie with a perfect pass and only close checking by Coulter saved a goal. Kendall shot wide on a long drive from the blue line. Cook missed the puck when he tried to slam in a pass from Kendall. Wentworth then sped in to pick up Earl Robinson's rebound and rap it home to give the Maroons a three goal lead.

Cain teamed with Blinco and Chabot made a fine save of the former's hard drive. Smith sent Bill Miller in close with a perfect pass and Chabot made another nice save. March sent a perfect pass across the mouth of the Maroon net, but the Hawks were too closely covered and the puck went astray.

More Fighters Check in for Stadium Show

Roy Lazar, New York heavyweight; Paul Lee, Indianapolis, Ind., featherweight; Bobby Matthews, Paducah, Ky., middleweight, and Joe Vignale, New York junior welterweight, were among the boxers who arrived yesterday to finish drills for matches in the boxing carnival at Chicago Stadium Friday. Lazar meets Joe Jorden of Memphis, Tenn., Lee clashes with Mike Belloise of New York, Matthews hooks up with Chuck Heffner of Denver, Colo., and Vignale is paired with Fred Chynoweth of Manitowoc, Wis. These boys will be contestants in four of the ten bouts set for six rounds each on the program.

Eddie Hogan, Waterbury, Conn., heavyweight, sparred two rounds yesterday at Trafton's gymnasium for his contest with Johnny Pacek, Chicago. Others who worked out there yesterday included Eddie Carroll, Ottawa, Ont., and Geno Salvatore, La Salle, Ill., who clash in a lightweight bout.

Solly Dukelsky, Chicago middleweight, will leave for St. Paul Friday to finish training for a ten round bout there next Tuesday with Frank Battaglia. . . . Jimmy Christy, Catholic Youth organization featherweight, probably will remain on the Pacific coast until spring. . . . Negotiations are under way for a match between Christy and Alberto [Baby] Arizmendi at Mexico City. . . . Bob La Monte, who was unable to battle Don Lamanski at Marigold Gardens Monday because of illness, resumed workouts yesterday.

Barney Ross and his handlers made reservations yesterday to board an airplane at Municipal airport at 2:15 o'clock Sunday morning for Seattle, Wash., where Ross will defend his junior welterweight championship against Henry Woods Feb. 26. The champion yesterday engaged in his first hard drill by boxing three rounds with Phil McQuillen.

Jack Doyle, heavyweight who recently arrived from Ireland to engage in a series of encounters in this country, will stop off here today en route from New York to California. During the stopover Doyle's representatives will confer with James C. Mullen and Nate Lewis, Chicago Stadium comatchmakers, relative to a match at the Stadium.

Lee Ramage, San Diego, Cal., heavyweight, is due to reach Los Angeles Friday to complete his conditioning program for a ten round tussle with Joe Louis of Detroit Feb. 21. Louis has made a big impression in drills at Los Angeles, and as a result his managers have received numerous offers for other coast engagements. The latest came from Ora Forman, Oakland promoter, who is attempting to sign Joe for a contest with Patsy Perroni. The managers are holding these bids in abeyance. Louis is booked to battle a suitable opponent, probably Charley Retzlaff, at Chicago Stadium March 15. . . . Red Ferguson, Louisville, Ky., promoter, says he has closed a nontitle bout between Hayden [Young] Stuhley, Kewanee, Ill., and Teddy Yarosz, middleweight champion, for Derby eve, May 3. F. M.

LONDOS SIGNS TO MEET MARSHALL ON STADIUM MAT

Jim Londos will defend his wrestling title in the Chicago Stadium Feb. 28 against Everett Marshall of La Junta, Colo. The match was made yesterday by Jim Mullen and Nate Lewis, comatchmakers.

A substantial amount will be set aside from the receipts as a gift to the widow of the late John [Doc] Krone, veteran promoter, who died last week.

Chicagoan Reaches Dixie Golf Quarter Finals

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Edward Joyce of Chicago reached the quarter-final round of the Dixie amateur golf tournament by defeating Bob Odum, Garden City, N. Y., today, 2 and 1. E. H. Robinson of Aurora, Ill., was eliminated by Edward Olsen, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 1 up, in another match.

Club Hoosier Five Invades Irving Park Y Gym Tonight

Led by Bruno Matunas, Tony Kalina, and Stan Gohus, the Club Hoosiers of East Chicago will attempt to halt the winning streak of the Irving Park Y. M. C. A. heavyweights in the "Y" gymnasium tonight. The game starts at 9 o'clock. In the preliminary game the National Tea Company girls meet the Irving Park "Y" girls' five.

Resume Play Tonight in Indoor Tennis Meet

Star Runners to Compete in Baxter Mile

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The score is overwhelmingly in favor of Glenn Cunningham for the three year period of his indoor foot racing rivalry with Bill Bonthron and Gene Venzke, which will be renewed Saturday in the Baxter mile, feature of the annual New York Athletic club meet at Madison Square Garden.

The threat of a comeback by Bonthron as well as the fresh challenge of Venzke, who chased the Kansan to a new record of 4:11 a fortnight ago in the Wanamaker mile, has aroused sufficient interest to make this week's meet another sellout prospect.

Cunningham Is Favorite.

There can be no question of Cunningham's position as the favorite. His consistency over a three year stretch surpasses the record of the flashier but somewhat erratic Bonthron.

This week will make the fourth indoor meeting of the greatest trio of milers America has ever produced at one time. Bonthron did not enter the picture indoors until a year ago in the New York A. C. meet when he came from behind to beat Cunningham by inches in the Baxter mile. They met again for the National A. A. U. 1,500 meter championship and Cunningham turned the tables, but again the margin was no more than the width of a hand. Venzke was third both times, but at this year's Millrose meet the slim Pennsylvania stylist rallied to outrun Bonthron for the first time and finish barely six yards behind Cunningham.

Cunningham Wins Eight.

In the last three indoor seasons there have been 11 races at 1,500 meters or the mile involving at least two of these three runners. Cunningham has captured eight of the ten races in which he has participated, losing to Venzke in a thrilling finish to the 1933 national A. A. U. 1,500 meter championship, where both collapsed at the tape, in addition to dropping an eyelash decision to Bonthron last season.

1934—Cunningham defeated Venzke four times and split two races with Bonthron, setting a new world indoor record of 4:08.4 for the mile in the Knights of Columbus meet, New York. Bonthron defeated Venzke three times, including the intercollegiate 1,500 meters.

1935—Cunningham has defeated Venzke twice, Bonthron once, in mile races, in addition to beating Venzke once at 800 meters.

CAVALCADE STILL MAY BE STARTER IN $100,000 RACE

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—It's on again for Cavalcade—or at least he may be considered a possible starter in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap on Feb. 23. Howard Holmes, agent for the Brookmeade stable, received a telegram from Trainer Bob Smith this morning asking him to reengage Bobby Jones to ride Cavalcade. The boy will leave here for Los Angeles Thursday or Friday.

Silvio Coucci, who returned from Santa Anita recently, where he was to ride Twenty Grand in the rich stake, will make another trip to the coast, departing Friday by plane to handle Mrs. Payne Whitney's Peradventure in the Santa Anita Derby Friday. He is engaged to handle Ted Clark in the $100,000 race a week later. Coucci was the leading jocky with 27 winners at Santa Anita until he left for Hialeah Park.

REMOVE BROWN AS BOXING CZAR, GARDEN URGES

Blame Commissioner for Loss of $100,000.

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—An appeal to Gov. Herbert H. Lehman for the immediate removal of Bill Brown, state athletic commissioner, was instituted today by Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker of Madison Square Garden's boxing department and lifelong foe of the white haired czar of the ring sport in New York state.

An audit of the Garden's books shows that more than $100,000 has been lost since last June in boxing shows that either were postponed, canceled, or forbidden by Brown and his confrères, and these figures, Johnston says, will be presented to the governor.

Johnston also will point out to Gov. Lehman that boxing attendance has dropped off 50 per cent in New York state since Brown became a commissioner two and a half years ago, a condition which the matchmaker blames upon the meddlesome regulations imposed upon the sport by Brown.

Clubs Turn to Wrestling.

Johnston has prepared a survey which shows that only 35 of the 71 fight clubs that were operating in New York state in the pre-Brown era are functioning today, and that only 11 of these feature boxing, while the others are showing wrestling to their patrons. More than $10,000 weekly in salaries of officials has thus been lost, and the employés of these closed clubs have suffered the loss of more than $10,000 in weekly wages, according to Johnston's tabulations.

Jack Dempsey was unwittingly the cause of Johnston's wail to Albany and the popular ex-champion will figure prominently in the petition to the governor. For Brown and his associates, Gen. John J. Phelan, commission chairman, and D. Walker Wear, who refused the Garden permission to employ Jack as referee of the postponed Art Lasky-Jimmy Braddock fight two weeks ago, touched off the dynamite when they allowed Dempsey to handle a couple of wrestlers for Jack Curley in a show last night sponsored by Postmaster General Jim Farley.

"Jumps for Farley."

"A word from Jim Farley and Brown jumps through the hoop," was Johnston's comment today. "Those political stooges on the boxing commission would be funny if they didn't cost the Garden so much money.

"Brown's arbitrary actions have cost the Garden more than $100,000 in the last eight months," Johnston continued, "and we are obliged to seek his removal from office because he is jeopardizing the interests of the Garden's stockholders.

COLUMBIA BEATS PENN, 30-23, AS PLAYERS FIGHT

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Amid scenes of wild disorder, with fighting players and spectators milling around at one end of the court, Columbia terminated a rough game tonight by upsetting Penn's defending champions, 30 to 23, and thus assuming undisputed possession of the leadership in the Eastern Intercollegiate league race.

Fifteen seconds from the end flaming tempers that had been fairly well controled got out of hand. Fists started to fly and in a flash spectators joined in the melée. Hardly had the police halted the proceedings when another incipient riot started in another section of the floor. That, too, finally was stopped, the court was cleared, and the last few seconds of the fray completed.

Angeles a native son who was hot around the ears said to Elmer Layden, coach of the Irish: "How is it with the reports that your men came out here, some on crutches, some on stretchers, some hollow chested, some pleading, 'Please don't take this little boy to be slaughtered out on the coast; let me die at home,' that those invalids got two touchdowns?"

"O," said Elmer coyly, "it was the climate. These boys recuperated over night in the invigorating California air." M. P. Kelly.

Leaving Home.

You were such a precious baby,
A cuddly little duff,
With bald head and big blue eyes,
I couldn't LOVE you enough.
You were the cutest little boy,
The hardest thing to tame,
You were the roughest in the block,
But I loved YOU all the same.

Then came the high school days,
You were full of football lore;
The brawn was greater than the brain,
But I LOVED you more and more.
Now you are away at college,
You are so big and strong;
With all this love stored up for you,
You simply can't go wrong.

SATRE CAPTURES FIRST PLACE IN U. S. SKI TEST

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Ottar Satre, who competed for Norway in the 1932 winter Olympic games, placed first today in the ski jumping test which opened the trials for the United States ski team for the 1936 Olympics. He now represents the Salisbury [Conn.] Outing club.

Satre made jumps of 187 and 185 feet on the Intervales 60 meter hill and earned a point total of 228.4. This gave him a margin of 16.2 points over the runnerup, Gunnar Oman of Chicago.

HAARLOW KEEPS LEAD IN BIG TEN WITH 112 POINTS

Must Spurt to Pass Reiff's Record of 167.

Bill Haarlow, University of Chicago's lanky forward, continues to lead the Big Ten conference individual race, but unless he goes on a scoring spree in the Maroons' next three games the tall sharpshooter will fail to approach the conference record of 167 established by Joe Reiff of Northwestern two years ago.

Haarlow now is on top with 112 points, having made 40 field goals and 32 free throws. Barko of Iowa is in second place, with 82 points, while one point behind the Hawkeye star is Whitlinger of Ohio State. Kessler of Purdue is fourth with 70. Individual scoring:

15 SELECTED FOR U. S. OLYMPICS BOBSLED SQUAD

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 12.—(AP)—A fifteen man bobsled squad, headed by Billy Fiske of New York, who piloted America's four man teams to victories in the 1928 and 1932 Olympics, was selected tonight to represent the United States in the 1936 Olympic games in Germany.

The squad was announced by J. Jay O'Brien, chairman of the American bobsled committee, after a five hour committee conference which followed the two man and four man trials run off on the Mount Vanhoevenberg run the last four days.

YALE DEFEATS MAROONS' MAT TEAM, 17 TO 11

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Yale won tonight's intersectional wrestling match with the University of Chicago, 17 to 11, after the Maroons had led, 11 to 6, with three matches remaining. Yale took the lead, 12 to 11, as the final event, the heavyweight event, began. Ham Love captured this by pinning Whiteside in two minutes.

Bob Kracke of the Maroons won the only other fall by throwing Walker in the 155 pound event. Yale won four matches by decision, while Chicago took two. Results:

118 POUNDS—Kinne, Yale, defeated Ware, decision.
135 POUNDS—Capt. Howard, Chicago, defeated Rawolle, decision.
145 POUNDS—Capt. Hull, Yale, defeated Gorman, decision.
155 POUNDS—Kracke, Chicago, threw Walker with key lock in 8:51.
165 POUNDS—Lindeke, Yale, defeated Block, decision.
175 POUNDS—Graham, Yale, defeated Pesek, decision.
HEAVYWEIGHT—Love, Yale, threw Whiteside with half-nelson and crotch in 2:40.

Oak Park High school's heavyweight team took the lead in the Suburban league by defeating Evanston, 28 to 25, yesterday. A rally in the last quarter enabled Oak Park to score its seventh league victory of the season.

Evanston led at the half, 11 to 9, and at the end of the third quarter held a 16 to 15 advantage. During the last six minutes Rose, a substitute Oak Park forward, sank three baskets.

The Oak Park lightweights also triumphed, defeating Evanston, 34 to 24, for their ninth consecutive victory. Despite the defeat Evanston remained in second place with seven victories and three defeats.

New Trier and Waukegan divided another league double-header. The Waukegan heavies, led by McNamara, who scored 10 points, won, 39 to 35, while the New Trier lights triumphed, 23 to 20. The lineups:

MOSTLY about DOGS

By Bob Becker

English Setters

There is reason for owners of English setters to be enthusiastic about their favorite breed. The setter has just about everything to make him an attractive, companionable dog. His long, silky coat, his expressive eyes, his spontaneity, his feathered tail, and his gracefulness easily win for him the description "beautiful dog" either in the field at work, in the bench show, or at home.

Every time I go quail hunting in the south and get into an old buckboard wagon with three or four setters I am impressed with this trait of the breed, one that makes him so attractive around the home. He has such a winning disposition, such a way of getting your favor and indulgence that it is hard to resist him. If there is any dog that has a wheedling way with him—it's the English setter. Not many of us who like dogs can resist this fellow. Before you know it a setter has won you over with his wiles and personality.

The setter is a working dog, one that the sportsmen of the country like and use for finding and pointing upland game. To those of us who like upland game hunting the setter always is associated with autumn days, brown woods, and whirring coveys of quail. Every time I see a stylish, wide going English setter in the field I am reminded of the long way that this breed has come down through the pages of history and what a different work the early setter had to do in England.

When the pointer came into England and gave (as it still does today!) keen rivalry to the setter, the aristocratic hunters of England kept the latter for the important sport of getting birds with a net. In former times it was customary to net birds before the use of firearms came in use. The setter was put into the fields to find a covey of birds, point them, and then crouch or "set" while the netters quietly went around the covey so that a net could be drawn. Of course, the birds flushed away from the dog and usually flew into the net. This was a common way of hunting birds in old England. Thus our handsome English setter which "set" game acquired the name of setter and has been known by this name ever since. Later on when the net was abandoned and wing shooting became popular among the English sportsmen the setter was put into the game fields to do what he is doing for upland game hunters today—finding and pointing coveys and single birds for the guns.

The English setter has, as a rule, a gentle disposition. That is one of the reasons many persons find them desirable companions around the house. Another feature of the dog is its affectionate nature. I have found the English type usually more docile than some of the sporting breeds. But, irrespective of his characteristics, the stunning appearance of the English setter is such that he easily belongs among the élite of the dog world.

INTERCITY CARD OF INDOOR AUTO RACES PLANNED

Chicago, St. Louis, and New York indoor auto racing promoters are working out an inter-city schedule which will begin soon.

Midwest Indoor Auto Racing association officials, who conduct the races at the 124th Artillery armory on Sunday nights, announce that Tony Williman, indoor champion, will head the Chicago team of two. Either Marshall Lewis or Ted Tetterton will be the other driver.

According to present plans the Chicago team will appear in New York at the Bronx coliseum next Wednesday night. Two New York drivers, probably Wild Bill Holmes and John [Bozo] Balus, will appear at the 124th armory Feb. 24. St. Louis will send its two stars to Chicago the next Sunday and a tri city meet is scheduled for Chicago later.

C. D. G. A. CADDY GROUP TO MEET AT C. A. A. TODAY

Ralph Baker, chairman of the caddy committee of the Chicago District Golf association, has called a meeting of the committee for today at the Chicago Athletic association at noon.

In addition to the caddy team and individual championship and the caddy masters' tournament, it is planned to have a championship for boys over 18 years. A winner will be determined in the north, west, and south sections, and the three winners play off on the same day as the caddy championship, Aug. 19, at the Westward-Ho Golf club. Last year's team championship was won by that club.

Malkov, Fischer Meet on Marigold Mat Tonight

Zack Malkov will wrestle Midget Fischer, light heavyweight title holder, in a championship match tonight at the Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace streets. The bout is scheduled for 90 minutes with a decision in one fall. The semi-windup brings together Lou Talaber and Charley Pearson in a 30 minute bout. Speedy Schaefer and Bunny Martin will meet for 30 minutes. Iron Man Ward faces Johnny Gacek and Jim Londes meets Eddie Flynn in other bouts.

Famous Dogs Retain Titles at New York

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Dr. Edward R. Cunniffe's Ben Edar Blaise, one of the outstanding Kerry blue terriers of all time, retained his supremacy in the breed at the Westminster Kennel club's fifty-ninth annual dog show here today.

Ben Edar opened the judging of the major classes by repeating his victory of last year. The champions got off on the same foot yesterday, when the Japanese spaniel champion, Nagaho V. Miniatur, repeated. The others, however, were unable to hold their titles.

Beats Old Rival.

The well formed little fellow drew a laugh from the spectators as he nodded his head as if in agreement when Judge George S. Thomas awarded the rosette to his handler, Ed Sayres. Ben Edar, who has lost only once for best of breed since the Fordham hospital surgeon brought him from England two years ago, was put up easily over Frances G. Day's Glounthane Hero, the dog which was responsible for that one defeat.

Winners Are New York Dogs.

The playful, handsome terrier, almost 6 years old, is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Neary of Astoria. All three of the dogs which have retained best of breed honors are from New York City, as the Japanese spaniel is owned by Mrs. E. H. Berendsohn of Brooklyn.

10 YACHTS START MIAMI-NASSAU 187 MILE RACE

Miami, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Favored by perfect weather, ten yachts under full dress of canvas tonight beat across the gulf stream toward the Bahamas in the second annual international Miami to Nassau sailing race. Their course lies over 187 nautical miles.

The A-Weigh, owned by Lawrence N. Balliere of Gibson Island, Md., was first across the line at the starting gun, but was quickly overhauled by the Vamarie. The Vamarie, owned by Vadim S. Makaroff of New York, won last year's event in corrected time of 36 hours, and was the favorite to repeat in class B this year. Class B is for yachts of 60 feet or more. Competing in this class were the 112 foot Azara, owned by Hugh M. Matheson of Miami, and the Esperanza of S. W. Parish of Miami Beach.

LOYOLA QUINTET BEGINS 2D ROAD TOUR TONIGHT

Loyola university's basketball team starts its second road invasion of the season tonight against Columbia college at Dubuque, Ia. Before the Ramblers return to Chicago they will play St. Ambrose college at Davenport, Ia., tomorrow night and St. Louis university at St. Louis on Saturday night.

Although Larry Furlong, regular forward, is nursing a bruised knee, he was one of the nine selected last night by Coach Sachs to make the trip. If he is not able to start, Edward Youngs or John Brennan will be elected. Capt. Joseph Schuessler, Marvin Colen, Edward Murray, Edward Calihan, Robert Haskins, and William Lang are others who left last night.

Loyola is favored over Columbia tonight, but will meet St. Ambrose and St. Louis as the underdog. St. Ambrose, the only college team in Iowa undefeated this season, won a 22 to 16 victory over Loyola here before the holidays.

Cubs and Sox Players to See Fonseca Movie

Several members of the Chicago Cubs and White Sox teams will attend the baseball show at the Chicago Athletic association gymnasium Saturday night. Lew Fonseca, former manager of the White Sox, will present the American league movie, "Play Ball."

Gehrig Due in U. S. Today for Contract Talk

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Another of baseball's world tourists comes home tomorrow to talk contract, with the arrival of Lou Gehrig, heir apparent to the Yankees' slugging throne, aboard the Berengaria.

Gehrig, who hasn't missed a pennant season or world's series game with the Yankees since 1925, may be asked to sign a long term contract at an increase in salary. Gehrig's two year agreement, ending last season, was believed to call for $23,000 annually.

Gehrig was batting champion of the American league for 1934 with a mark of .363 and led both big leagues in home runs with 49.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Sacramento Coast league baseball club announced today Raymond Berres, second string catcher for the Brooklyn National league club last season, has been sent to Sacramento on option.

Valparaiso Is Beaten, 60-28, by De Paul Five

De Paul university ran up its highest score of the season last night in routing Valparaiso university, 60 to 28, at the De Paul gym for its twelfth victory in thirteen starts.

The entire De Paul squad was used. The reserves ran up a 25 to 16 score at the half. The regulars played the second half.

Walt Diduch, who started at center, scored eight baskets and six free throws in the 20 minutes he played in the first period.

Report Duquesne Boxers on Strike After Coach Quits

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Duquesne university boxing team was reported on a strike tonight in protest against the resignation of Johnny Napoleon, youthful coach.

Napoleon's resignation was accepted yesterday by the athletic board. Officials said he had permitted Chester Airhart, an end on Duquesne's varsity football squad, to box against Temple university last Saturday in Philadelphia.

This is in violation of a rule made by the student health director that varsity football men must not participate in boxing bouts, and led to the resignation, officials said.

Napoleon is a former Penn State star and intercollegiate champion. He said tonight he had heard of the reported strike, but that he did not think he would return to his post even if it is offered to him.

AMATEUR HOCKY BATTLE TOPS ICE SHOW TOMORROW

The first annual ice carnival sponsored by the West Side Kiwanis club tomorrow night at the Chicago Stadium will feature a Chicago amateur hocky league game between the Baby Ruths and the Boston Store. The program will start at 8 o'clock.

Many of America's outstanding figure, speed, fancy, and trick skaters will compete during the evening. Jack Smally who received an ovation last year at the Stadium show headed by Sonja Henie, will display his ability tomorrow night. Another ice act of prominence brings the pair skaters, Norval Baptie and Gladys Lamb, together.

Comedians on Program.

Comedy features will be presented by Bobby McLean of Chicago, Bobby Hearn of New York, Bill Lamb, brother of Gladys, and Horace C. Duke, who will present his tramp routine. Everett McGowen, a former world champion speed skater, also is on the program.

Local talent will appear at intervals, headed by Nancy Meyer, daughter of Dr. Carl Meyer, Cook county hospital head. Although only 8 years of age, she does spins and turns that show promise of her attaining national recognition.

Prep Skaters to Compete.

Relay races will take a prominent place, with five high schools—Austin, Tilden, Schurz, Crane, and Sullivan—competing in a special mile event. The Norwegian-American A. A., Bowler A. C., and Northwest Skating club will battle for city supremacy.

Another attraction will be an intercity two mile race with a picked squad of Chicago and Detroit speed skaters competing.

The Baby Ruths and Boston Store hocky teams are seeking national recognition and hope to represent the United States at the Olympic games in Germany next year. These two teams have met once this season, with the Baby Ruths winning, 2 to 1.

What other cigar of any price CAN MAKE THIS CLAIM AND PROVE IT?

Our claim is this . . . Bayuk PHILLIES has something that smokers like—and haven't found in any other cigar. We call it MELLOW FLAVOR. It's a mildness that has flavor and pleasing taste. And it comes only from ripe, long-filler Havana tobacco blended with choice Domestic.

No cigar—without fine mild Havana—can give you this MELLOW flavor. The Havana in PHILLIES is of the mildest grades grown in Cuba. And for 5c today you get the same quantity of it as when millions gladly paid 10c for the same cigar.

If you haven't smoked PHILLIES—why not make it your next cigar? We can promise you—in it's mellow flavor—a new and greater pleasure from smoking. Look for the box with the familiar blue strip on the lid.

BAYUK'S GUARANTEE

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (Familiarly known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Domestic and Havana long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

MOTHER'S ACTION MAY COST GIRL A MILLION DOLLARS

Chicago Heiress Denies Daughter's Claim.

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—The 7 year old daughter of Mrs. Virginia Randolph Harrison may lose nearly $1,000,000 because her mother denied her claim in favor of that of another child, a son.

MRS. VIRGINIA HARRISON.

In making the denial Mrs. Harrison, ex-wife of the late Christian Channing Gross, world war hero and diplomat, also denied the daughter's legitimacy.

The little girl is Anna Virginia. The son was Peter Christian, who died with his father in an automobile accident in 1933.

Papers Filed in Court.

This development is shown in papers on file today in Surrogate's court.

Intricate legal points combined with the fact the mother once formally denied that her daughter was the child of Gross explain the possible loss to the daughter of the big sum.

Thirteen years the story goes back, to the meeting of the Chicago heiress and the soldier in Algeria. They fell in love, were married, and returned to the United States, where he entered the diplomatic service. He was assigned to Paris.

Before the end of the year 1923 their first child, Peter Christian, was born. Then Mrs. Gross came into a fortune of more than $2,000,000. She divided her fortune with her husband. He set up a trust fund for himself. The next year another child, Barbara, was born.

Then Gross returned to the United States. Before he left he signed an agreement to turn back, as a special trust for the children, $250,000 of the money. Then a long legal battle started. A Chicago divorce was obtained in 1928. Gross was arrested for contempt of court for failure to execute the $250,000 trust. Then he made good.

Sues in Chicago.

In August, 1931, Gross brought suit in Chicago to determine the paternity of Anna Virginia.

She was born four months after the original divorce was obtained in 1928, and Gross said he did not even learn of her existence until three years after her birth. He did not deny being the father, but asked a legal determination.

The question was whether Anna was his child or the daughter of a Mexican artist, Marius de Zayas. A Chicago court ruled she was Gross' child, but was reversed, without reference to evidence, on the ground of lack of jurisdiction.

A year later Gross sued his ex-wife and De Zayas in France for damages. He lost.

On March 26, 1933, Gross was driving from Palm Beach to Miami with his father, mother and his two children, Peter and Barbara, when his car went off the road.

Gross, his mother, and the two children were killed.

Worth About $850,000.

Several weeks ago the trustees of the captain's estate, now about $850,000, went into the Surrogate's court to probate his will.

Under the terms of the will the money would go to his surviving children, and if none he was intestate, and so the fund would go to his collateral relatives—namely, his father and the estate of his mother, who survived him for a few hours. A special guardian was appointed for Anna Virginia.

Attorneys for Mrs. Gross immediately contended that the little boy, Peter, lived some minutes after his father died in the automobile wreck.

If their contention had been upheld Mrs. Gross would have inherited the trust as the heir of her son, Peter.

But after four volumes of testimony had been taken the referee accepted the view of the attorneys for Capt. Gross' father that no times of death could be definitly established.

Dr. Evan Evans Renamed to Olivet Institute Post

Dr. Evan Evans was reëlected president of the board of directors of Olivet institute, 1441 Cleveland avenue, at the annual meeting of the board yesterday. Dr. Norman B. Barr, superintendent of the institute, which serves 15,000 underprivileged families, reported that the attendance at the institute showed an increase of 50 per cent over that of the year previous.

Hold Inquest in Strangling of New Born Baby Today

An inquest will be held today in the death, apparently by strangling, of the new born baby of Miss Anna Kellner, 20 years old, 6137 South Meade avenue, a waitress. The baby's body was found Monday night in a dresser at the rear of the Marcus restaurant, 5748 West 65th street, where Miss Kellner worked. Police guarded her yesterday to prevent her threatened suicide.

Five Hurt as Street Car Slides Into One Ahead

A northbound Clark street car slid into the car ahead as it was discharging passengers at North avenue yesterday and injured five passengers, one seriously. Mrs. A. Baran, 41 years old, 6624 North Ashland avenue, suffered serious internal injuries. Michael Tracey, 1534 Rosemont avenue, motorman of the rear car, said his rail sanding apparatus apparently failed to work.

G. R. Scoville, Cambridge Cemetery Sexton, Is Dead

Cambridge, Ill., Feb. 12.—[Special.]—George Roswell Scoville, 73, who served as sexton of the Rosedale cemetery at Cambridge for twenty-three years, will be buried in that cemetery Thursday afternoon. Survivors include thirty-seven direct descendants.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: What a Man

DR. TYLER DEAD; EDUCATOR, SON OF EX-PRESIDENT

President Emeritus of William and Mary.

DR. LYON G. TYLER.

Dr. Tyler attained prominence on his own account as one of the foremost scholars of his day.

Unlike his father and grandfather, both governors of Virginia and constantly in the political and judicial life of the commonwealth, Dr. Tyler never sought public office except for his brief service in the Virginia legislature. He had prepared himself for a legal career, but he abandoned that after a few years to devote his life to education when he was elected president of William and Mary.

Elected president of the college in 1888, Dr. Tyler abandoned his legal practice and continued as head of the college until 1919. Upon his retirement to devote his energies to historical research and writing, he was made president emeritus.

Dr. Tyler was born at "Sherwood Forest," the Tyler estate in Charles City County, Va., in August, 1853. His father was President John Tyler and his mother, Julia Gardiner Tyler, second wife of the President. In 1878 Dr. Tyler married Annie E. Tucker. They had three children. His second wife, whom he married in 1923, was Sue Ruffin. Two sons were born to them.

PLANE'S FORCED LANDING LAID TO ICE UPON WINGS

The forced landing of the Chicago and Southern Airlines plane in Fox township, Kendall county, near Millbrook, Monday evening was caused by the sudden forming of ice on the wings and tail surfaces as the ship neared Chicago, it was determined yesterday by bureau of air commerce inspectors. The inspectors found that Pilot John Lynn had made "a beautiful landing." He set the brakes afterward, and because the ground was ice covered the plane slid through a hedge fence and a shallow ditch, knocking off the right side of the landing gear. Neither Lynn nor his one passenger were injured and they brought the mail into Chicago. The mishap was the first the line has had in more than eight months of operation, an extraordinary record, the inspectors said.

VENEER BROKER KILLS SELF IN OAK PARK HOME

Storm Charles Erie, 52 years old, a lumber and veneer broker, was found dead late yesterday in the basement of his home at 901 Forest avenue, Oak Park. Apparently he had killed himself by placing the muzzle of a shotgun to his head and pushing the trigger with a stick.

Members of the family told the Oak Park police that Erie had been despondent over financial reverses and ill health. He formerly had headquarters in Rockford, but in late months had been conducting his business from his home. He is survived by his widow, three sons and a daughter.

Poison Liquor Blamed for Lake County Death

A Lake county coroner's jury last night returned a verdict stating that the death of Bert Leonard, 55 years old, who died early yesterday at his home near Round Lake, was caused by poisonous liquor. Coroner John L. Taylor announced he would ask the state's attorney to investigate the source from which the liquor was obtained.

Policeman Shot in Bandit Fight Is Reported Gaining

Policeman Maurice Cronin, 28 years old, 3958 Arthington street, who was critically wounded Monday in a pistol battle with three bandits, was reported improving at the Mother Cabrini hospital yesterday. The robbers had held up the Samuel Cassel & Co. wholesale cigar store at 1423 South Halsted street and were fleeing with $3,000 when Cronin engaged in battle with them.

Gustav Johnson, Retired Chicago Policeman, Dies

Gustav Johnson, 69 years old, for 26 years a Chicago policeman, died last night in his home at 5344 North Paulina street. He retired on a pension nineteen years ago. Surviving are his wife, Alma, and three children, Doris, Arthur, and Thomas, a photographer for THE TRIBUNE.

Child Found Wandering Keeps Police Guessing

Norma Bradshaw, 7 years old, 805 East Marquette road, who was found wandering at 63d street and Ellis avenue early yesterday, kept the Woodlawn avenue police guessing as to her identity for several hours, then told where she lived and was taken home.

WOMAN, 99, DIES IN DOLTON, HER HOME 85 YEARS

House Upon Site of Father's Cabin.

Mrs. Wilhelmina Diekman died yesterday in her home at Dolton at the age of 99 years. She had lived there since coming from Germany at the age of 14 with her parents, Heinrich and Wilhelmina Osterhagen.

MRS. WILHELMINA DIEKMAN.

The Osterhagens crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel and made the long overland journey in a covered wagon. They settled on an 80 acre government grant in what is now Dolton. The house Mrs. Diekman lived in is on the original site of the log cabin her father built.

Wed to Fellow Settler.

She was married to Ernst Diekman, also a native of their old home in Germany, shortly after he arrived in Dolton in 1852. Eleven children were born to the couple. Six sons and three daughters survive.

At a recent birthday celebration for Mrs. Diekman the family gathering consisted of the nine children, thirty-seven grandchildren, thirty-one great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.

Enthusiastic Radio Fan.

Until a year and a half ago, when Mrs. Diekman became ill, she crocheted and read the Bible daily. She also was an enthusiastic radio fan, preferring international broadcasts.

The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Sand Ridge Methodist Episcopal church in Dolton. Burial will be in the Berger cemetery.

'KING OF CHEFS AND THE CHEF OF KINGS' DIES AT 89

MONTE CARLO, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Auguste Escoffier, 89, "the king of chefs and chef of kings," died here today in his little villa close to the sea.

It was Escoffier who created peach Melba, in honor of the great Australian operatic soprano, and Glace Sarah Bernhardt. He was chef to Napoleon III., King Edward VII., and, on occasion, to the former Kaiser Wilhelm.

Escoffier was the first chef ever to be awarded the Legion of Honor for his art, and more than 2,000 of the world's leading chefs learned that art in Escoffier's kitchens in London, Paris, and New York. At one time he supervised the cuisine in all the Ritz hotels, and he was head of the kitchens in the Savoy and Carlton hotels in London. He visited America in 1926.

DR. JAY F. PITTS DIES; KNOWN IN THEATER WORLD

Dr. Jay Frederick Pitts, for 35 years an eye, ear, nose, and throat specialist, died suddenly last night in the West Lake hospital. He was stricken with a heart attack in his home on North avenue, west of the Des Plaines river near the Maywood boundary. He was 56 years old.

Dr. Pitts was well known in the theatrical world, from which he drew many of his patients. He maintained offices at 64 West Randolph street in the Garrick theater building, formerly the old Schiller building. Among his patients were Eva Tanguay, Fay Templeton, De Wolf Hopper, Victor Moore.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Ireene Wicker's Singing Lady program may be the first American sponsored feature to be broadcast for English listeners in Europe. England does not permit commercial sponsorship of programs on its own stations. But certain stations on the continent do. One of these is the high powered Luxemburg station which blankets the British Isles. The Singing Lady's sponsors are thinking of recording her boardcasts with the view of interesting the English speaking folk in Battle Creek cereals by way of broadcasts from Luxemburg or some other continental station.

Ed Wynn bought a big boat recently with the view of ditching his horse and taking a long cruise this summer, according to a Broadway report. He plans to leave the air June 1 and spend several months in writing a show for production in the fall. He thought of making a trip through Panama around to the west coast while turning out the revue. But now word has reached him from the dock that his vessel will need expensive repairs before it is seaworthy. So he is undecided about the summer.

Lou Haddad, the bridge expert, will launch a program titled "Getting Acquainted with Contract" over NBC at 3:15 next Tuesday. The program is aimed at beginners and will be conducted in interview form with Bob Brown asking the questions. Seems like that's a poor hour for starters, though. Women, who know all about contract, might listen at that hour, but their husbands, who need help, would find an evening hour more suitable.

Jean McGregor, who plays Mrs. Terry Moran in "Today's Children," is to be married to Richard Miller, Kenosha business man, at Easter time. On the air she's been married for ten years. Jean is one of the most persistent of radio commuters. Daily she comes down from Kenosha to Chicago NBC studios.

Olga Albani, soloist on the Silken Strings program, will be guest of honor at the George Olsen-Ethel Shutta celebrity night party at College inn tonight. . . . Tony Wons will exchange places Sunday with Ulderico Marcelli, orchestra leader on the Wons program Sunday. Tony will wave the baton and Marcelli will dish up the philosophy. . . . Sunda Love, well known radio actress, will play the lead in Elmer Rice's "Judgment Day" opening at the Jewish People's institute tomorrow. . . . Irma Glen, NBC organist, is busy making movie shorts.

Mabel Albertson is out of the Phil Baker show and has been replaced by Estelle Jayne, who played with Baker in "Calling All Stars." Arthur Arbach, New York Daily News photographer, is the new dialect stooge on the show. Baker is endeavoring to buy "Calling All Stars," which flopped, and produce it himself with Beatrice Lillie as the proposed headliner.

G. A. Anderson's Funeral Tomorrow in St. Charles

Funeral services for Gustav Alfred Anderson, for 66 years a resident of St. Charles, who died Monday night in his home at 517 5th avenue, will be held tomorrow afternoon in the Bethlehem Lutheran church at St. Charles. Mr. Anderson was 77 years old. As a boy he was brought here from Sweden by his parents. Starting work in the Lundgren & Wilson furniture and dry goods house, a Fox river valley concern, he later became a partner. He retired in 1912. Surviving are his widow and three children.

STOCK LIABILITY IN CLOSED BANKS NETS ONLY 25%

Assessment $6,725,000; Collection $1,670,472.

Collection of stockholders' liability in Chicago's 21 closed national banks has netted only a little less than 25 cents per dollar owed in the course of receivership extending over nearly three years.

Assessments against stockholders aggregate $6,725,000, but only $1,670,472, or 24.84 per cent, has been collected. Charged off as uncollectible and a total loss is $416,056 or 6.2 per cent of the total liability. Much larger charge-offs are expected on the uncollected balance of $4,638,472.

A study of 21 banks shows that only six have recorded receipts of more than one-third of the liability. These are Albany Park, Austin, Calumet, Midland, Washington Park, and Woodlawn. The West Side Atlas approaches this figure.

Gets Less Than 10 Per Cent.

Two, the Douglas and South Ashland, show payment of less than 10 cents on the dollar owed in stock liability. The Peoples' National Bank & Trust Co., with the largest assessment in the group, has collected only $136,427, or less than 15 per cent.

The individual records follow:

ASSETS OF SUN LIFE INCREASE $41,000,000 IN 1934

Assets of the Sun Life Assurance company of Canada increased $41,000,000 in 1934, according to the forty-fifth annual report of the company, issued yesterday. Arthur B. Wood, president, stated new paid-for business amounted to over $236,000,000, an increase of approximately $20,000,000 over 1933. Cash in banks was approximately $20,000,000, and there was an excess income over all disbursements of more than $43,000,000.

The report said total income for 1934 was more than $159,000,000, with over $236,000,000 of new paid-for business in 1934. Assets now exceed $665,000,000, the reports say. During the year the bond account increased by more than $46,000,000. A profit of approximately $1,750,000 was realized on sales of securities.

Payments to policyholders amounted to more than $88,000,000, bringing the total paid since organization to $888,000,000.

Operating expenses were $1,000,000 less than in 1933, while surplus earned during the year amounted to $21,281,235, of which $13,219,504 has been paid or alloted in dividends to holders of participating policies. The sum of $8,062,664 has been applied to writing down securities and increasing reserves.

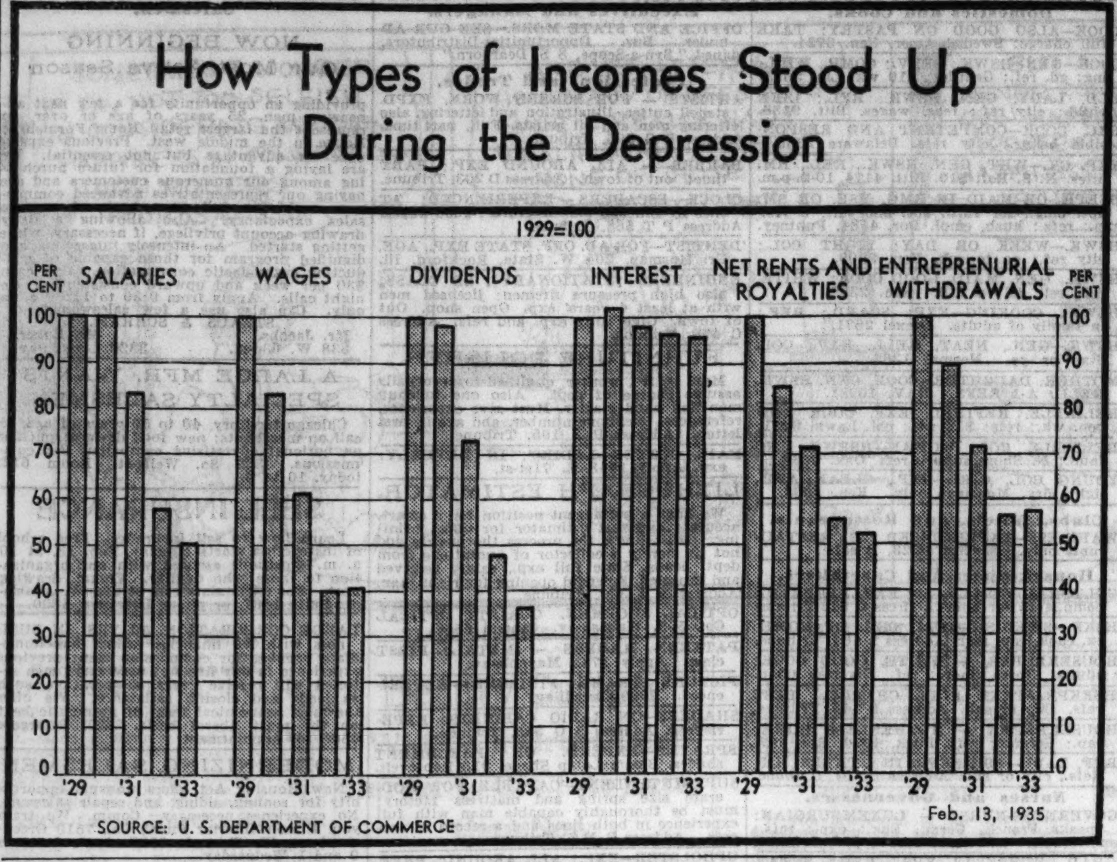
How Types of Incomes Stood Up During the Depression



Offer New Plan for Joint Land Bank Setup

A new plan for the liquidation of the assets of the Chicago Joint Stock Land bank, which has been in receivership since Oct. 1, 1932, was announced yesterday by a bondholders' protective committee headed by Robert Stevenson.

Under the plan, assets would be offered for sale by the receiver. The bondholders' committee would then bid $10,681,024 for the bonds, equal to 25 per cent of the principal amount, which would be reduced by dividends paid to bondholders by the receiver in addition to the first dividend of 30 per cent and by the book value of all assets withheld from the sale.

"Payment of an additional dividend of 10 per cent to bondholders, in accordance with the recently announced intention of the receiver for the Chicago Joint Stock Land bank, would thus automatically reduce the amount of the bid to 15 per cent of the principal amount of outstanding bonds," the committee explained.

Plan Income Debentures.

The committee says if it is the successful bidder on the sale, a corporation organized for the purpose would issue five year income debentures to bondholders to a total of 24 per cent of the principal amount of outstanding bonds, or, making an allowance for the 10 per cent dividend, to 14 per cent.

Mr. Stevenson explained last night that the reduction of 1 per cent was made at the suggestion of the land bank commissioner to provide an original margin of safety in the issue of the debentures.

In addition, ten shares of stock for each $1,000 bond would be issued, but these shares would be held by five voting trustees to insure continuity of management of the operation. Trustees would in turn issue voting trust certificates to bondholders.

All income debentures and voting trust certificates shall be distributed pro rata among participating bondholders. No income debentures or common stock are to be issued in addition to the amounts required to permit distribution on the basis required.

Assent Majority Flexible.

The assent of the holders of 90 per cent of the bonds of the bank, or of such a lesser percentage as the committee may fix with the approval of the land bank commissioner, is necessary if the plan is to become operative.

In effect the plan provides that holders of bonds are to get approximately 25 per cent of the remaining assets of the bank in the form of debentures, while any addition to this amount which might be secured in the liquidation of the assets would be distributed through the common stock. Interest on the debentures would be payable only if earned and would not be cumulative. The rate is not to exceed 4 per cent.

Dollar Follows Mixed Course in Money Market

The dollar closed unchanged in London yesterday at $4.88 3-16 to the pound. In Paris it lost 1½ centimes, closing at 15.20 francs [6.579 cents to the franc], and against the mark it rose from 40 to 40.02 cents.

MONTGOMERY WARD FISCAL YEAR SALES UP 32%; NEAR RECORD

Net sales of Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., for its fiscal year ended Jan. 1, 1935, were 32.42 per cent ahead of the preceding year and came within 2½ per cent of equaling the 1929 peak record.

January sales this year totaled $17,418,152, an increase of $2,639,398, or 17.86 per cent, over sales of $14,778,754 for January, 1934. During the last fiscal year every month scored substantial gains over the corresponding month of the preceding year.

These gains ranged from a low of 17.86 per cent for January, 1935, to as high as 62.6 per cent for March, 1934.

FOREIGN GRAIN PRICES ADVANCE IN DULL TRADING

With American grain markets closed for Lincoln's birthday speculative interest at Winnipeg was at a minimum yesterday with wheat prices holding within a range of ¼ cent per bushel.

The close was unchanged to ⅛ cent higher on wheat, while oats gained ½ to ⅝ cent; rye rose ⅛ to ¼ cent and barley was unchanged to ¼ cent per bushel higher. With the exception of a little barley sold via Vancouver foreign demand for Canadian grain was slow.

The shortest rice crop in Japan since 1913 has stimulated the demand for Australian wheat and a resumption of buying by the former country was responsible for an upturn of ⅜ to ½ cent per bushel in Liverpool at the opening.

However, continental demand was slow and the market reacted and finished ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher. Buenos Aires wheat and corn rose fractionally.

NEW HIGH MARK RECORDED HERE IN CATTLE PRICES

New high price levels were attained by cattle yesterday notwithstanding the influence of sluggish dressed beef markets and the evidence of growing consumer resistance to soaring meat prices. Yearling steers advanced to the $13.90 top, a new high for these weights since 1930. However, advances were confined to the "upper crust," others selling largely in line with the preceding session. In contrast to other cattle, the calf trade was again weak.

Hogs and lambs showed strength yesterday in face of the sluggishness reported in the wholesale markets for meats. Advances of 5 to 10 cents in swine put the general average back up to the highest spot since 1930, at $10.25, processing tax included, while top sales at $10.50 stood within 5 cents of the season's peak. Lambs recovered 10 to 25 cents more of the recent declines, the bulk of good to choice grades of slaughter stock selling at $8.75 to $9.

COURT STEALS SHOW BY SILENCE ON GOLD CLAUSE

Banking Bill Referred to Glass Committee.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Supreme court solemnly stole the show on Capitol hill today by merely withholding its gold decision and furnishing Washington with another exhausting anti-climax. It met, admitted a dozen attorneys to its bar, heard arguments, and adjourned until tomorrow without a mention of gold or even an intimation that it was aware of the unusual tension which surrounded it.

A more positive action on the monetary front, however, came when the administration's bill to tighten Washington control over the banking system was referred to a subcommittee headed by Senator Glass [Dem., Va.], to whom conservative opponents of the measure are looking for leadership.

Pin Hopes on New Dealers.

In permitting this to be done administration leaders abandoned a plan to steer the measure around the Virginian, counting upon a preponderance of New Deal sentiment within the subcommittee to keep the bill in conformity with administration objectives. Some nevertheless recalled the troubles encountered by the 4 billion 880 million dollar relief bill before the appropriations committee headed by Glass.

For a third time the capital had keyed itself up to an expectation that the nervously awaited "gold clause" decision would come today, Lincoln's birthday, when all domestic markets were closed.

Conjecture on the probable time of the decision turned to next Monday, a regular opinion day. If it does not come then it will be delayed an additional fortnight, under the present schedule of the court, for it has a recess of that length planned.

Open Hearing Planned.

Glass, obviously elated that the banking bill had been referred to his subcommittee, announced that "open and probably extended hearings" would be conducted. They will not begin, however, until the pending $4,880,000,000 work relief bill is disposed of.

It was assumed that one of the witnesses before the subcommittee would be Gov. Eccles of the federal reserve board, whose nomination has been referred to the group, at Glass' insistence.

The Virginian has questioned Eccles' qualifications for the job, and in addition has charged him with having broken a promise to go over the new banking measure with him in advance of its introduction.

Speaking in Columbus, O., today, Eccles praised the bill as placing control of monetary and credit policies in the hands of a board "which represents the interests not of any particular class or group of people but of the nation as a whole."

JANUARY SALES OF DEPARTMENT STORES RISE 4%

Preliminary department store sales figures show a decrease of more than the seasonal amount, according to a preliminary report on the results of 503 stores in 237 cities issued by the federal reserve board. The board's index, which makes allowance for differences in the number of business days and for usual seasonal changes, was 72 in January on the basis of the 1923-'25 average as 100, compared with 76 in December and 73 in November.

Compared with January, 1934, volume rose 4 per cent for all cities.

General Motors Foreign Sales Set January Record

New York, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Overseas sales of General Motors corporation cars and trucks from all sources in January totaled 19,167 units, an increase of 86 per cent over the same period in 1933 and the highest January sales ever recorded by the company.

Bankers Urged to Warn Public on Money Schemes

New York, Feb. 12.—[Special.]—Dangers of legislation and the need for educating the public as to the functions of trust institutions through increased advertising were stressed today at the sixteenth annual midwinter conference of the trust division of the American Bankers' association.

Speaking of the problems to be met in investing trust funds by the trust men of the future Dr. Harold Stonier, director of the Graduate School of Banking, said the theories and panaceas of the money doctors must be faced. Much of their doctrin rests upon the false assumption that money creates wealth, he said.

Warns of Money Theorists.

"There is a group of so-called experts now building up favor for the money theories of the radio priest," Dr. Stonier continued. "These money experts are probably sincere and, in a measure, harmless, but if such experts have control of a legislative body they are apt to become dangerous.

"Mounting governmental cost of all kinds, continuation of the unbalanced budget in city, state, and nation, the increase in number, form, and size of taxation schemes, slowness of the capital markets to move under the impact of fear as to the outcome of economic theories, all make the investment problem difficult today and complex for the trust men of tomorrow.

"As a result of recent banking legislation the administrative law has set up ways and means whereby bank officers may be dismissed by governmental action. This legislation regarding official personnel, I believe, is indicative of what may happen in the future."

Urges Informing Public.

People are naturally suspicious of things they do not understand and are easily led to accept as facts groundless rumors about such things, said James W. Allison, vice president and trust officer of the First and Merchants National bank, Richmond, Va., in discussing the need for telling the public of trust functions.

"Advertising is an accepted and approved method of improving both customer and public relations, and an abandonment, or even drastic reduction of trust advertising is believed to be false economy," he said. "We cannot command patronage, we must win it and hold it, first by rendering good trust service, second by establishing and maintaining with our trust customers a cordial relationship based on complete information and understanding, and third by making certain that the public at large knows our aims, our purposes, and our accomplishments."

Question Federal Examination.

The question whether bank officers shall be required to submit to a government examination to determine their qualifications was raised by Dr. Harold Stonier, director of the graduate school of banking, which will be opened next summer at Rutgers university. He was speaking of the growing power of the government in every direction.

"As a result of recent banking legislation, the administrative law has set up ways and means whereby bank officers may be dismissed by governmental action. This is indicative of what may happen in the future. It is a matter that trust men must consider."

Ohio Gets Bill Abrogating Gold Clause in Contracts

Columbus, O., Feb. 12.—(AP)—A state senator asked the legislature today to invalidate gold clauses in public and private contracts in Ohio. Senator Keith Lawrence of Cleveland introduced a bill to declare usurious any contracts containing gold clauses. He asked enactment of the measure as an emergency, asserting "it is desirable for the protection and economic interests of the great mass of citizens."

SENATE VOTES BROAD PROBE INTO AFFAIRS OF AMERICAN TELEPHONE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—An investigation into every phase of American Telephone and Telegraph company operations was voted today by the senate. Without a record ballot the senate approved and sent to the house a resolution by Chairman Wheeler of the interstate commerce committee to give the federal communications commission $750,000 and broad authority to inquire into the telephone company and all its affiliated corporations.

As a similar resolution has already been approved by a house committee, congress is expected to complete action on the measure and send it to the White House within a few days.

The proposed inquiry would be as broad in scope as the recently completed six year investigation of power companies by the federal trade commission. The subjects into which the commission would be directed to inquire relative to the company and its affiliates include:

The corporate and financial history and capital structure; intercompany service and contracts; reasons "for the failure generally to reduce telephone rates and charges during the years of declining prices"; effect of monopolistic control; mergers and consolidations; determination of whether there have been "writeups," and methods of competition.

The commission also would ascertain "whether or not the companies have sought through propaganda or the expenditure of money or the control of channels of publicity to influence or control public opinion, legislative or administrative action, or elections."

A $500 Loan

It takes about 10 cents a day to pay for a cash advance of $500 in the form of a one-year loan secured by comakers. That's only the price of a good cigar!

Around $1.47 a day (which you pay monthly) is the amount set aside to take care of both principal and cost—not much of a drain on the pocket-book.

We lend any amount from $50 to $500 to $5,000. Our charges are surprisingly low and the terms most liberal. Loans and installments are even less when loans are secured by collateral.

Bon Ami.

Answer: Bon Ami company was originally established in 1886. It turns out one product, a cleaning and polishing compound, produced in cake and powder form, sold under the name of the company.

Earnings reached their peak in 1929. Since then they have followed a gradual downward trend. For the first nine months of 1934 net income was $824,000, or $2.35 per class B share, against net of $849,000, or $2.31 per class B share on a larger capitalization, for the first nine months of 1933.

Net income in 1933 was $1,086,000, or $3.10 per class B share, against net of $1,092,000, or $2.98 per class B share [on a larger capitalization] for 1932. Net income in 1931 was $1,273,000, against $1,356,000 for 1930.

There is no funded debt. Capitalization consists of 87,000 shares of no par class A stock and 199,800 shares of no par class B. The A shares are entitled to noncumulative preferential dividends of $4 a year. After the B stock receives $2.50 in any one year all further distributions in that year are divided equally, class by class, between the A and B stocks. The A stock is not callable.

The B stock pays 50 cents a quarter regularly. An extra of 50 cents was paid Jan. 4, 1935. The A stock deserves a fairly good rating. The class B is medium grade and somewhat speculative.

Number of Stockholders.

Investors' Guide: I noticed several recent statements by leading corporations that their number of stockholders has increased and has done so right along through the depression. It would seem to me that during hard times people of the lower income bracket would sell their stocks because they don't get dividends on them and, also, because they have to buy food when they lose their jobs.—S. N.

Answer: The mere fact that the number of stockholders on a company's book has increased does not mean that the actual number of stockholders has increased.

During a time when stock prices are rising, speculation in stocks on margin increases. On a margin transaction a broker lends funds to the speculator and holds the stock purchased as security. This stock is listed on the corporation's books in the name of the broker. A broker who has fifty clients purchasing stock of the same corporation on margin, for instance, would be named on the corporation's stock transfer book only once, although he would represent fifty stockholders.

Discuss Cutten Dealings at Washington Parley

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The grain futures commission met today in the office of Secretary Wallace to discuss charges against Arthur W. Cutten, who was cited by Secretary Wallace for violation of the act intended to prevent manipulation of grain prices. The Chicago trader has resisted the charge and the meeting today was expected to decide if he will be barred from trading on all domestic grain exchanges.
